124 Indicted In Capital's Biggest War Upon Crime

5 Policemen Are Named After 4-Month Undercover Drive.

Accused Officers Released in Bail

Quick Trial Promised; Czars of Gambling Fall Into Snare.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

In a smashing blow at organized crime—greatest in the city's history—the District grand jury yesterday returned 35 gambling and conspiracy indictments naming 124 persons—including five Metropolitan policemen.

Climaxing a four-month undercover drive against racketeers and powerful gambling syndicates, the indictments, it was promised, will be followed by speedy arraignments and trials.

Although rumored for many weeks, the true bills against five members of the police department provided a sensational surprise. All but one of the officers named were attached to the Second Precinct. Accused of conspiracy to violate District gaming laws, the policemen are:

Accused as "Tipsters."

Shortly after the indictments were announced yesterday all five officers appeared at headquarters, where they were suspended and stripped of their equipment by Lieut. Floyd Truscott, who headed the investigation into alleged gambling connections. The accused men were released in bond of $1,000 each.

According to Samuel F. Beach, assistant United States attorney, the indicted policemen are believed to have acted as "tipsters" for local gamblers and accepted "protection" money.

In addition to the policemen named in gambling bills, Precinct Detective Luther C. Wise, of the Fourth Precinct, was indicted on a charge of extortion.

Wise, the indictment charges, compelled an uptown restaurant manager to pay "protection" money in order to conduct his wine and liquor business. He was taken as he accepted marked bills from the cafe man, it was reported.

65 Raids Made.

The gambling indictments contained the names of virtually every Washington "big time" racketeer and bookmaker associated with horse racing and "numbers" operations.

Word of the impending grand jury action spread like wildfire through Washington's underworld long before the indictments became official. Local gamblers and their henchmen—who were lucky enough to escape apprehension — have "folded up" and fled from the city, according to grapevine reports.

District police, attaches of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett's office, and agents of the Internal Revenue Department put their entire resources behind the gambling

Osa Johnson Saves Two Lost in Africa

New York, July 2 (AP).—Lost for a week in the African jungle near Nairobi, Kenya Colony, Philip Whitmarsh, millionaire Canadian gold miner, and his wife were rescued by the movie expedition headed by Mrs. Osa Johnson, the expedition radioed its offices here tonight.

The Whitmarshes, the message said, were flying to Nairobi to meet the expedition when their plane crashed in a forced landing. They were without food for four days until a searching party reached them.

The expedition is making a picture about the experiences of Livingstone and Stanley, the "lost" explorer, and the newspaperman who who found him.

Senate Committee Rejects Business Privilege, Insurance and Realty Rate Provisos; Tacks on Tydings' Price Rider.

By James D. Secrest.

A modified sales tax and a $1 land value levy were attached to the District revenue measure yesterday as a substitute for a business privilege tax by an insurgent Senate District Committee.

Over the objections of Chairman King, the committee in effect threw overboard the major money-raising provisions of the House bill and drafted a new tax measure.

Rejecting the business privilege tax, the insurance levy, and the 20-cent increase in the realty rate, the committee retained only the motor vehicle weight tax and the inheritance and estate levies minus the Dies amendment.

As a final gesture the committee tacked on the bill as a rider the Tydings price resale maintenance bill to nullify the Sherman anti-trust act with relation to price fixing by manufacturers. Only Senator King voted against this amendment.

He characterized the rider as "unfair and wholly improper" and served notice that he would make a motion to eliminate it on the Senate floor.

Because of the radical changes made in the House bill and the prospect of Senate consideration of the court reform bill next week, it appeared likely that the District bill may not be enacted into law by the July 15 deadline set by District officials.

Anticipating this delay, the Commisioners persuaded the committee to adopt an amendment permitting them to declare a 90-day moratorium on tax collections customarily made in September. The tax assessor, they said, would be unable

Rep. Maverick Defends C.I.O. In Fiery Debate

Texan Hits Union Critics; Bitter Speeches Force Adjournment.

The lid of restraint on House oratory, bubbling for weeks under the steaming pressure of denunciations of John L. Lewis and the C. I. O., blew completely off yesterday when Representative Maury Maverick, fire-breathing Texas Democrat, rose to defend the C. I. O. as "a valid American movement."

Debate became so intense that Speaker Bankhead forced the House into an adjournment until Tuesday noon.

Maverick pleaded for "calm heads and reasonable action, for patience, peace and kind thoughts," in closing an address in which he had attacked a previous denunciation of the C. I. O. by Representative Eugene Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, as "hysterical, highly provocative and calculated to bring bloodshed and disorder."

Cox and Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, who a few weeks ago offered to lead an armed band of "patriotic citizens" to the "defense" of Monroe, Mich., "against attacks by C. I. O. pickets," joined in belaboring Maverick.

Maverick, at the top of his colorful oratorical form, said:

"The old cry of communism is ripping through the air again . . . Unquestionably, two gigantic forces are at war with each other; the great industrialists who refuse to recognize organiezd labor or collective bargaining, and on the other

New York, July 2 (AP).—Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and his bride, the former Ethel duPont, hurried away from New York early this afternoon, Boston bound on their honeymoon, it was disclosed late today.

The bridegroom was driving their small sedan, and it was piled full of miscellaneous luggage.

Their presence in New York was disclosed only after their departure by a member of the staff of the hotel where the couple spent last night. The hotel staff was sworn to secrecy on their presence.

The couple disappeared after the wedding ceremony and reception at the duPont estate near Wilmington, Del., Wednesday.

Chicago Railway Crash Injures 35

Chicago, July 2 (AP).—The second section of the Northwestern Railroad's Ashland Limited smashed into the rear of the first section tonight in suburban Evanston, injuring about 35 passengers.

The list of injured included F. H. Crozier, 40, of 3206 Wisconsin avenue, Washington, D. C., possible internal injuries.

Philadelphia Paralyzed by Union Dispute

Philadelphia, July 2 (AP).—Publishers of Philadelphia and Camden, N. J., newspapers suspended publication tonight for the duration of "the emergency created by the general trucking strike." The publishers made their announcement after a conference with Mayor S. Davis Wilson.

Earlier today a "holiday" of indefinite length affecting members of American Federation of Labor truck driver unions in Philadelphia and Camden was called in protest against the Committee for Industrial Organization "invading the teamsters' movement."

The action affects taxicabs, motor trucks and horse-drawn vehicles. Milk deliveries have been halted.

Called by Council.

The teamsters' Joint Council of District No. 53 called the "general holiday" protesting what it said was Committee for Industrial Organization invasion of "the teamsters' movement." The holiday was effective at 4 p. m. (E. S. T.). Council leaders said 25,000 trucks were tied up.

The council announced tonight it would exempt milk and bread trucks carrying American Federation of Labor placards.

The strikes against the Freihofer and Ward baking companies, in effect the last two days, were continued, however.

The suspension announcement by the Philadelphia and Camden newspapers followed the printing of several editions by the Record and the Inquirer. No attempt to deliver or sell papers on the street was made.

Trucks Impeded.

The Record said it was sending all staff members home, excepting men in executive posts, until summoned to return. The Inquirer said its staff would remain on duty tonight, with instructions not to report after tonight until called.

Produce trucks were reported "impeded," but not entirely tied up; bakery, department store and other delivery trucks were stopped. Taxicabs were still running.

No disorder was reported.

Strike Vote Called.

Chicago, July 2.—Representatives of 14 "non-operating" railway labor organizations in the United States today authorized a strike vote among their 800,000 members.

Action was taken after the presidents of the 14 unions reported their conferences with railroad managements had failed to produce a satisfactory settlement of demands for a wage increase of 20 cents an hour and employment guarantees.

George M. Harrison, of Cincinnati, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Clerks and chairman of the negotiating committee, said strike ballots would be distributed as soon as they could be obtained from the printers, and that the results of the vote probably would be announced here within a month.

A statement issued by Harrison predicted "the employes will vote overwhelmingly in favor of a

U. S. Deficit For Year Is $2,707,000,000

$36,425,000,000 Debt Is Year's Increase of $2,646,000,000.

By Franklyn Waltman.

By disregarding the full statutory debt requirements laid down by Congress in 1920, the Treasury managed to hold the gross deficit for the 1937 fiscal year, which ended Tuesday down to $2,811,000,000, it reported yesterday.

Had the Treasury complied with the law and made the full contribution to the debt retirement fund, the gross deficit for the year would have been in excess of $3,111,000,000. The net deficit for the fiscal year—exclusive of debt retirement—was $2,707,000,000, or $150,000,000 greater than the President estimated last April.

This deficit, along with the program whereby the Treasury borrows money to buy gold (the gold sterilization program), brought the national debt up to $36,425,000,000, an increase of $2,646,000,000 since June 30, 1936. But this is not the whole story. During the year the Treasury spent $1,215,000,000 which it had borrowed in previous years and thus its general fund was decreased by that sum. Nor is that the whole story.

Capital Assets Spent.

During the year which ended May 31 the Treasury spent for current expenses $406,000,000 of its capital assets—that is, it spent money repaid to the Treasury by banks, railroads and other enterprises on account of loans previously made to them. Consequently at the end of the year there was a decrease of $406,000,000 in the Government's so-called net recoverable assets.

Thus to summarize, the Treasury at the close of the fiscal year which has just ended was worse off than at the beginning in the amount of approximately $4,287,000,000 as a result of three things: 1, increased indebtedness; 2, decreased funds in the cash box; 3, depletion in net recoverable assets. Offsetting this figure in part was the accumulation of $1,087,000,000 of inactive or sterilized gold.

The Treasury during the year collected $5,294,000,000, the second largest annual sum ever collected. Only the total receipts in 1920 were greater. The 1937 fiscal year receipts were $1,178,000,000 greater than in the previous year. They were $604,000,000 less than the President's estimate last January—but they were $70,000,000 greater than his estimate last April.

Expenses Reduced.

Expenditures for the year—after deduction for net credits in some of the lending agencies and exclusive of debt retirement—totaled $8,001,000,000 or $476,000,000 less than in the previous year. The total of expenditures was $220,000,000 greater than estimated by the President in April and was $145,000,000 greater than the estimate made by the Pres-

Mayo Researcher Isolates Infantile Paralysis Germ

Glendale, Calif., July 2 (AP).—The Glendale News-Press said today Dr. Edward Carl Rosenow, bacteriologist connected with the Mayo Foundation, had succeeded in isolating the germ causing infantile paralysis.

Dr. Rosenow first came to Los Angeles in 1934, during the infantile paralysis epidemic.

Many of his experiments, the newspaper said, were conducted at Los Angeles County Hospital, and he was assisted by Drs. E. T. Remmen and O. J. Sloan.

The newspaper said it is reasonable to assume in the near future a serum or antitoxin to combat infantile paralysis will be developed.

Russia Agrees To Evacuate Amur Islands

Danger on Manchukuo Border Believed Past; Tokyo Rejoices.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, July 2.—Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese Ambassador, announced tonight he had reached an agreement with the Soviet government which promised an early, peaceful settlement of the Russo-Japanese conflict on the Amur River.

He asserted Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff had promised Soviet troops would be evacuated from two disputed islands and more than 20 Soviet gunboats in that vicinity would be withdrawn. The two conferred for half an hour shortly before midnight.

If this promise is fulfilled, the Japanese envoy asserted, Japan will consider the incident closed satisfactorily.

Settlement along the lines indicated by Shigemitsu would end four days of tension arising from disputes over possession of the islands of Sennufu and Bolshoi in the Amur about 75 miles southeast of Blagoveshchensk.

Claim Gunboat Sunk.

Disagreement between Russia and Japan—and her protectorate, Manchukuo—over the islands and location of the boundary along the Amur led to an armed clash and Soviet casualties. The Japanese said one Russian gunboat was sunk near Sennufu, one beached and one chased away by artillery fire.

Shigemitsu said the Russian promise was given after the ambassador had officially informed Litvinoff there were no Japanese or Manchukuo gunboats concentrated in the vicinity of the disputed islands.

Soviet officials said a communique on the diplomats' meeting would be issued soon. It was expected to confirm at least the fact of marked improvement in the Russo-Japanese situation.

See Danger Past.

Diplomatic quarters here believed immediate danger had been removed from the Far Eastern situation unless the armies on either side decided to take things into their own hands. In Moscow there has long been a doubt as to how far Japan's army in Manchuria was under Tokyo's control.

The agreement announced by Shigemitsu tonight apparently left unsolved possession of the Amur Islands. The Moscow foreign office insisted Japan at least recognize the Soviet Union had a claim there. In such case, it was stated, Russia was willing to "begin negotiations on redemarcation of the frontier line along the Amur."

Informed Moscow observers believed the Soviet government was playing for time and had no desire to come to actual conflict with Japan. They asserted Russian military prestige had suffered from the recent executions of eight of the Red army's highest officers. They pointed to the dangerous European situation and asserted Russia was unlikely to court trouble on two fronts at once.

Japan Hails Evacuation.

Tokyo (Saturday), July 3 (AP).—Russia's agreement to evacuate her forces from the disputed Amur River islands was received today with intense relief throughout Japan. Cabinet ministers expressed their deepest satisfaction possible war had been averted. Newspapers flooded the streets with extras.

De Valera Lags In First Reports From Irish Polls

Dublin, July 2 (AP).—Meager reports from Cork on the Irish Free State's vote for president tonight gave William T. Cosgrave's opposition party a slight lead over President Eamon de Valera's government ranks.

Both De Valera and Cosgrave were re-elected to the Dail (Parliament). De Valera polled 14,012 votes—double that of his nearest opponent—in County Clare, while Cosgrave obtained 9,508 votes, about 1,000 over the nearest government candidate, in County Cork.

Final results were not expected until Tuesday or Wednesday, and return from the islands off Galway and Kerry may be delayed longer.

To be decided by the election were:

Whether De Valera would be re-elected for five years or replaced by Cosgrave, proponent of closer relations with Great Britain.

Whether a new constitution, changing the name of the Free State to "Eire" and cutting off British connections, would be accepted.

120 Accused of Working for Estonia, Poland; Mystery 'K' Slain.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, July 2.—A wholesale seizure of persons accused of espionage for foreign countries, in which more than 120 were taken and more than 70 "liquidated," was disclosed tonight in northwest Russia.

Leonid Zakovsky, chief of the secret police in the important Leningrad area, announced the roundup, mostly of Russians supposedly in the service of other countries.

(At least 188 others are known to have been killed by firing squads in Russia since the Soviet government began last August to stamp out alleged "Trotskyism," espionage and wrecking. There have been at least 131 executions in Far East; 16 died after the Leon Kameneff trial last August, 13 after the Karl Radek trial last January, 20 on charges of wrecking in Tiflis and 8 high army commanders, including Marhal M. N. Tukhachevsky, died for treason early this month.)

Zakovsky said more than 70 alleged spies and wreckers for the Estonian intelligence service were arrested and "liquidated."

("Liquidation" in Soviet terminology frequently means execution.)

A group of from 50 to 70 supposed agents for the Polish intelligence service, Zakovsky said, were "dispersed" in White Russia, the Soviet province bordering on Poland.

He referred to the seizure of two German engineers on espionage charges and announced the court martial and death of an unidentified Red army air commander who was accused of recruiting mechanics who tampered with planes to cause fatal crashes.

The supposed Estonian ring, Zakovsky wrote in the newspaper Komosomolskaya Pravda, had operated for four or five years in the Red army and Russian munitions factories before it was detected.

He identified the alleged leader only as "K," and said he believed

Court Change Foes Map Fight On Substitute

By Sidney Olson.

Without benefit of oratory, the Administration formally abandoned the President's court reorganization bill yesterday as Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, offered without flourishes an "amendment in the nature of a substitute bill" in the Senate.

Two "noncommittal" Senators who previously had not announced publicly their attitude toward the now defunct President's bill, at once declared themselves in favor of the substitute. These were Senators Allen J. Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, and Clyde L. Herring (Democrat), Iowa.

Another Senator, George L. Radcliffe (Democrat), Maryland, chose yesterday to announce his opposition to the old court bill. He took no position on the compromise measure.

The opposition leaders gleefully prepared to realign their ranks of 40-odd Senators against the new measure. None seemed even worried by Administration claims of 54 votes for the substitute bill. Their attitude was summed up in general by one Senator, speaking privately, who said:

"We'll debate this generally for a few weeks, and then the Administration will move to limit debate. We'll start the filibuster, and as soon as the leaders see that we mean it, they'll adjourn in the flick of an eyelash. We'll be trout-fishing by August 15."

The new bill, actually the creation months ago of Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, but touched up slightly by Senator Logan, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, the majority leader, and the Justice Department, provides, in brief:

A permanent Supreme Court of nine members.

Los Angeles, July 2.—Two amateur radio operators claimed to have picked up signals tonight on frequencies officially assigned to the plane of Amelia Earhart, missing in the Pacific on her world flight.

Walter McMenamy said he picked up weak signals on 6,210 kilocycles at 6 p. m. and heard the letters "L-A-T" which he took to mean latitude. The letters were followed by undecipherable figures.

The signals continued for some time.

At 8 p. m., Carl Pierson, chief engineer of the Patterson Radio Corporation, picked up similarly weak signals on 3,105 kilocycles. Miss Earhart's daytime frequency. He said they were erratic and undecipherable.

Both McMenamy and Pierson said the signals came from a hand-cranked generator. Miss Earhart carried one in her plane.

Honolulu, July 2 (AP).—A navy flying boat hopped off late tonight for Howland Island, 1,500 miles distant, to join the cutter Itasca in hunting for Amelia Earhart, many hours missing with her navigator, Fred Noonan, in mid-Pacific.

Honolulu, July 2.—Amelia Earhart, the world's best known aviatrix, and her navigator, Fred J. Noonan, were believed forced down at sea today in an $80,000 flying laboratory—somewhere near tiny Howland Island on a daring attempt to span the South Pacific.

The alarming silence of the plane's radio spurred into search the Coast Guard cutter Itasca from Howland Island when Miss Earhart's estimated gasoline deadline of 7 p. m. (Eastern standard time) passed without word.

Aviation authorities had varying estimates of how long the monoplane could remain afloat. At Los Angeles, Paul Mantz, an aviation associate, said he believed the craft could float "almost indefinitely."

In a message from the globe-girdling plane at 2:20 p. m. Miss Earhart said she had only a half hour's gasoline supply and had not sighted land. Earlier at 1:46 p. m. the plane was approximately 100 miles from the island.

Coast Guard headquarters in Washington was advised tonight that Miss Earhart was believed to have fallen into the Pacific shortly after 4 p. m.

A message from the cutter Itasca said:

By Robert C. Albright.

Less than 10 minutes of action between strike marchers and police in Chicago's bloody Memorial Day clash was re-enacted yesterday in 10 hours of testimony, newsreels and still pictures before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee.

It was the third and last day of dramatic investigation into the killing of 10 demonstrators, the shooting of 40 and the clubbing of others on a field adjoining a strike-bound Republic Steel plant.

Climax came at 7:45 o'clock last night when Chairman Robert M. La Follette called four high-ranking Chicago police officers to the stand after tales of "brutal" beating of pickets, grisly presentation of autopsy reports and first public showing of a suppressed news film.

Police Commissioner James P. Allman was first. On Wednesday he had declared the police action was justified. Last night, with most testimony and evidence in, La Follette asked him:

"Do you still approve of the conduct of your officers?"

"I do," replied Allman.

One by one, John C. Prendergast, chief of Chicago's uniformed police, Capt. James L. Mooney and Capt. Thomas Kilroy were asked the question.

"I stick to it, the same as the commissioner," said Prendergast. Mooney and Kilroy mildly echoed, "Yes, sir."

Only one made a further statement—Commissioner Allman.

"I would like to say this was not an orderly matter," said the commissioner. "It was a riot, and actually, war. It wasn't as clear as it is in this room. They didn't think anything over."

It was the only statement in defense of police in a day of lurid ac-

Second of the series of six spectacles entitled "Cavalcade of Scouting," in which all of the 27,000 boys encamped here will participate before the festival closes next Friday, last night's show had a cast of 4,400.

Opening with a tableau depicting the first Thanksgiving, the exhibition presented the boys as Gloucester fishermen in bright yellow "oilskins" made of crepe paper, as acrobats, gamesters, life-savers and boxers.

Approximately 10,000 nonparticipating Scouts—their turn will come later—as well as some 25,000 grown-ups who filled the arena grandstands and overflowed across the Monument's south slope, witnessed the mammoth demonstration. It was split into two acts, the New Englanders coming on first, followed by the 2,000 youths who

Tax Loophole Law Forecast At This Session

Incorporation of Yachts, Holding Companies to Be Hit.

By the Associated Press.

Members of the Congressional committee investigating alleged tax evasion and avoidance made plain last night that they will recommend legislation at this session to plug some of the loopholes in the Federal tax structure.

After hearing Treasury officials complete their story of tax reduction methods now employed, committee members indicated the legislation might be confined to such objectives as these:

1. Restricting the incorporation of yachts, estates and racing stables.
2. Limiting what they called "artificial" deductions for interest and losses.
3. Striking at the use of foreign insurance companies to claim deductions for interest on loans.
4. Tightening statutes applying to foreign and domestic personal holding companies, nonresident aliens, pension trusts and multiple family trusts.

Delay Controversial Issues.

More controversial issues, such as repeal or revision of the capital gains and losses tax, taxation in community property States, and allowances granted oil and mining companies for depletion of wells and mines, probably will not be taken up until Congress considers a general remodeling of the tax structure, it was said.

Discussion of pension trusts, community property and taxation of aliens ended Treasury testimony before the committee.

The question whether the group will subpena additional witnesses or begin drafting legislation at once is scheduled to be decided at an executive session Tuesday.

Undersecretary Roswell Magill repeated to the committee yesterday the Treasury's recommendation that families be treated as a tax unit.

Had husbands and wives in eight community property States been required to pay a single tax on their combined 1936 incomes, he said, the Government would have received $34,000,000 of additional revenue.

Astor Yacht Not Incorporated.

Magill said he had ascertained that the yacht Nourmahal, owned by Vincent Astor, had not been incorporated and its expenses had not been deducted from Astor's tax returns.

President Roosevelt has taken several fishing trips on the yacht.

Representative Crowther (Republican), New York, had asked Magill for information about it. Previously the committee had heard testimony that some yachts had been incorporated in schemes used by wealthy persons to reduce their taxes.

Magill's testimony came after Charles T. Russell, deputy commissioner of internal revenue, had recommended tightening of the pension trust provisions in the revenue laws.

In that connection, Magill told the committee one of the remedies for abuse of the pension trust provisions being considered was an amendment to require that all such trusts be irrevocable.

Arthur H. Kent, assistant general counsel of the Treasury, also suggested a readjustment of the present 10 per cent tax on income derived from the United States by nonresident aliens.

Mrs. duPont Hits 'Inferences.'

By the United Press.

Mrs. Jessie Ball duPont, wife of the late Alfred I. duPont, tonight charged that "statements" and "inferences" of Treasury officials before the joint Congressional Committee on tax matters that a personal holding company had been organized to pay expenses of the duPont home, near Wilmington, were "misleading and unwarranted."

In a telegram to Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, from Jacksonville, Fla., Mrs. duPont said "not a dollar of the income of Nemours, Inc., was ever expended for the household expenses of Mr. duPont or his family."

The telegram said the duPonts' Delaware property was to be "the first unit of a hospital the primary purpose of which would be the care and treatment of crippled children." It continued that $1,000,000 already had been set aside from duPont's estate for construction and equipment of the hospital's first unit and that Dr. A. R. Shands, jr., had been employed as medical director.

N.Y. Curb Defeated In Market Dispute

By the Associated Press.

Over-the-counter dealers won an important victory over the New York Curb Exchange yesterday in their competition as markets for certain securities.

The Securities Commission granted the request of Bristol & Willett, a New York over-the-counter dealer, to stop the Curb Exchange from conducting unlisted trading in the 7 per cent preferred and common stocks of the American District Telegraph Co., of New Jersey.

The commission found there was insufficient public trading of these securities on the curb exchange and that over-the-counter dealers made more of a market for the issues than the exchange.

By Franklyn Waltman

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT believes that any reporter who dares to ask him about his third-term intentions should wear a dunce hat and take his place in a corner. We do not know whether the President intends that characterization, uttered at his last press conference, to apply to everyone who is curious about his third-term plans—but if he does some enterprising gadget manufacturer can make a fortune out of supplying the dunce hats.

WALTMAN.

If the President has lost the unusual ability in the art of repartee which he once possessed that he now must take refuge in insulting Washington corespondents to evade embarassing questions, it is all right with us. Most reporters have been insulted by folks much less important than Presidents. But it should be emphasized that Mr. Roosevelt, when given the opportunity, failed to shut the door on the possibility that he may seek a third term.

That was the really important development of that press conference. Consequently Mr. Roosevelt cannot justly complain if his actions and policies are viewed in the light of this third-term possibiliyt. Indeed, there are many on Capitol Hill who are fearful—and that word is used advisedly—that Mr. Roosevelt has the ambition to break the greatest of all precedents—that which says no man shall serve a third term as President.

For instance, when Gov. George H. Earle, Southerner, recently nominated the President for a third term (in order to get himself off a hot spot), the reaction on Capitol Hill was cold and clammy. Not a hat was thrown into the air. Indeed, everyone questioned declined to comment—which, we suspect, was just about what Cuhn'l Earle, sah, desired.

There has been a widespread opinion in the Washington Corps of Correspondents that Mr. Roosevelt considers himself eligible for a third term and even those who do not think so are beginning to weaken. For instance, Raymond Clapper, of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, who is an ardent admirer of the President and the New Deal, does not think so, but he has virtually commenced a crusade for Mr. Roosevelt to say "nay, nay" to this third term talk.

Unless the President specifically declares he would not accept nomination for a third term—which this column does not believe he will until he finds he cannot attain it—there will be a great deal of good, clean fun on Capitol Hill and elsewhere over this subject. Indeed, we may witness the proponents or the opponents—have it as you will—parading around wearing dunce hats.

One of these days in another year or two some sly Republican will introduce in the Senate a resolution seeking to place that body on record against a third term—and then the fun will start in earnest, with a great many Democrats and New Dealers in that body squirming and sweating. Unless the Republicans have lost all cleverness such a resolution should give them several of the best field days in years.

Most students of history know that the House of Representatives went on record in 1875 against a third term and that historians have regarded that action as thwarting the ambitions nursed by Ulysses S. Grant. But it appears generally to have been forgotten that as recently as 1928 the Senate by a vote of 56 to 26 went on record against a third term in rather sharp language.

It will be recalled that in 1927 Calvin Coolidge issued his famous "I do not choose to run" statement regarding the approaching 1928 campaign. It also will be recalled that some of Mr. Coolidge's friends refused to take that announcement seriously and undertook to launch a boom to draft Mr. Coolidge as the Republican candidate for 1928.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, the younger, then an insurgent Republican, introduced a resolution which read as follows:

"Resolved, that it is the sense of the Senate that the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States retiring from the Presidential office after their second term has become, by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions; and be it further

"Resolved, that the Senate commends the observance of this precedent by the President."

As adopted after several days of colorful debate, this resolution lacked the second paragraph, which was withdrawn by Senator La Follette on the plea of several Republicans. Without doubt this identical resolution will be presented to the Senate again in the not distant future.

And then the fun will start. Senator La Follette will be reminded of all he said in 1928 when he was seeking to block the Coolidge third-term movement. Senate Democratic Leader Joe Robinson—if he has not passed on to the Supreme Court—will be reminded of his ardent pleas for the 1928 resolution—and so will Senators Pat Harrison, Key Pittman, Kenneth McKellar, Mathew M. Neely and George W. Norris.

Undoubtedly Senator William E. Borah will show a remarkable consistency by again telling his Democratic friends in the Senate, as he did in 1928, that:

"So far as the Democrats are concerned, they would be strikingly inconsistent if they did not vote for this resolution. It is Democratic doctrine; it originated with Thomas Jefferson; it has been one of the cardinal principles of the Democratic Party from its organization to this time; and I can not conceive of a Democrat voting against the resolution if he believes in the principle which is one of the cardinal principles of the Democratic Party."

And of the Senate Democrats of that day only three did vote against the resolution—Blease, of South Carolina; Ransdell, of Louisiana, and Walsh, of Massachusetts. Of this trio only Walsh remains in the Senate. Voting for the resolution were such Democrats still in the Senate as Ashurst, Barkley, Black, Copeland, Gerry, Glass, Harrison, Hayden, King, McKellar, Neely, Pittman, Robinson, Sheppard, Smith, Tydings, Wagner and Wheeler.

We make a prediction: If and when this resolution again comes before the Senate, Dean Henry Fountain Ashurst, of the College of Inconsistency, will find a number of candidates attaining eligibility for his doctorate's degree in political inconsistency.

We claim a victory: Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has reformed the Treasury Daily Statement to eliminate the deceptive practice of including repayments to the Government's lending agencies under expenditures—and thus falsely reducing the expenditure total—a practice against which this column has bitterly protested. Congratulations, Mr. Secretary, on seeing the light!

Kansas City's Vote Cleanup Hits Pendergast

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, July 2.—T. J. Pendergast, head of Kansas City's powerful Democratic organization, and his nephew, James, were named by the Federal grand jury in an open letter to Judge Merrill E. Otis today as backers of the defense fund for the city's vote fraud defendants.

In 9 trials, 46 defendants have been convicted of marking ballots, not counting ballots and intimidating workers. More than 100 others have been indicted.

The grand jury's letter said Pendergast told a bonding company he would back the defense for "any amount of money required."

It stated that Pendergast's nephew had "directed and solicited" the attorneys participating in the defense, which, to date, has not won a single acquittal.

'Distress' Expressed.

The letter stated James Pendergast's expressed motive was the "distress he felt" for the defendants.

It said Thomas McGee and son, bonded defendants in the vote fraud trials, "had been assured by one Thomas J. Pendergast that he would advance any further funds necessary to secure surety for them.

McGee was called before the grand jury after Judge Otis denied a new trial for five defendants, one a Pendergast precinct captain.

The letter said James Pendergast put up $60,000 as surety for the defendants.

Early in the trials T. J. Pendergast had said the investigation was "allright with me."

At the November election, illness prevented him from being in charge and his nephew filled that role.

Cannon to Appeal As Court Refuses To Reopen Suit

Holding that "he was of the same opinion now" that he was when he dismissed a suit filed by Bishop James Cannon, jr., against Representative George Holden Tinkham, of Massachusetts, Justice Jennings Bailey, in District Court, late yesterday overruled a motion by the clergyman to rescind his prior action and permit the case to go on.

Justice Bailey dismissed the Cannon suit, in which the bishop sought $500,000 damages from the Massachusetts legislator several months ago. The action was based on an alleged libelous statement made by the Representative in comments made about Bishop Cannon, who was at that time under indictment on charges of violating the corrupt practices act. Bishop Cannon was acquitted of that charge.

After making his statements about the cleric, Tinkham went on the steps of the Capitol and handed reporters copies of his remarks. It was this latter incident that formed the basis for the charges.

Attorneys representing Bishop Cannon intimated they would appeal to the United States Court of Appeals.

Denhardt Accused Of Causing Death Of Young Woman

Louisville, Ky., July 2 (AP).—Brig Gen. Henry H. Denhardt was accused of causing the death of Miss Patricia Wilson, 25, whose body was found atop an elevator in a hotel here a year ago, in a suit asking $70,000 damages filed today in Circuit Court by Edward C. Langan, administrator of the girl's estate.

Denhardt, former adjutant general and Lieutenant Governor of Kentucky, recently was tried in Henry County on a charge of murdering his fiancee, Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor. The jury disagreed and the case was reset for a second trial next fall.

In the Langan suit, the petition filed by Attorney James T. Robinson alleged the portly 61-year-old general "assaulted, beat and bruised" Miss Wilson, "causing her to fall down an elevator shaft in the hotel."

Hospital Fugitive Captured in Park

Escaping from Casualty Hospital through an open window while his guard was standing in the hall, Baxter Albert, 45, colored, yesterday won only half an hour's freedom before he was caught.

Albert shot at his wife in the backyard of their home at 809 First street northwest Thursday, wounding his daughter Marguerite. Then he shot himself in the chest. Yesterday he was captured by Patrolman C. F. Smith in Stanton Park.

Nazi Defense Chieftain Ends Budapest Parley

Authoritative sources said they believed the day of a Hungarian declaration of military equality with her Balkan neighbors and of open rearmament was considerably hastened by Gen. Von Blomberg's five-day visit.

Hurt by 'Wild Ostrich,' Californian Sues Hearst

Merced, Calif., July 2 (AP).—Charging that a "vicious, wild and dangerous ostrich" stamped on him at the San Simeon ranch of William Randolph Hearst, Jesse Zelda filed a $40,000 damage suit today against the publisher and the Sunical Land & Packing Co.

Two Washington State Senators Protest Japanese Invasion of U. S. Fishing Waters.

Charges of invasion of American fishing waters by Japanese boats sent the Washington State Senators, Homer T. Bone and Lewis B. Schwellenbach, both Democrats, to the State Department to protest yesterday. The State Department previously had announced it was sending an investigator to the scene.

Said Senator Bone:

"The Secretary urged that everyone concerned refrain from intemperate utterances or charges that will irritate the Japanese. Senator Schwellenbach and I stated that the best way to induce a calm and temperate on the Pacific Coast is to give evidence that the Government is definitely interested in and will employ all legitimate means to serve the interests of citizens in their right to make a living by fishing in waters off our coast."

STRENGTHENING BUREAUCRACY was called the ultimate result of the proposal of lump sum appropriations subject to Executive release, in a statement by Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee. The proposal came from the President's committee of reorganization of government. It would make expenditure of appropriations subject to Presidential discretion.

"It is suggested under the fake plea of economy," Martin said. "Lump appropriations won't save money but rather will bring extravagance." . . . You can't save money by making it easier for the man who spends the cash."

RETURN OF FUNDS, some $50,000,000 or more, to 13 States is sought by Representative Chester W. Thompson (Democrat), Illinois, in connection with collection of the unemployment insurance taxes.

The Federal Treasury received the funds because the States had not passed laws to supplement the Federal act by the January 1, 1937, deadline. States which had so qualified received back 90 per cent of the taxes collected in their territory. Representative Richard L. Duncan (Democrat), Missouri, is chairman of a bloc asking return of the tax money; Thompson is secretary of the group.

Thompson said he and Duncan are asking a White House appointment in order to try for Presidential support. In the meantime, the 86 House members involved are doing "missionary work" among their colleagues.

SENATOR HARRY S. TRUMAN (Democrat), Missouri, made an eloquent plea yesterday for passage of Senate Bill No. 2, for regulation and co-ordination of air transportation in the country. He described the measure as "Part Three of the Interstate Commerce Act," and warned that the death of clipper-ships and "then the American merchant marine" should be remembered before the air transport systems are ignored. "Transportation should be no political football," he said. "This bill does not take away from the Postmaster General any powers he now has.

"He can establish an airmail star route from Pohick to Accotink, Va., or to Dutch Flat, Calif., or from Peculiar to Useful, Mo."

A TAX ON IMPORTS of "black strap" molasses, if used for alcohol distilling, but not if for livestock feed, is contained in the new sugar control bill favorably reported by the House Agriculture Committee.

Representative Lucas (Democrat), Illinois, won the fight for the tax which he said would "place molasses on a parity with corn," and aid Middle West corn growers. He said 179,123,000 gallons of molasses were used by the distillers last year, which he declared was the equivalent of 28,660,000 bushels of corn, of 1,189,000 corn acres.

"This is the first time in 18 years," he said, "that we have been able to get such a proposed tax into a bill favorably reported."

DeparturesEnd FamilyReunion For Roosevelts

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 2.—President Roosevelt, reunited with his family after the marriage of Franklin, jr., Wednesday, said good-by today to five of its members as they scattered on various trips and excursions.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, sr., his 82-year-old mother, and John, the youngest son, left in the afternoon for New York to sail for Europe. The mother will visit a sister in France, while John tours the Continent with a Harvard classmate and other friends.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt slipped off to New York on an unheralded trip with her secretary, Mrs. Malvina Scheider.

As the Elliott Roosevelts had left the group shortly after Franklin's wedding, this left only Mrs. James Roosevelt, jr., and a member or two of the White House staff at the big gray-stone house on the Hudson.

Between farewells, the President worked on mail and signed bills.

Guild Seeks to Avert Seattle Star Strike

Seattle, July 2 (AP).—The Seattle Star unit of the American Newspaper Guild announced appointment of a committee late today to negotiate with the newspaper "in an effort to avert a strike."

The move followed action of the Teamsters' Union today in refusing to transport issues of the Star for street and district circulation after Star circulation employes had declined to drop membership in the guild. Teamsters demand they join the teamsters' new affiliate, the Newspaper Drivers and Helpers Union. After missing two editions, the Star resumed publication this afternoon under agreement with the teamsters.

Hopkins' Figures Reveal 1,821,151 Employed on June 26.

More than 124,000 workers have been dropped from WPA rolls in two weeks, and 155,674 more are to go by July 15.

Figures released by Administrator Harry L. Hopkins yesterday showed that while a total of 1,945,796 were employed in the week ended June 12, the number had declined to 1,821,151 on June 26.

Hopkins previously had announced his determination to cut the rolls to 1,665,477 persons by the middle of this month, a reduction necessitated by appropriation of only $1,500,000,000 for relief during the fiscal year which started Thursday.

Hopkins' figures showed that on June 26, the District of Columbia rolls included 6,523 persons, a reduction of 91 in the two weeks.

Virginia had 19,284 employed, a decline of 185, and Maryland had 10,760, which was 487 less than on June 12.

Meanwhile, the Public Works Administration announced that since its creation on June 16, 1933, local communities co-operating with PWA have furnished an average of 68.44 per cent of the funds expended to date toward completing 9,286 non-Federal projects estimated to cost $2,428,322,604.

Projects in the District of Columbia were reported to cost $5,057,880, with the Government's share of the cost put at $2,032,794.

In Virginia the total cost of projects was placed at $21,375,549, with the Government's share $7,482,844. In Maryland the cost was $26,690,506, the Government supplying $11,440,165.

Perjury Is Denied By Harlan Figure

Ted Creech, burly Kentucky mine employe, yesterday pleaded not guilty when he was arraigned in District Court on a charge of perjury that grew out of testimony he presented before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee last month.

Creech, son of a mine official, was charged with having told an untruth to the Senate committee, of which Senator La Follette is chairman, when he was called up to testify about conditions in "bloody Harlan" County, Ky.

His attorney, William E. Leahy, asked permission to file an attack on the indictment within ten days. The request was granted by Jusitce Jesse C. Adkins.

Britain Spurns Plan to Scrap Spanish Patrol

Envoys of Soviet, France Agree to Submit Italo-German Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 2.—Britain tonight promptly rejected a proposal of Italy and Germany that the naval patrol of Spanish coasts be abandoned and belligerent rights be accorded both parties in the Spanish civil war.

A German source, however, said envoys of other nations to whom the proposal was made had agreed to refer it to their governments.

The Italo-German plan was laid before the directing sub-committee of the 27-nation committee seeking to isolate the Spanish conflict.

British rejection was considered to bring the whole European controversy over control to a stalemate. The sub-committee adjourned until next week, when other nations in the full committee will be called in for a review of the situation, which diplomats admitted was grave.

France, Britain Defy "Axis."

France made clear tonight she and Great Britain will supply arms, munitions and airplanes to the Spanish government unless Italy and Germany change their attitudes toward neutrality in Spain.

"Resumption of normal commercial relations" would be permitted, French foreign office sources disclosed, and would mean immediate reopening of the French frontier to the Spanish central government.

Insurgent Generalissimo Franco's frontier, it was said, would remain closed, because he still would be viewed officially as the leader of an insurrection against Spain's legitimate government and could buy nothing from France.

Large munitions contracts, which the government of Spain's republic placed in France before the uprising, they said, would be filled. The orders were suspended when the nonintervention committee was organized.

France, Soviet Compromise.

Among the sub-committee members agreeing to submit the Italo-German proposals to their governments were Charles Corbin, French Ambassador, and Ivan Maisky, Soviet envoy.

In an earlier session of the sub-committee today Italy and Germany had turned down the proposals of Britain and France that the naval patrol of Spanish coasts be reconstituted. Britain and France offered to use their own warships to replace German and Italian vessels withdrawn last week.

German quarters showed no optimism that reference of their plan to European governments would bring its acceptance. They said they could not say how the Berlin-Rome axis would turn if other nations followed Britain's lead in rejecting it in favor of the Anglo-French patrol plan.

Britain Stalemated.

Informed British sources said they saw no way out of the impasse. Today's sessions, they said, left the situation just as full of dangerous possibilities as before. The Italian and German ambassadors obviously impressed the British with their firmness, thus leading to agreement to let the full committee pass judgment on the situation.

In Rome Italian official circles said the action of France and Britain in rejecting the Italo-German proposal constituted "the assumption of grave responsibility" on the part of Great Britain.

Santander Bombed Again.

Madrid, July 2 (AP).—Insurgent Gen. Franco's forces reported today they had reached Santander province, which contains the City of Santander, their major remaining objective in northwest Spain.

Capture of 2,000-foot Mount Mello, insurgent officers reported, gave them a foothold in the province south of Somorrostro. Another insurgent column was reported advancing westward along the Valmaseda and Castro Urdiales highway. Insurgent squadrons bombed Santander for the sixth time in two days, wounding many inhabitants and damaging several buildings.

Assail Oehler's Arrest.

Charging "the arrest and detention of Edward Hugo Oehler and three other Americans in Barcelona on charges of espionage is a deliberate and criminal frame-up by the People's Front capitalistic government to silence the voice of a real revolutionist," the Revolutionary Workers League, through its local secretary, Irving Canter, made representations yesterday to the State Department and to the Spanish Embassy for the release of Oehler, national secretary of the league.

other agents still were uncaptured, "because, of course, 'K' is dead and could not talk." "K," Zakovsky said, was killed by the Leningrad secret police when he was trapped in a forest near the frontier and resisted arrest.

Secret Wireless Station.

Zakovsky charged "K" headed a group which had a nucleus of prosperous farmers opposed to the Soviet regime, priests, former monks, their relatives and malcontent young people.

He said "K" himself was recruited for espionage when he was in Estonia in 1931. After a trial period and training as a radio operator, Zakovsky declared "K" was sent to Russia to organize his band and establish a secluded wireless station to "receive coded instructions from the Estonian intelligence service."

The group in White Russia, he charged, was formed to strike from within in the event a war involving Russia against Poland. The scheme, he said, was for Polish officers to cross the border and take command a few days before any outbreak of hostilities.

Zakovsky asserted the group already was supplied with Polish bombs and guns and had been instructed to kill high Russian army should the time come for action.

Mexican Strife Fostered by U.S., Parley Is Told

'Selfish, Imperialistic Aims' Assailed at World Union Congress.

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, Poland, July 2.—Alexandro Carrillo, Mexican delegate to the International Federation of Trade Unions Congress, charged today that the United States for 25 years has "supported internal turmoil in Mexico to further its own selfish and imperialistic aims."

"The United States are the Germany of the American continent," he said.

Carrillo's attack came after the executive committee had adopted a resolution expressing solidarity with "democratic Spain" and urging all members of the League of Nations to take immediate action to save world peace.

Carrillo urged European countries to defend the Spanish republic, adding:

"Through 25 years of fighting against United States imperialism Mexico knows the meaning of civil war incited by a foreign country."

Carrillo, who represents the confederation of Mexican workers, proposed that workers organize throughout the world a "Spanish week" of propaganda in behalf of the Valencia government.

Leon Jouhaux, representing the French confederation of labor, urged "readiness for war to make Europe safe for democracy."

He said countries which today "refuse to go to war for ideals may be obliged to go to war tomorrow to defend themselves against attack."

Damage Claims Against Germany May Be Settled

New York, July 2 (AP).—The New York Post said today it had been informed by Duncan J. Kerr, president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, that claimants for damages against Germany, growing out of the World War, may share a possible $20,000,000 compromise settlement.

The claims originated out of damages to American-owned property abroad, and Black Tom and Kingsland explosions.

Kerr, one of the principal claimants, was reported by the paper to have said agreement between two types of claimants—aged in the explosions, and those whose European holdings were damaged—had resulted in "an excellent chance" that Germany may agree to the compromise settlement out of sequestered alien funds in the United States Treasury.

Blast Survivors To Be Questioned

Nampa, Idaho, July 2 (AP).—Investigation of a pre-holiday fireworks explosion in a drug store which killed five was delayed tonight pending questioning of 13 injured survivors.

The blast turned a busy shopping hour late yesterday into panic. Hundreds of pounds of fireworks on display, believed by officers to have been ignited by inquisitive boys, shattered the building front and showered the interior with flames.

The front entrance blocked by flames, customers fled to the rear. Several girls attending a beauty school on the mezzanine floor jumped into an alley, breaking their legs or arms.

Spanish Princess Gives Birth to Second Child

Rome, July 2 (AP).—Princess Torlonia, eldest daughter of former King Alfonso of Spain, tonight gave birth to a son, her second child. The former king and former Queen Victoria, who have been estranged for some time, met at their daughter's bedside soon after and reports that their meeting was extremely cordial gave rise to a suggestion of a possible reconciliation.

Assistant Secretary of State Is Shifted in Surprise Move.

A surprise shift in high State Department personnel, following a number of recent elevations and transfers, came yesterday when President Roosevelt nominated Wilbur J. Carr, veteran Assistant Secretary of State, to be Minister to Czechoslovakia.

The President also sent to the Senate the nomination of George S. Messersmith, now Minister to Austria, to succeed Carr in the position here.

Carr, at Prague, will succeed J. Butler Wright, recently named to be Ambassador to Cuba.

At the same time the Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Hugh R. Wilson, Minister to Switzerland, to be Assistant Secretary of State in place of R. Walton Moore, recently elevated to the new position of Counselor of the State Department.

Carr, Assistant Secretary since 1924, has for more than 20 years been the chief administrative officer in the department, in which he has been in charge of personnel work.

Whether or not their efforts had anything to do with the transfer, it is known that for some time a considerable number of younger officials in the department have sought Carr's removal from the position in which he had much to do with promotions. Carr entered the department in 1892 as a clerk.

Secretary of State Hull, late in the day, issued a statement on Carr's transfer, saying:

"Mr. Carr, during his more than 40 years of devoted service in the Department of State, has proved himself to be one of the very ablest and most capable Assistant Secretaries in the history of the department. The time has now come when Mr. Carr desires to take a mission in the field. Prague is today one of our most vital listening posts and his assignment there was mutually agreeable to all concerned. I can only extend to him my heartfelt good wishes and my sincere hope that he may be increasingly happy and successful in his new duties.

"Mr. Messersmith will take over the principal duties and functions now performed by Mr. Carr. He has had considerable and varied experience in personnel and administrative matters and is eminently practical and broad gauge in every way. I consider him as the most capable person in the service who is available for such an assignment."

While it is known that there have been some rumblings of discontent and chagrin over the general matter of promotions while Carr held his post there, he has been credited generally with having built up the career service in line with his long advocacy of placing this country's foreign service on a merit basis, through competition, rather than resorting to political appointments.

Messersmith, who has been minister to Austria since 1934, previously was consul general at Berlin.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 2.—A quartet of jewel thieves invaded fashionable Beekman place early today and at gunpoint stripped a society matron of jewelry valued at $100,000.

The robbery occurred only a few doors from the apartment house where Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton, victim of last year's sensational bath tub murder, was strangled.

Mrs. Josephine Ogden Forrestal, socially prominent victim of Manhattan's latest jewel robbery, told police the bandits took two platinum bracelets set with diamonds and two platinum rings.

They did not take anything from her escort, Richard B. W. Hall, a broker, overlooking $700 in his pocket.

As Mrs Forrestal and Hall arrived at the entrance of her apartment in Hall's limousine and alighted, the bandit car drove up, they related. Before Frederick Tucker, the chauffeur, could open the door for Mrs. Forrestal, one robber stuck a gun against his side saying:

"What's your hurry, buddy?"

Another bandit climbed into the car and pulled the bracelets from Mrs. Forrestal's arms and the rings from her fingers. The other robbers stood on the opposite side of the car.

The robbery lasted only a few seconds.

British Marines Smash Trinidad Ship Strike

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, July 2 (AP).—British marines today broke up a strike of the longshoremen who refused to unload ships and threatened a possible food shortage on the land.

Armed seamen guarded volunteers called in to break the walkout and rode in launches alongside lighters manned by the workers traveling back and forth to the ships. Most of the striking lightermen and stevedores decided to return to work at a 20 per cent wage raise.

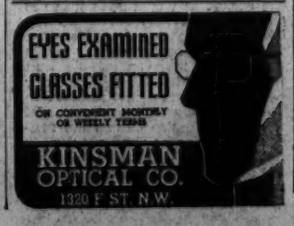
Philadelphia, July 2 (AP).—Until someone remarked that he was old, Walter Farmer, 56, offered no resistance last night to five men who demanded his money. Then he punched two and held the rest at bay until police arrived. (He had 46 cents.)



Atlantic Test Plane to Stop Twice on Way

To Try for Newfoundland Today After Halt in New Brunswick.

By the Associated Press.

New York July 2.—The Pan American flying boat which is scheduled to take off tomorrow for Botwood, Newfoundland, as a herald of commercial passenger-carrying flights linking Europe with America will make its first stop at Shediac Bay, New Brunswick.

Groomed for next Monday's trip across the Atlantic to Foynes, Ireland, the 45,000-pound winged yacht probably will survey a southern route from Southampton, England, via the Azores on the return trip. It was not expected to stop at the Bermuda Islands, now served by a New York-Hamilton shuttle service.

Announcement of the stop at Shediac Bay was made tonight by P. A. A. The air line distance from Manhasset Bay, an indentation on the north shore of Long Island, to Shediac Bay is approximately 600 miles.

The boat, the Pan American Clipper III, will complete the flight from Shediac, an intermediate landing site between Newfoundland and New York, to Botwood, a distance of 472 miles, before nightfall Saturday.

P. A. A. tentatively considered the return trip from Europe, by way of the Azores to give the personnel of the boat, captained by Harold E. Gray, a taste of the weather on the Southern route. The distance from the Azores to Manhasset Bay is 2,400 miles, or approximately that from San Francisco to Honolulu.

The Botwood-Foynes water hop is about 1,900 miles and is expected to require the P. A. A. boat and the Caledonia, of British Imperial Airways, which will make the westward crossing at the same time, about 15 hours.

Whether either the Caledonia or Pan American Clipper III, a sister ship of which charted the San Francisco-New Zealand route last spring over the Pacific, will be used in passenger-carrying flights between the American and European continents when regular service is established was not announced.

An 86,000-pound flying boat with accommodations for probably 40 passengers, under construction at the Boeing factory in Seattle, will be delivered to P. A. A. some time this fall.

Cumberland Cafe Picketing Resumed

Cumberland, Md., July 2 (AP).—Striking restaurant workers resumed mass picketing here today in the wake of Magistrate Robert B. Kimble's decision freeing eight persons arrested on such charges.

Ten men and women were on picket duty before one tavern during the lunch hour. Only one had been there prior to that time.

More than a score of pickets still were on duty today at the gates of the N. and G. Taylor tin plate mill, closed because of lack of materials due to the steel strikes. Automobiles entering the grounds had to drive between pickets.

Company officials said only office workers and maintenance men entered and that one office employe was struck by a picket, while cars were stopped and searched.

Maverick Defends C. I. O. as 'Valid American Movement' in Bitter Debate

hand are the American people who want economic justice."

He recalled the Madison Square Garden speech of President Roosevelt as "a burning political document," quoting the passage in which the President said of the "economic royalists" that "never before in all our history have these forces been so united against one candidate as they stand today. They are unanimous in their hatred for me—and I welcome their hatred."

He then denounced the "charge of Gov. Davey, of Ohio, that Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins wanted Tom Girdler kidnaped," as "the story of an excited and imaginative child." He said:

"The gentleman from Georgia (Cox) started talking about civil war. On behalf of the South he spoke of 'havoc, bloodshed, and loss of lives.' He warned the C. I. O. 'they will be met by the flower of Southern manhood and they will reap the bitter fruits of their own folly.' He warns the C. I. O. that if they come into the South their constitutional rights will be denied them and there will be bloodshed."

"It is not exactly an engraved invitation to revolution and civil war, but irreparable damage is done the South and the Nation.

"Also Negroes are brought into the argument. I will not argue on such an emotional subject, but when the bloody shirt is waved, not by a Northerner, but a Southerner, when to that is added a cry about carpetbagging expeditions, it sounds more hysterical than ever."

"We cannot solve our problems in the South by shouting about carpetbaggers or suggesting a civil war to meet labor organizers with 'the flower of Southern manhood.'

"To say the least, none of the flowers who are now in Congress—North, South, East, or West—will shed any blood in any conflict . . . What the flower of Southern manhoods needs is jobs, not civil wars or shooting scrapes indulged in by vigilantes.

"Mr. Cox is an honorable man. But I call for cool heads, I plead for peace . . . Who is calling for blood and violence? Why, gentlemen, those who prate about the preservation of the Constitution, those who wear patriotism on their sleeves, those who call themselves conservatives and wrap themselves in the flag.

"Has any one of these so-called conservative gentlemen cried out about the 10 men murdered on Memorial Day in Chicago by the police? No, not one! One of the bloodiest, most shameful pages in our history—10 men murdered, shot down—7 of them shot in the back. But no leading conservative denounced it.

"Who caused the American Revolution? Why, the conservatives, gentlemen, the men of England, too stupid to see they were forcing the Revolution on Americans.

"People Want to Organize."

"The people want to organize themselves, they want collective bargaining, they want economic justice and liberty. What have they gotten? They have been kicked around, abused and murdered and killed and beaten, both by regular police and company police, by private armies, hired thugs, labor spies, former convicts and plain private murderers.

"But our pious patriotic talkers ignore this and yell and shout about communism.

"Oh, my colleagues, the old cry of communism is getting very thin. It gets thinner and thinner, answers no arguments, reveals no facts, settles no problems.

"John L. Lewis! Civil war! Communism! Communism! Communism! The Red Flag of Russia!

"It is not just John L. Lewis. It is a movement of the American people.

"I see no communism in the C. I. O. All I see are strong-minded American men who want their American rights.

"The working man of America is not a Communist, he is not a coward and he is not a sheep. Treat him half right and he will work himself to death . . . Let us not be violent ourselves! Let us demand that all parties respect the national labor relations act."

Pleads for Unity.

He ended his speech with a demand that Congress stay in session, pass all major bills, including the President's court reorganization bill, and pleaded for Democrats to "stick together."

Cox, after Hoffman had denounced the C. I. O. through the device of reading letters and dispatches from Michigan, all violently opposed to alleged C. I. O. activities, took the floor to say sarcastically at Maverick:

"I must believe that the gentleman is never serious, that he is more interested in provoking amusement by his extravagance and buffoonery than in the molding of sound public opinion."

Maverick demanded that Cox's words be "taken down," and "stricken." This motion was defeated by a voice vote, as well as another objection of Maverick to Cox's language later when he said: "I want to think that the gentleman from Texas believes in some form of government and that he has not been wholly Russianized." Bankhead rebuked Cox for this language and he withdrew the word "Russianized."

Cox then put a long series of questions to Maverick without waiting for an answer, questions such as:

"Is the gentleman collaborating with Mr. Lewis?

"Is he in sympathy with the C. I. O.'s efforts to terrorize industry?"

Maverick, jutting his jaw belligerently, then answered all the questions collectively with one loud "No." He referred to them as "insults." He said: "The gentleman from Georgia made insulting questions for the direct purpose of being insulting. I am not, of course, going to offer to fight him, because I have had all the fights I want. . . . The gentleman has been unnecessarily insulting, and if practices such as that are continued in the House, we will end up by merely having rows and fistfights before this thing is over."

DR. LAWRENCE JACQUES,

Chicago surgeon, who made a survey of those killed and wounded during Memorial Day riot, used a rag doll and ice pick while giving testimony before Civil Liberties Committee. He told how most of the victims were shot in the back and side, indicating with rag doll the course of bullets.

With the evidence in, La Follette announced recess of the hearings, subject to his further call. He said all witnesses would remain under subpena.

Lupe Perez Marshall, the 92-pound volunteer social worker, told of being clubbed to the ground when she protested the treatment of marchers; told of 16 badly wounded men piled atop one another in a patrol wagon; told of one dying with his head in her lap while he begged for a cigarette.

Harry N. Harper, one blinded eye heavily bandaged, and who had to be helped out by the chairman when he faltered in testimony, recalled a search for two steel-worker brothers that ended in a clubbing and a three-hour patrol wagon ride to a hospital with two dying men.

Dr. Lawrence Jacques, a surgeon retained by the steel workers, had shown the injuries of marchers with charts, a rag doll and an ice pick, gruesomely depicting the points of entry and lodgment of bullets.

Summarizing his findings, Dr. Jacques said at least 40 marchers suffered gunshot wounds, 28 were hospitalized for other injuries and between 25 and 30 hurt were not hospitalized. He said six and possibly seven of those killed were shot in the back, and the remainder in the side.

Two women, one an unidentified 15-year-old girl, and an 11-year-old boy were shot in the encounter, he testified. Of the 35 police injured, he said only 9 required hospital treatment, and only 3 were actually hospitalized. All police wounds save one "can be regarded as lacerations," he said.

Before hearings recessed, a huge trunk on rollers was brought into the room bearing rude clubs, sticks, rocks, signs, a rusty hatchet and a guitar in a case. These, Capt. Mooney said, were picked up by police after the field was cleared.

Previously, Robert Fleming and George C. Jolly, jr., who said they lived in houses adjoining the scene, told of watching the battle from windows. Both said police later had gathered up sticks and slag from a dump near their premises when searching the field for evidence.

Police and other witnesses have told of missiles hurled by strikers at the outset of the encounter, but in the suppressed Paramount news reel, released yesterday for the first time, the flying objects could not be distinguished.

Orlando Lippert, the cameraman who made the sound film, explained there was a momentary break in his photography just at the outbreak of the clash. While he stopped for not more than seven seconds to change lenses, he said some missiles flew from the rear of the crowd into the police ranks.

A view of the steel plant and pickets marching, some with placards, could be seen as the picture opened. There was a close-up of the pickets abreast of the police, some of those in front arguing with officers. There was a hubbub, but words mostly were indistinguishable.

Then came the brief break, and when the picture resumed the marchers were in retreat, the police in pursuit, clubs in action. One officer firing a revolver, could be distinguished plainly, another dimly. Clubs were descending on fallen men, and in one instance a picket was being held by one officer and clubbed by another.

Most pickets were trying to escape, some attempting to ward off blows, but there were one or two instances of apparent resistance—a picket with a rock, and another swinging at an officer with a stick. One plain-clothes man with a club, apparently mistaken for a striker, was being stalked by a policeman, but he turned, displaying a badge, in time for the officer to see it.

Grimmest were the later scenes of the wounded being loaded into patrol wagons without aid of stretchers. One blood-stained body could be seen on the ground, the victim's head on a newspaper. He was helped by fellow pickets into a car displaying a Red Cross placard.

Mrs. Marshall, a witness at yesterday's hearings, could be seen with police escort in search of a patrol wagon and given a jerk by an officer as she was loaded into one.

There was silence, only occasionally broken by gasps, murmurs or a nervous laugh, in the Senate hearing room, as the picture which Paramount officials had feared would provoke disorders was unreeled for the audience.

'Cops Right,' but Too Brutal, Says Union Man of Riot Film

"I saw the cops hit them when they were down, and that was enough for me," was Steel Worker William G. Gregory's verdict on the newsreel of Chicago's Memorial Day strike riot, released to the general public yesterday for the first time.

Gregory, a heater in the coke oven at Bethlehem Steel's Baltimore plant, was in the matinee audience of the Rialto Theater yesterday when the film had its first public showing.

Like others who were questioned as to their impression of the Paramount newsreel, Gregory felt it should be made public. In general he objected to the methods used by the Chicago policemen in quelling the riot. "The tear gas was a little too much," he felt.

"But the cops were doing the right thing in protecting the company's property. And you can quote me as saying that it's a man's own business if he joins a union. I've belonged to several A. F. of L. unions myself, but I'd never join the C. I. O."

"A lousy deal, that's what it was," in the opinion of Edward Heath, a stage hand at the theater, who also saw the film. "I saw a woman jabbed in the ribs when all she was doing was walking across the field eating peanuts or something. And I didn't like the way the cops were batting the ones who had fallen.

"But if you want to stop that sort of thing, deport this guy Lewis. Lewis, Stalin and Russian money—that's what's back of all the trouble. And I could say a lot more on that subject that you wouldn't print."

"I'm with the trade unionists every time—have belonged to the I. A. T. S. E. (International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes, and A. F. of L. affiliate) for 34 years. But I don't like the C. I. O."

Seventeen-year-old Bernard Connolly, of Mount Rainier, Md., considered the depiction gruesome but felt the public should see it. He was impressed by the fact the policemen shot strikers in the back as they were retreating.

Lawrence Grogan, who works in the office of the theater, had this to say: "I'm all against riots, anyway. The strikers obviously outnumbered the police, and a club in the hands of one of them was just as good as one in a cop's hand.

Of the women questioned, only one seemed visibly affected by the bloody conflict which the newsreel depicts. "It's a sin and a crime that the man sitting in the White House should allow things like that," she said vehemently.

Other comments included:

"The police did go a little to extremes."

"It's wise to show the film publicly. It shows graphically just what this labor trouble is all about."

"I'm glad they didn't edit it."

"It was too gruesome for me, but I think it's a good idea to exhibit it."

strike if a satisfactory settlement cannot be reached."

Steel Men at Work.

East Chicago, July 2 (AP).—Steel furnaces turned the night skies red along the seven-State strike front tonight while C. I. O. leaders strove to rally their forces against new back-to-work movements.

More strike-locked mills opened at Massillon, Ohio.

Republic Steel defied the threat of a "damned bloody battle," voiced by a C. I. O. picket captain, and moved 115 automobile loads of workers into its Massillon plant—under the bayonet protection of Ohio National Guardsmen—without violence.

Here in East Chicago, 5,500 day-shift workers fattened their pay-checks with a second day of work at Inland Steel's plant.

On all shifts, company officials said, 12,500 men were back on the job under the terms of a "strike armistice" arranged by Gov. M. Clifford Townsend of Indiana—a pact embodying Inland's own labor policy and an agreement to recognize the S. W. O. C. as collective bargaining agency for its members only.

The other three strike-embroiled "little steel" companies in the dispute with John L. Lewis' C. I. O. held firmly to their refusal to deal with the C. I. O. on the main issue of signed contracts.

"We are not going to sign anything," said Frank Purnell, president of Youngstown Sheet & Tube, in a statement today at Youngstown.

"We are preparing a letter to our Chicago district employes again explaining our situation. The letter will state that Inland Steel did not sign any agreement, contract or pact, and that we are not going to sign anything.

"Any statement we make will plainly state on top that it is not to be construed as a contract or agreement or any other subterfuge."

Spokesmen for Bethlehem and Republic Steel, the other two companies involved, indicated a similar stand.

Willing to Negotiate.

Purnell's letter reiterated his company's willingness to "meet and negotiate with representatives of any labor organization for bargaining purposes in behalf of such of the company's employes as are members of such organization.

It emphasized again that the company "will not make an agreement" with either the C. I. O. or S. W. O. C., "directly or indirectly."

The Wagner national labor relations act requires employers to "meet and negotiate" with employe groups, the letter said, but it has still to be determined whether such negotiations, by law, must end in a written agreement for all employes as demanded by the C. I. O.

The Federal Labor Board is now holding hearings in Chicago to determine the legalities of this prime point of dispute.

Workers Oppose Strike.

Independent unions, opposed to the C. I. O.-called strike, came into the open tonight in resentment against the 37-day-old strife which has cost 13 lives and untold millions in lost wages and partially paralyzed the Nation's independent steel industry.

A group of workers in Bethlehem private mines opened booths in four schools, seeking signatures to petitions in a "back-to-work" movement.

Philip Murray, chairman of the S. W. O. C., filed petitions with the National Labor Relations Board in Pittsburgh requesting collective bargaining elections among employes at all plants of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Weirton Steel Co.

He said "an overwhelming majority" of employes in those two concerns had authorized the S. W. O. C. to represent them for collective bargaining purposes.

"Wild" Strikes Punished.

Detroit, July 2 (AP).—The United Automobile Workers of America disciplined three organizers today "because of unauthorized sit-downs" in the Flint, Mich., area as its Lansing local engaged in a controversy with Gov. Frank Murphy.

Homer Martin, union president, removed Roy Reuther, Ralph Dale and William Cody from organizing posts at Flint, and ordered the transfer of Emil Mazey, organizer for the Briggs Manufacturing Co. local at Detroit, on recommendation of the U. A. W. executive board.

"Unauthorized sit-downs and factional disputes," Martin said, made the action necessary to maintain proper discipline in the international union."

Members of the Lansing local took exception to the Michigan Governor's statement that last month's "labor holiday" called to protest arrest of eight pickets at the State capital was "a good illustration of a communistic move."

Murphy Assailed.

Assailing what they termed Murphy's "belated conviction that Communists instigated, led or took over the workers' demonstration on June 7," the unionists said his statement "is an insult to every Lansing worker."

The Governor replied that the U. A. W. in Lansing "is not a Communist organization in any sense," but added that on the day of the labor holiday "leaders led them down a blind alley and struck a serious blow to labor throughout the country."

Stockholder Sues.

Cleveland, July 2 (AP).—Irving H. Green, of Minneapolis, describing himself as a Republic Steel Corporation stockholder, filed suit today against the corporation and its officers seeking to obtain $6,000,000 damages for the company for alleged illegal practices before and during the steel strike.

Green declared the defendants had purchased Republic stock at prices depressed due to the strike. The suit expressed belief officers of the company acted to bring about a general strike so that the market price of the stock would be depressed.

Sec. 2. (a) An additional judge of any court of the United States other than the Supreme Court may be appointed, in the manner now provided by law, and to the same court, for each judge, appointed to hold his office during good behavior, who at the time of nomination of the additional judge has reached the age of 70 years.

(b) The number of judges of any such court shall be increased by the number appointed thereto under the provisions of subsection (a) of this section but no vacancy shall be created by the death, resignation, or retirement of a judge of such court (other than a Chief Justice), whose continuance in office has occasioned the appointment of an additional judge. No appointment shall be made under subsection (a) which at any one time would result in (1) more than 20 judges in regular active service, in addition to those otherwise authorized by law, or (2) an addition of more than two judges to the number otherwise authorized by law to be appointed to any circuit court of appeals, the Court of Claims, the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, or the United States Customs Court, or (3) more than twice the number of judges otherwise authorized by law to be appointed for any district or, in the case of judges appointed for more than one district, for any such group of districts.

(c) Three-fifths of the judges of each of the following courts shall constitute a quorum thereof: The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, the Court of Claims, and the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

(d) An additional judge shall not be appointed under the provisions of this section when the judge who has reached the age of 70 years is commissioned to an office as to which Congress has provided that a vacancy shall not be filled.

Sec. 3. (a) Any circuit judge may be designated and assigned from time to time by the Chief Justice of the United States for general service in the circuit court of appeals for any circuit. Any district judge may be designated and assigned from time to time by the Chief Justice of the United States for general service in any district court, or, subject to the authority of the Chief Justice, by the senior circuit judge of his circuit for service in any district court within the circuit. A district judge designated and assigned to another district hereunder may hold court separately and at the same time as the district judge in such district. All designations and assignments made hereunder shall be filed in the office of the clerk and entered on the minutes of both the court from and to which a judge is designated and assigned, and thereafter the judge so designated and assigned shall be authorized to discharge all the judicial duties (except the power of appointment to a statutory position or of permanent designation of a newspaper or depository of funds) of a judge of the court to which he is designated and assigned. The designation and assignment of a judge shall not impair his authority to perform such judicial duties of the court to which he was commissioned as may be necessary or appropriate. The designation and assignment of any judge may be terminated at any time by order of the Chief Justice or the senior circuit judge, as the case may be.

(b) After the designation and assignment of a judge by the Chief Justice, the senior circuit judge of the circuit in which such judge is commissioned may certify to the Chief Justice any consideration which such senior circuit judge believes to make advisable that the designated judge remain in or return for service in the court to which he was commissioned. If the Chief Justice deems the reasons sufficient he shall revoke, or designate the time of termination of, such designation and assignment.

(c) In case a trial or hearing has been entered upon but has not been concluded before the expiration of the period of service of a district judge designated and assigned hereunder, the period of service shall, unless terminated under the provisions of subsection (a) of this section, be deemed to be extended until the trial or hearing has been concluded. Any designated and assigned district judge who has held court in another district than his own shall have power, notwithstanding his absence from such district and the expiration of any time limit in his designation, to decide all matters which have been submitted to him within such district, to decide motions for new trials, settle bills of exceptions, certify or authenticate narratives of testimony, or perform any other act required by law or the rules to be performed in order to prepare any case so tried by him for review in an appellate court; and his action thereon in writing filed with the clerk of the court where the trial or hearing was had shall be as valid as if such action had been taken by him within that district and within the period of his designation. Any designated and assigned circuit judge who has sat on another court than his own shall have power, notwithstanding the expiration of any time limit in his designation, to participate in the decision of all matters submitted to the court while he was sitting and to perform or participate in any Act appropriate to the disposition or review of matters submitted while he was sitting on such court, and his action thereon shall be as valid as if it had been taken while sitting on such court and within the period of his designation.

(d) When any Judge is assigned to duty outside of his District or Circuit his subsistence allowance shall be ten dollars per diem.

Sec. 4. (a) The Supreme Court shall have power to appoint a Proctor. It shall be his duty (1) to obtain and, if deemed by the Court to be desirable, to publish information as to the volume, character, and status of litigation in the district courts and circuit courts of appeals, and such other information as the Supreme Court may from time to time require by order, and it shall be the duty of any judge, clerk, or marshal of any court of the United States promptly to furnish such information as may be required by the Proctor; (2) to investigate the need of assigning district and circuit judges to other courts and to make recommendations thereon to the Chief Justice; (3) to recommend, with the approval of the Chief Justice, to any court of the United States methods for expediting cases pending on its dockets; and (4) to perform other duties consistent with his office as the court shall direct.

(b) The Proctor shall, by requisition upon the Public Printer, have any necessary printing and binding done at the Government Printing Office and authority is conferred upon the Public Printer to do such printing and binding.

(c) The salary of the Proctor shall be $10,000 per annum, payable out of the Treasury in monthly installments, which shall be in full compensation for the services required by law. He shall also be allowed, in the discretion of the Chief Justice, stationery, supplies, travel expenses, equipment, necessary professional and clerical assistance, and miscellaneous expenses appropriate for performing the duties imposed by this section. The expenses in connection with the maintenance of his office shall be paid from the appropriation of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Sec. 5. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act.

Sec. 6. When used in this Act—

(a) The term "circuit court of appeals" includes the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia; the term "senior circuit judge" includes the chief justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia; and the term "circuit" includes the District of Columbia.

(b) The term "district court" includes the District Court of the District of Columbia but does not include the district court in any Territory or insular possession.

(c) The term "judge" includes justice and the term "chief justice" shall include the presiding judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

Title II.

Sec. 101. Whenever in any court of the United States in any suit or proceeding to which the United States or any agency thereof or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee, is not a party, the constitutionality of any statute of the United States is drawn in question, the court having jurisdiction of the suit or proceeding shall certify such fact to the Attorney General if the court is of opinion that a substantial ground exists for questioning the constitutionality of the statute. The court shall afford the United States an opportunity for presentation of evidence (if evidence is otherwise receivable in such suit or proceeding) and argument. In the suit or proceeding the United States shall, subject to the applicable provisions of law, have the same rights as a party to the extent necessary for a proper presentation of the facts and law relating to the constitutionality of the statute and shall have the right to become a party to such proceeding, case, or controversy.

Sec. 102. Whenever any judgment, decree, or order in any suit or proceeding referred to in section 101 is based in whole or in part upon a decision that any statute of the United States is unconstitutional as therein applied, the United States, irrespective of whether or not it had previously presented evidence or argument under the provisions of section 101 shall have the same right to appeal therefrom as any party to the suit or proceeding. Within sixty days after the entry of any such judgment, decree, or order, whether final or interlocutory, the United States may also appeal therefrom directly to the Supreme Court, in which event any appeal or cross-appeal therefrom by any party to the suit or proceeding taken previously or taken within sixty days after notice of the appeal by the United States shall also be treated as taken directly to the Supreme Court. Such appeals will lie if no appeal is taken by any party to the suit or proceeding and such appeals shall, on motion of the United States, be advanced to a speedy hearing. If the United States appeals to the Supreme Court under the provisions of section 102, but no appeal is taken by any party to the suit or proceeding, the appeal of the United States shall be regarded as an appeal under this section. If this section, or any provision thereof, is held invalid, the remainder of this Act and the other provisions of this section shall not be affected thereby.

Sec. 104. In any suit or proceeding in any court of the United States to which the United States or any agency thereof or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee is a party, in which the decision is against the constitutionality of any statute of the United States, the United States, within sixty days after the entry of a final or interlocutory judgment, decree, or order, may, in its discretion, in its own name or in the name of such agency, officer, or employee, as the case may be, appeal therefrom directly to the Supreme Court, in which event any appeal or cross-appeal by any party to the suit or proceeding taken previously or taken within sixty days after notice of the appeal by the United States shall also be or be treated as taken directly to the Supreme Court. Such appeals shall, on motion of the United States, be advanced to a speedy hearing. This section shall not apply to any judgment, decree, or order of a district court of the United States which may, under existing provisions of law, be appealed directly to the Supreme Court.

Sec. 105. The Attorney General is authorized by himself or by counsel designated by him, to appear and argue in cases described in section 101, and to invoke appellate jurisdiction in cases described in sections 102, 103, and 104.

Sec. 106. As used in this title, the term "court of the United States" means the courts of record of Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, the Customs Court, the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, the Court of Claims, the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, any district court of the United States, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, any circuit court of appeals, and the Supreme Court.

Sec. 107. If any provision of this title, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of the Act and the application of such provisions to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

D. C. Truck Driver Hurt in Accident

John K. Brown, 36, of 410 Farragut street northwest, driver for the Charles Schneider Bakery Co., was in a serious condition in Sibley Hospital last night as the result of an auto accident two miles south of Centerville, Va.

Brown's truck struck a truck loaded with ducks coming in the opposite direction. A motorist carried Brown to the hospital where he was found to be suffering from internal injuries.

calendar year of another Supreme Court justice for each member now over 75.

When such appointments have been made, no vacancy caused by death, resignation or retirement, except of a Chief Justice, shall be filled until the court returns to the number nine.

One additional judge may be appointed to any lower court for any judge over the age of 70 years.

Not more than 20 lower court judges may be appointed.

Circuit judges may be assigned by the Supreme Court's Chief Justice for general service in Circuit Court of Appeals for any circuit.

Bill Provides Proctor.

The Supreme Court may appoint a proctor for itself, at a $10,000-a-year salary, to report on the state of litigation in all courts.

Authority for the Government to intervene at once in lower court cases involving Federal laws' constitutionality with a speed-up of appeals to the Supreme Court.

Senator Robinson, in a statement on the substitute bill yesterday, said:

"If the substitute bill passes, the President may nominate a justice to succeed Mr. Justice Van Devanter, lately retired, and another justice during the present calendar year under the terms of the bill. At any time after January 1 next another appointment may be made."

Four Now More Than 75.

The four Supreme Court justices now more than 75 are the Chief Justice, Charles Evans Hughes, and Justices Louis Dembitz Brandeis, James Clark McReynolds and George Sutherland.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, leader of the opposition forces, said:

"The Supreme Court justices are appointed for life. The bill seeks by subterfuge to humiliate and drive off the Supreme Court any man over 75 years of age.

"I know the American people, regardless of political faith, don't want to see Justice Brandeis of Chief Justice Hughes, who have rendered great public service for many years, humiliated and driven from public office because they are over 75.

"The bill strikes at Brandeis because he is the oldest, more than any other member. He has been the country's outstanding liberal for 50 years.

"Every argument against the other bill—the original proposal—can be made against this bill."

On Call for Tuesday.

Senator Logan, however, said:

"There can be no real objection to the measure as packing the court. That might have been true if the court had handed down a different type of decision than it recently has, but no longer."

Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, vigorous opponent of the court bills, said that a strong possibility is the motion for sine die adjournment of Congress, to come from a rank-and-file Senator, if the court-bill debate goes too long. Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (Democrat), Mississippi, has admitted that he has quietly been seeking to start an adjournment "stampede."

The bill will come up Tuesday, Logan said, with Robinson calling up the original bill, and immediately substituting the new measure. This will not be opposed, opposition leaders said, and then general free-for-all debate will begin.

Fare Hearings Planned If Taxi Bill Is Passed

Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, stated yesterday that public hearings would be granted by the commission on the need for an increase in taxicab rates, should Congress pass the pending bill which requires all taxicab operators to carry liability insurance.

If such hearings are called, Keech said, witnesses would be required to submit evidence of a real need for an increase before any change in the existing schedule would be made. Corroborating a statement by Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, a member of the House District Committee Keech said that the Utilities Commission possesses authority to increase fares without special legislation.

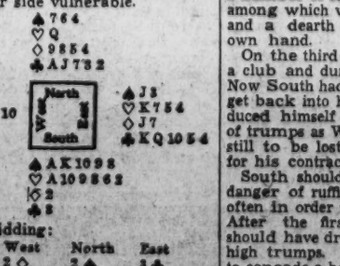
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Keeping Control.

The expert Bridge player would bring home South's game contract in the hand below without a moment's thought. Long experience has taught him the necessity of retaining control of trumps when a long suit must be brought in. But South was no expert and tried one ruff too many—thus losing the hand.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ◇	2 ♠	3 ♣
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the King of diamonds and continued with the Queen. South ruffed the second diamond with the eight of spades, and laid down the Act of hearts. A second round of hearts was ruffed in the dummy, and South returned to his own hand by a trump to the King.

Having gratefully noticed the fall of the heart Jack on the second round of that suit, South leaped to the conclusion that the hearts were going to split and decided to play for overtricks by ruffing another heart. He had failed to reckon with a number of factors, however, chief among which were a bad heart split and a dearth of re-entries to his own hand.

On the third heart West discarded a club and dummy perforce ruffed. Now South had to ruff a diamond to get back into his hand. Having reduced himself to the same number of trumps as West and with a heart still to be lost, South had no play for his contract.

South should have recognized the danger of ruffing himself down too often in order to return to his hand. After the first heart ruff South should have drawn not one, but two high trumps. He could then afford to concede a heart trick to East and a spade trick to West and still have enough control to re-enter his own hand and run his hearts.

U. S. Net Deficit $150,000,000 Above Estimate

Incidentally, on that occasion at a press conference, Mr. Roosevelt prefaced his recital of figures with the statement that reporters did not know the difference between dollars and cents and that despite the stories they had been writing the year would end with expenditures only $75,000,000 in excess of his April figure. Secretary Henry Morgenthau and Acting Director of the Budget Daniel Bell yesterday revealed that expenditures were $220,000,000 in excess of Mr. Roosevelt's April estimate.

A feature of Secretary Morgenthau's statement on the results of the last fiscal year was the revelation that hereafter items wherein repayments are offset against expenditures will be separately classified and differentiated from direct expenditures chargeable wholly against the general receipts of the Government. Under the old method, these repayments were included, as net credits to be deducted, along with expenses. He arranged the items for the last fiscal year under the new classification.

The result was immediately to give a clearer picture of Treasury expenditures. Thus, through a glance at Morgenthau's new tabulated form, it was seen that expenditures for the general departments—so-called ordinary expenses—totaled $4,361,000,000 last year or $475,000,000 more than in the previous year. Recovery and relief expenditures were shown to have been $3,015,000,000 or $160,000,000 more than in the previous 12 months.

Thus for general, recovery and relief activities the Treasury in the year just ended spent $635,000,000 more than in the previous year. The reason the grand total of expenses for the last year was less was that in the previous year there was the heavy non-recurring net item of $1,216,000,000 for payment of the soldiers' bonus.

The items comprising the increase in general expenditures included $155,000,000 for social security; $180,000,000 for expansion of public works; $92,000,000 for armaments; $117,000,000 for interest on the public debt and $85,000,000 chiefly in departmental items. Offsetting this in part were decreases of $100,000,000 in C. C. C. expenses; $44,000,000 in the postal deficiency and $10,000,000 on account of the AAA program. The $160,000,000 increase in relief and recovery was attributed to the drought and floods of the year.

Interest Payments Higher.

The jump of $117,000,000 in interest payments was the largest annual increase recorded in that figure since the days immediately after the World War. This increase brought the total for interest on the debt to $838,000,000. The average rate of interest on the interest-bearing debt increased from 2.559 per cent on June 30, 1936, to 2.582 per cent on June 30, last.

The most unusual feature of Secretary Morgenthau's report, however, was the disclosure that the Treasury had failed to meet the statutory debt retirement or sinking fund requirements. The estimated debt retirement required by law was given by the President in the budget last January as $404,500,000. This estimate, incidentally, was $175,000,000 less than the estimate for the 1937 fiscal year made by the President in January, 1936.

Instead of meeting the full $404,500,000 debt retirement requirement, the Treasury paid only $104,000,000 into the sinking fund, thus escaping a bookkeeping expenditure of $300,000,000. In the past the Treasury has closely approximated the debt retirement requirement, even though such transactions amounted to no more than bookkeeping entries.

In 1930 when the first Hoover deficit loomed on the horizon there was agitation for abandoning or sharply curtailing the debt retirement requirements. Former President Herbert Hoover, however, took a firm stand against such action, contending that "it is sound governmental finance to hold to the sinking fund provisions of the public debt."

Mr. Roosevelt likewise adhered to these provisions until now. This reversal of policy, however, was not wholly unexpected. Mr. Roosevelt last January ridiculed the idea of taking items from one column and off-setting them in another. He spoke of a "layman's budget" versus an "accountant's budget."

In his April budgetary statement he made no reference whatever to the debt retirement figures. The net result of meeting only one-fourth of the debt retirement requirements is to place a more favorable light on the Treasury's gross deficit for the last fiscal year compared with previous years.

Secretary Morgenthau gave this explanation for the failure to meet the sinking fund requirements in full:

"For the past two years the Treasury has followed the policy of applying to the sinking fund only the amount of Treasury notes and Liberty bonds redeemed in cash and has not purchased any Government securities in the market or reduced exchange offerings in refunding operations in order to further reduce the available balance in the sinking fund.

"This policy has left a substantial credit in the sinking fund. To have exhausted this full credit would have made it necessary for the Treasury to increase its cash offerings of securities without any net change in public debt. The total amount available in the sinking fund for the fiscal year 1937 was $723,000,000. After deducting the amount applied to cash redemptions, namely, $104,000,000, the amount in the sinking fund carried over to the fiscal year 1938 is $619,000,000, which together with the appropriation available for the fiscal year 1938, will make a total credit in the sinking fund of approximately $1,200,000,000.

"It appears advisable to continue to apply the sinking fund only to cash redemptions until such time as the total receipts of the Government exceed the total expenditures, exclusive of debt retirement. It will then be possible for the Treasury to purchase securities in the market for account of the sinking fund, or to refund only a portion of maturing issues, leaving the balance to be retired through sinking fund operations."

2 Congressmen Launch Attack On Dieckhoff

McCormack, Celler Warn Against 'Propaganda' of Nazi Agents.

Representatives John W. McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, and Emanuel Celler (Democrat), New York, in a radio dialogue prepared for delivery last night, made a broadside attack on the German embassy and consular corps in the United States, declaring they are instruments of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's "vile propaganda."

McCormack asserted that the new German Ambassador, Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff, will "bear watching," and added, that "he is reported to represent the beginning of a new era in Fascist propaganda in the United States. He is as well trained in diplomacy as he is skilled in the art of propaganda.

"His instructions are, so it is understood, to influence our foreign policy as not to have it interfere with Hitler's plans to "Nazi-ize America."

McCormack said the investigation disclosed that Hitler spared no expense to send agents all over the world.

"Hitler is using his agents to spread his vile propaganda and instill fear into the minds of those of German blood in the United States," McCormack charged.

McCormack said he believed "vast numbers of American young men" are engaged in military drilling by Nazi instructors in practically every city of consequence in the United States.

Both Congressmen charged German government and private German firms in the United States with supporting and subsidizing anti-American Nazi activities.

"Hitler agents have also established Nazi military camps in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Texas, Wisconsin and California and other States," Celler said.

Vigorous Onion Gets More Vigor In Hybridization Experiments

Crossing and Sterilization Produce Larger and Healthier Products Than Found on Other Breeds.

The United States Government has put vigor into the onion.

Henry A. Jones, Bureau of Plant Industry, Agriculture Department, has produced a hybrid onion with much of the vigor usually found in hybrid corn and these are flourishing now in the commercial onion districts of California.

Now larger onions "with consequent heavier yields, resistance to mildew and less tendency to bolt (bolting is going to seed instead of forming a bulb) are objectives of the plant breeders" under auspices of Uncle Sam.

Back in 1925, a self-sterile Italian red onion plant was found at the California Agricultural Experimental Station in a field where all plants were self-pollinated by inclosing each umbel in a paper bag. The plant did not produce seed, but was reproduced by planting the small aerial bulbs which form on the onion stem. Flowers on the sterile onions, grown from the bulbs, developed seed when pollinated with flowers from other plants. This cross corresponds to the top cross for hybrid corn.

"To combine the vigor, delayed bolting habit, and other desirable qualities of the sterile onion with those of certain inbred lines and commercial varieties, the scientists made a number of controlled crosses in an effort to get hybrids superior to either parent and to existing varieties in the California area," it was reported.

"The hybrids were grown in six central California locations in 1935. And these, without exception, produced larger onions and were less susceptible to bolting. And the work goes apace:

As in the early stages of hybrid corn breeding, scientists now are seeking a way to propagate the sterile onion in sufficient quantities to provide plants for pollination. Likewise, they hope to extend the area in which the hybrid may be grown.

Amelia Earhart Feared Forced Down Into Pacific Near Tiny Island Goal

Coast Guard Speeds Search; Plane's Fuel Supply Gave Out

Safety of Woman Flier and Navigator Depends Upon Buoyancy of Gas Tanks; Position of Machine in Doubt.

after 4 p. m. Am searching probable area and will continue."

The Itasca is a white, 250-foot cutter which would be easy to see for miles in the clear weather prevailing in the vicinity of Howland.

Fear was expressed that Miss Earhart and her navigator might be threatened by sharks which infest the Pacific along the equator.

Putnam Requests Aid.

In a message to Washington, the flier's husband, George Palmer Putnam, awaiting her return to this country at the Oakland, Calif., airport, said that "technicians familiar with Miss Earhart's plane believe, with its large tanks, it can float almost indefinitely."

"With retractable landing gear and smooth seas," the message continued, "safe landing (on the sea) should have been practicable.

"Request such assistance as is practicable from naval aircraft and surface craft stationed at Honolulu.

"Apparently plane's position not far from Howland."

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations, instructed the commandant of the naval station at Honolulu tonight to render whatever aid he may deem practicable.

A number of fast surface vessels, mostly destroyers, are now at Honolulu, as well as more than a score of long-range naval bombing planes. The commandant at Honolulu has complete discretion to employ planes and ships in the search if weather and other conditions permit.

Coast Guardsmen here expressed belief aviation's first lady and her companion had overshot the minute island and come down somewhere in the vast midpacific region far removed from regular shipping lanes.

The cutter Itasca prepared to search the little known area northwest of Howland.

Bound around the world on an equatorial flight of more than 27,000 miles Miss Earhart had flown since May 21 from Oakland, Calif., in relatively leisurely stages.

Arriving at Lae, New Guinea, June 28, Miss Earhart awaited favorable weather for the attempt to negotiate the unflown miles to Howland Island, the dot of land which represents the United States' frontier in the South Pacific and which is regarded as a potential stepping stone on an air line between the Pacific Coast and the antipodes.

They left Lae at 7 p. m. Thursday, expecting to complete the flight in 18 or 20 hours.

The Navy tug Ontario stood by half-way between New Guinea and Howland, but was not heard from. The Itasca, waiting to receive Miss Earhart at the island, received only the barest reports on her progress until the message came that her fuel was about gone.

The next nearest land to Howland is Jarvis Island, a similar midpacific dot 40 miles north. Outside of these virtual sandbars there is nothing but water for hundreds of miles.

"Her six gasoline tanks, with a total capacity of 1,000 gallons, provide extraordinary flotation. They are sealed when empty and will act the same, if she is down in the Pacific, as big drums attached to a raft," said Mantz, long an adviser to Miss Earhart.

"I am convinced that she would be able to keep afloat long enough for any vessel within several miles to reach her."

Howland Island is many hours behind Eastern time and daylight still existed there with a smooth sea and good visibility prevailing.

"The plane should float but I couldn't estimate for how long because a Lockheed plane has never been forced down at sea before," explained Putnam.

"The plane's large wing and empty gasoline tanks should provide sufficient buoyancy if it came to rest on the sea without being damaged.

"There was a two-man rubber lifeboat aboard the plane, together with life belts, flares, a Very pistol and a large yellow signal kite which could be flown above the plane or the life raft."

Carried Emergency Rations.

Putnam said his wife had planned to take emergency food rations and plenty of water on the hazardous flight, the most dangerous on her trip around the world.

Miss Earhart is no stranger to ocean flying emergencies and Noonan, former navigator of transpacific clippers, is noted for his ability in that line.

The noted woman flier went through her first flying emergency in 1928 when she and Wilmer Stutz and Lou Gordon flew across the Atlantic.

In 1932 she flew across the Atlantic alone. In January, 1936, she flew solo from Honolulu to Oakland, across 2,400 miles of the Pacific.

Starting off last spring on her first attempt at a world circling flight in the equatorial regions, Miss Earhart flew from Oakland to Honolulu, but cracked up there in attempting to take off for Howland Island, more than 1,500 miles to the south.

As in many previous brushes with potential death, Miss Earhart again escaped injury, shipped her plane back to California and determined to start again.

Once more she left Oakland last May, determined to fly around the world, this time in an easterly direction. On June 1 she left Miami, Fla., flew to South America, across the Atlantic to Africa, over Arabia, India and Australia to British New Guinea, where she faced the most difficult of all her projected flights.

Aviators who inspected Miss Earhart's plane after its crack-up here last spring said its aluminum frame made it durable and possibly able to withstand some of the sea's pounding. The empty gas tanks, of 1,151 gallons capacity, also were regarded as potential life floats.

Fliers said the plane's radio would be workable from the surface of the sea unless damaged in landing.

An airplane, tossing on the Pacific swells offers a poor objective to vessels seeking it, she once pointed out.

Small Target for Plane.

The coral island, 2 miles long and only a few feet above sea level, presented a small target for the plane flying the great expanse of Pacific Ocean, dotted sparsely with other small atolls.

The Coast Guard officers consulted with the Army commanders in Honolulu concerning the possibility of sending land or sea planes from Honolulu, but officials said this was unlikely.

Two German fliers and a Portuguese companion, forced down in the Atlantic Ocean during a flight from Lisbon to New York in 1931, floated 158 hours atop their half-submerged land plane, and were rescued off the Newfoundland coast.

Willy Rody, Christian Johanssen, the Germans, and Fernando Costa Viega, the Portuguese, took off September 13, 1931.

Approaching the American coast, their plane, the Esa, encountered heavy storms; their engine failed, and they were forced into the sea.

Floated for Week.

For a week, the trio, perched atop the plane, floated. Wing and cabin structure was credited by them for buoyancy of the ship.

September 21, after they had been given up as dead, the Norwegian motorship Belmoira radioed she had sighted the wrecked plane 8 miles off Cape Pine, a treacherous section of the coast. Five days later the fliers were brought to New York.

Howland Island is 1½-mile long treeless sandspit, strategically located on the direct air route between Hawaii and Australia. It is nearly 2,000 miles southwest of Honolulu.

Uninhabited until two years ago, it came into public notice when the Commerce Department took possession of it along with two other Pacific islets, Baker, 40 miles to the north, and Jarvis, more than 1,000 miles to the east.

For more than two years relays of Hawaiian schoolboys have lived on each, making meteorological observations and maintaining title for the United States.

President Roosevelt, by an Executive order in May last year, transferred jurisdiction to the Interior Department. Early this year a small public works allotment financed the construction of runways on Howland for a South Pacific air field.

The other islets have not been improved.

Miss Earhart had selected Howland for the next stop of her round-the-world flight earlier this year when she cracked up at Honolulu.

The Hawaiian boys maintained on Howland, Baker and Jarvis are paid $3 a day by the Interior Department to maintain their vigil. Groups of four are taken to each island every three months.

Mrs. Noonan Hopeful.

Oakland, Calif., July 2 (AP).—Mrs. Frederick Noonan, wife of the navigator of Amelia Earhart's world-girdling plane, called the Oakland Tribune this afternoon to ask whether the plane had landed safely at Howland Island in mid-Pacific.

She was read an Associated Press dispatch to the effect that Miss Earhart and her husband probably were forced down in the open sea.

"If they are forced down," she said, "I believe they will be saved by the Itasca."

Mrs. Noonan, who operates an Oakland beauty parlor, said she would remain at her work there pending definite word of the fate of Miss Earhart and her husband.

Man Is Indicted For 'Revenge' Wreck of Taxi

Assault, 2 Embezzlement Charges Issued as Jury Is Dismissed.

The "revenge" destruction of a cab in the Potomac River brought the indictment of Maurice S. Sweeney here yesterday as the District grand jury was dismissed. The taxi, belonging to Clair A. Kinsinger, 44, of 2423 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was pushed from his home to the river and dumped in. Police are still seeking others said to have been connected with the crime.

A charge of criminally assaulting a young girl was preferred against William Carroll Kirby, 44, who was accused of taking her to Roosevelt Island in the Potomac, where they had gone canoeing.

Two former bank employes were indicted on charges of embezzling funds of their banks. They were Charles Benjamin Hagan, Kensington, Md., an erstwhile employe of the National Metropolitan Bank, and William Newman Dorsett, at one time head teller of the American Security & Trust Co.

In its indictment, the grand jury alleged Hagan had misappropriated some $5,300 of the bank's funds through withdrawal slips on the account of Mrs. Martha B. Parks, of 2305 California street northwest. The alleged shortage was discovered when Mrs. Parks sought to transfer her account last March. Her pass book showed a balance of $5,665.20, but bank records indicated only $97.76. Hagan, now a laundry wagon driver, had been employed at the bank for 16 years. He is married and has one child.

In the other bank indictment, Dorsett was charged with embezzling $1,256 and misapplying $1,650 during the last year. An overdraft in the account of the Church of the Nativity led to his arrest, although Dorsett denied he had taken any money.

Miss Earhart's Flying Career Marked by Numerous 'Firsts'

Eastward Flight Around World Featured by Remarkable Series of Successful Hops; Indian Monsoon Gave Most Trouble.

By the Associated Press.

Amelia Earhart, the first woman ever to be presented with the gold medal of the National Geographic Society, lifted her Lockheed Electra monoplane off a runway at Miami, Fla., June 1 on the first leg of her flight around the world.

The flight, she had said, was being made "just for fun."

It had been interrupted once. Her careening ship was badly damaged when a tire blew out during a takeoff at Honolulu on March 20. She had planned on flying around the world westward and had completed one of the most hazardous portions of the trip—from the American continent to Hawaii—when the accident occurred.

The ship, called her "flying laboratory," was sent back to southern California for repairs before she could resume the attempt. Then she decided to abandon the westward globe-girdling flight and make the attempt eastward. Weather was the determining factor in her decision.

Veteran Ocean Flier.

She reached San Juan, her first port on the eastward journey, in a few hours' flying time and successively put in at Caripito, a Dutch Guiana City, at a tiny northeastern Brazil seaport and at Natal before drawing her breath for the long skip across the South Atlantic to South Africa.

Ocean flying, of course, was nothing new to her. She had been the first woman to fly the Atlantic north of the equator—or south of it, for that matter—the first of her sex to solo the Atlantic and the first person, man or woman, to fly the Atlantic twice.

Among her other "firsts" was her solo from Hawaii to California, January 11-12, 1935, the only person ever to negotiate that route alone. That went for both men and women.

When she pointed the nose of her swift, bi-motored, low-wing machine eastward across the South Atlantic June 6, her goal was Dakar, French Senegal, 1,900 miles away. That was some 500 miles less than the route between California and Hawaii, and it held no terrors for her.

Missed Earlier Mark.

She missed her mark—confessing later that she overruled her navigator as to the direction which should be taken when they reached the African coast—but she coasted in to a safe landing at St. Louis, capital of Senegal.

Aviators at Dakar said they believed she had set a record in flying the route eastward in 13 hours, 22 minutes. The westward mark, also held by a woman, was 12 hours, 5 minutes.

Her next objective was Khartoum, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. Her route already had been mapped by the British, who flew it regularly, and it would enable her to avoid the Sahara Desert. Intermediate hops would carry her to Niamey, principal city in the French Niger colony, some 1,350 miles straight east from Dakar, and from there 850 miles southward to Fort Lamy, in Chad territory, French equatorial Africa.

At the last minute, however, after a leisurely stay at Dakar, she and Capt. Noonan altered their plans to skirt a storm area, and on June 10 put down their plane to a perfect landing at Gao, French West Africa, an outpost along the Niger River. The distance was 1,140 miles and their flying time 7 hours 55 minutes.

Dared Steaming Jungle.

The following day they left Gao for a trip across the jungles of one of the wildest portions of the African continent. Steam rose from the swampy forests, impeding visibility, as Miss Earhart followed the French Air-Afrique route at a low altitude to glimpse airway markings.

She went on, without landing at Niamey, to put down her airplane at Fort Lamy.

The hop from Assab to India was one of the most hazardous on her entire voyage. The distance was slightly greater than that across the North Atlantic from Newfoundland to Ireland, which she had negotiated in 1932, and her non-stop 1,900 miles carried her over the Red Sea.

On June 17 she took off for Calcutta and the following day for Bankok, Siam, across the Bay of Bengal, but here she began encountering treacherous monsoon weather. Landing at Akyab, Burma, Miss Earhart and Navigator Noonan three times tried to break through steadily cascading sheets of water from the skies before they managed to achieve 400 miles. They came down at Rangoon.

Skirted Sumatran Coast.

Skirting the coast of Sumatra after another hop which took their bimotored ship to Singapore, Straits Settlements, the two fliers leisurely traveled to Bandoeng, Java, in The Netherlands East Indies, June 21. Her next stop was Darwin, Australia, and from that point on the vast reaches of the Pacific Ocean confronted her.

With a flight from New Guinea to tiny Howland Island, in the Pacific, ahead of her, Miss Earhart began easing up on her schedule. Flying in equatorial heat was tiring, and she elected to rest three days in Bandoeng before taking off for Sourabaya, Java.

It was only a breeze to Sourabaya for her swift mount—250 miles—but that from Sourabaya to Koepang, Timor, Dutch East Indies, was a preview in miniature of the ocean hop which was to be the longest of the entire globe-girdling trip.

At the last moment she decided to fly straight through from Bandoeing to Koepang, some 1,200 miles. The trip was uneventful. Successively she touched in Timor, at Port Darwin, Australia, and at Lae, New Guinea.

French Avert Hotel Lockout By Agreement

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 2.—Premier Camille Chautemps' office tonight announced "unofficially" that a "compromise in principle" had been reached among hotel, restaurant and cafe owners and workers, averting a threatened lockout of establishments throughout France.

Owners had scheduled a shutdown to begin tomorrow as a protest against a five-day, 40-hour week decreed for their employes by the Chautemps government just after it took office.

At the same time, to offset the devaluation of the franc, Fernand Chapsal, minister of commerce, promised the Senate all tariffs would be raised 15 per cent.

He declared such action would be taken soon after the Upper House passed a bill giving the government full power to change tariffs. The Chamber already has adopted the bill.

France's troubled finances reacted on the nation another way, meanwhile, as the new government exercised its fiscal decree powers to prohibit a rise in wholesale and retail prices.

The step was taken to prevent profiteering because of the newly devalued franc. Violators were threatened with fines and imprisonment.

The devalued "floating franc" steadied on its second day in foreign exchange, maintaining the approximate levels of yesterday's close at 26.06 francs to the dollar.

Juvenile Court Will Bring Cut In Dependency

Revised Welfare Measure to Permit Preventive Social Work.

This is the third and last of a series on child welfare problems in Washington.

By Christine Sadler.

When the District of Columbia gets a new Juvenile Court law and a revised public welfare law, preventive social welfare will be possible and child dependency reduced by at least one-fifth, according to welfare workers and social agencies behind efforts to get the laws enacted at this session of Congress.

This will remove Washington from its unenviable position as third city of its size in number of children dependent on public care, but it will not eliminate juvenile dependency. What do the agencies have in mind for the 1,500 children who will remain public wards?

At present, according to findings of the child welfare survey released this week by the Children's Bureau, 47 per cent of the 1,966 children cared for by the 20 public and private agencies in the District are in institutions. Forty-three per cent are in family homes in which board is paid; 8 per cent are in free homes, and 2 per cent are in wage or work homes.

Right to Home Stressed.

The right of every child to a home of his own has been recognized by social welfare workers for a number of years and was the principal point stressed at the first White House Conference on the Care of Dependent Children in 1909. Throughout the Nation since that time the trend has been away from institutional care.

In keeping with this trend, the child welfare division of the Board of Public Welfare in the District has employed the "foster home" method of caring for the children in its care. Almost 1,300 of the 1,500 children on its rolls are in 360 foster homes scattered throughout the District, Maryland and Virginia.

A. Patricia Morss, head of the division, points out that country homes are much to be preferred over the usual city home as foster abodes for young children.

"More than half of our homes are in Maryland and Virginia. The self-sufficiency of a country home has a stabilizing effect on the child. We have none farther away than 35 miles, however, because we make arrangements for real parents to visit the children in their foster homes."

No Change in Principle.

The foster home feature of the division's work will not be changed in principle when the new laws are enacted, although it is hoped that increased budgets will make it possible for staff workers to investigate foster homes more thoroughly.

"There is no magic in foster homes as such. Unless the home and the child are adjusted to each other, placement in a family home may be as unfortunate as placement in the wrong kind of institution," declares Emma O. Lundberg, of the Children's Bureau.

"Limitations of staff, as well as insufficient funds for boarding, prevent the Child Welfare Division from giving all its wards suitable care. . . . There is urgent need for larger child-placing and supervisory staffs, so that children requiring foster homes may be placed in those that will assure the right kind of training and care for each child," the survey states.

Under present circumstances public institutions are sometimes used for dependent as well as delinquent children "because the institutions are readily available." The type of foster home selected is often governed by "financial necessity rather than needs of the child."

System Defended.

Although it is generally agreed that too many of the District's dependent children are in institutions, welfare workers are quick to point out that there are children who are better suited to institutional life than to live in a foster home.

"When there is a whole family of dependent children, for instance, it is much better to keep them together. Not many foster homes can be expanded to take in six or seven children at the same time. The average number of children in our foster homes is three, although some homes have five.

"Also, there are individual children whose emotional needs are better satisfied in institutions. There is no stigma attached to institutions today, when they are run on the modern and normal basis," Miss Morss says.

When funds are available and legal basis for constructive and preventive social welfare work is secured, then the agencies in charge of welfare of dependent children in the District will endeavor to find for every child "the type of home most suited for his needs." Whenever possible this will be his own home, for when the District's archaic laws are modernized children will not be forced into dependency as public wards. Every effort will be made to keep the family together and to assist it financially when need be—an assistance which is now often legally impossible.

Only One of Two Ships Forced Down in Pacific Ever Rescued

Comdr. Rodgers, Crew of Four Saved After Nine Days Adrift; Charles Ulm, His Two Companions Never Were Found.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 2.—Two famous stories, one heartening and one frightening, of tossing planes on the waves of the Pacific were recalled tonight by the apparent descent of Amelia Earhart at sea near Howland Island.

One was the tale of Commander John S. Rodgers and his four Navy fliers, who were forced down by a fuel shortage in 1925. They were adrift for nine days, most of the time without food or water, before a submarine found them, gaunt but alive.

The other was the unfinished story of Charles P. Ulm and his crew of two bound from here to Hawaii in 1934, as was Rodgers, but lost somewhere off the Island of Oahu after one feeble S. O. S.

Ulm was hunted 27 days in the Pacific's greatest search, involving 34 Army and Navy planes and 23 submarines and destroyers.

First to Attempt Hop.

Commander Rodgers was first to attempt the hop between California and Hawaii. He left San Pablo Bay, Calif., in a seaplane and flew 28 hours before his fuel gave out.

As dusk lowered on September 1, 1925, Rodgers flashed to a Navy destroyer that he was going through a "hellish storm" and his gasoline was giving out. An hour later the plane had to come down on the waves.

After he reached safety Rodgers wrote for the Associated Press his own story of the ordeal.

"Due to total expenditure of gasoline," he wrote, "we could not use radio and were therefore out of communication by twilight (of the day the PN-9 was forced down). We rigged an antenna on the plane and received, without much difficulty, everything that was in the air.

"We sailed before the wind, endeavoring to work the plane in toward the Hawaiian Islands, hoping to make Oahu. We made 50 miles a day. That is an average of 2 miles an hour . . ."

Sail from Wing Fabric.

"We cut the fabric from the lower wing and rigged a foresail . . . We knew we could get along without food, of which we had small emergency rations. We were depending on a small water still for water."

Rodgers and his men managed to get the still going on the sixth day by burning wood from the trailing edges of the lower wings. On the seventh day they made half a canteen of water. Until then, they had stretched a meager supply of two canteens to meet the needs of all five men.

Once the floating PN-9 crossed the steamer lane from Honolulu and Rodgers and his men stood by helplessly, watching a ship cross their bow about 5 miles ahead, unaware of their plight.

"Due probably to the fact that the sun was low and directly in the eyes of the observer we were not seen," wrote the laconic commander.

"We passed Oahu at about 40 miles distance, the island being clearly visible, the afternoon of the 8th, and headed and close-hauled for Kauai. We had reached a point about 15 miles off Nawiliwili and were trying to signal that port when we were sighted by the patroling submarine 10 miles off Nawilwili, were taken in tow and towed into the harbor, where the whole island population was out to receive us."

Paddled Plane Into Harbor.

"The most exciting part of the whole journey," to the veteran Rodgers, "was getting the plane anchored safe in the harbor of Nawiliwili."

Haggard and starved, Comdr. Rodgers nevertheless insisted on paddling the plane into the little harbor with a crude oar.

Rodgers died a year later in the crash of a land plane in the shallow Delaware River, near the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

The Coast Guard cutter Itasca, now seeking Miss Earhart's silver plane, was last to give up the search in 1934 for Ulm.

Even after the Navy gave up, Hawaiians staked hopes on the myriad Japanese fishing sampans that cruised 300 to 500 miles offshore.

Like Miss Earhart, the Australians presumably "overshot their mark" in attempting to land on one of the Pacific's islands. Unlike Miss Earhart, they had declined to take a collapsible lifeboat.

Noonan Sailed Seas in Days of Windjammers

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Calif., July 2.—Fred Noonan, 44, master mariner on the sea and in the air, was graduated from the old white-winged square-riggers of Atlantic and Pacific sea lanes to the great monoplanes of the airways.

Twenty-two years of ocean travel as a navigator preceded his lengthy service as a flier. Seven times he rounded Cape Horn—three times in windjammers before completion of the Panama Canal.

He went to sea at the age of 15. Three of his ships were torpedoed in the World War. In the royal British navy service he served on the barque Crompton in 1910—the largest square-rigger under the British flag. He was weatherbound 152 days on a voyage from the Pacific Northwest to Ireland.

Noonan was instructor of aerial navigation for several transport companies. In 1930 he joined Pan-American Airways in Miami. He served as transport pilot; later as airport manager at Port au Prince; as traveling inspector and as instructor. He came to Oakland in 1935.

He was navigator of the first clipper ships pioneering the route from Oakland to Honolulu. He resigned after this service had been launched.

Noonan was educated in Chicago public schools, in a private military academy in Illinois, and attended a London nautical college. Last March he married Mary Marginella, of Oakland.

He participated in a number of rescues at sea. In one five French soldiers adrift at sea on an ice floe were saved. Another time the crew of a Portuguese fishing crew was rescued after the craft sank.

Wheat Planting Limit Rejected By Farm Group

Agriculture Department Will Carry Question Into States.

Brought to Washington to consider provisions for restricting the 1938 wheat acreage under the farm benefits system, 56 representatives of 31 wheat-growing States yesterday rejected the suggestions.

Despite the decision, the Department of Agriculture said the question would be carried to meetings of farmers in the States. Should the proposed restrictions not be adopted, wheat will continue, in next year's program, in its classification as a soil-depleting crop, but without acreage limitations.

Yesterday's action was taken while the Senate was passing the Bankhead $85,000,000 farm-tenant bill as a substitute for the measure previously passed by the House. The Senate bill creates a Federal land buying and selling agency; the House had voted for a $85,000,000 direct loan system to enable tenant farmers to buy farms of their own.

Big Planting Expected.

The wheat area leaders, in conference with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, H. R. Tolley, AAA chief, and Government economists, conceded that with wheat prices up, and world supply small, there probably would be a near-record planting for next year's harvest. Some were reported to have held that provisions of the soil conservation act could not hold wheat acreage to normal levels. Nevertheless, the group voted against so conditioning Federal benefit payments that they would restrict plantings.

Present policies permit a grower to raise as much wheat as he wishes, so long as he shifts part of his acreage from corn, oats and other crops to those classed as soil conserving.

Wheat acreage seeded for this year's harvest was about 80,000,000 acres, the largest on record.

Merit System Rejected.

In the farm tenancy action on Capitol Hill, the vote to substitute the plan of Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, for the House plan, followed adoption of several amendments dealing with appointments to the proposed administrative agency, the Farmers Home Corporation, and with its powers.

The Senate rejected a proposal by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, to put officials and employes under civil service.

Appropriations of $10,000,000 this year, $25,000,000 in 1939 and $50,000,000 in 1940 to finance the corporation are carried in the measure.

J. T. Underwood Dies; Founder Of Big Concern

Industrialist Organized Typewriter Company Bearing His Name.

By the Associated Press.

Hartford, Conn., July 2.—John T Underwood, 80, retired chairman of the Underwood-Elliott-Fisher Co., and founder of the Underwood typewriter business, died early today at his summer home at Cape Cod, Mass.

Mr. Underwood had been in poor health for some time. The illness became acute this week.

Born in London, England, April 12, 1857, he was the son of John Underwood, a manufacturing chemist. His father moved to this country with his family while Underwood still was in school in France, and founded the firm of John Underwood & Co., pioneer manufacturers of carbon paper, ink and ribbon to the typewriter trade, in Durham, N. J.

The factory was later moved to Brooklyn, N. Y.

After his father's death, Underwood became interested in the infant typewriter industry and first began to produce machines in New York City and later in Bayonne, N. J.

As the business continued to expand, the company in 1901 moved to Hartford, Conn.

At that time 300 employes produced 36 machines a day. The present factory employes 6,000 and produces more than 100 standard typewriters an hour, aside from portables and bookkeeping machines.

Fleeing Colored Man Hit by Police Cycle

James Johnson, 35, colored, of 1549 Columbia street northwest, was injured last night when he attempted to jump from a moving auto and was run over by Private John Boyd, of the Traffic Division, who was chasing Johnson on his motorcycle.

Speeding down Fifth street, Johnson was sighted by Boyd at New York avenue. Upon reaching Ninth street Johnson attempted to leap from the moving car and was run down by the pursuing officer. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital.

Interlaken, N. Y., July 2 (AP).—Two men drowned in Cayuga Lake tonight after one of the firecrackers they were firing blew a hole in their rowboat.

Memphis to 'Mug' All Drunken Drivers

Memphis, Tenn., July 2 (AP).—Police Chief Will D. Lee said today all drunken drivers here will be treated as "potential murderers."

"Hereafter, when a person is arrested on a drunken driving charge," Lee said, "he will be forced to go through the police identification bureau, be 'mugged' with a number across his chest and be fingerprinted."

The blare of trumpets echoed yesterday down the reaches of a canvas city that looks warlike, but isn't. A Scout band rehearses—Sousa marches and "Hail, Hail the Gang's All Here."

are here as representatives of Region 2.

At one stage in the second act, more than 150 boxing matches were going on simultaneously, from paperweights to heavyweights. At other times the greensward was alive with first-aid exhibitions, signal contests, piggy-back tilting and other stunts.

Climax of the night's program was the formation of a human American flag by 2,000 boys, who achieved the effect by taking a kneeling position and draping red, white and blue neckerchiefs across their backs.

Earlier in the day, former Senator Warren W. Barbour, of New Jersey, and Raymond Lowe, of Omaha, Nebr., were elected to the executive board of the National Council. They will fill the places vacated by the deaths of Judge Frederick Kernochan and Frank Presby, of New York.

Principal excitement yesterday was furnished by a tent fire in the Monument Grounds. Although damage was only $45 and the blaze extinguished promptly by Engine Company No. 32, stationed nearby, hundreds of Scouts and sightseers were attracted to the scene.

"Fountain of Youth."

"Fountain of Youth" is the title of tonight's show, which begins at 8 o'clock. Its performers are Scouts from Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Louisiana, Tennessee and Arkansas.

The Sea Scouts' port watch will make the same trip Tuesday.

Apologizing in Spanish for being several days late, Alfonso Fabian, Guatemala's one-man delegation to the Jamboree, arrived at camp yesterday. Extremely proud of his tiny Central American homeland, Fabian immediately set up his exhibition of rugs, hand-woven cloth, napkins, belts and other samples of native handiwork.

He is billeted with the Mexicans.

Section Q, the international colony, is now up to quota with the exception of the Hungarians and Czechoslovakians. These countries were supposed to be represented, and Scout officials are puzzled over the delay.

For the first time in the history of scouting, Boy Scouts in full uniform will assist at a pontificial mass tomorrow morning, it was announced yesterday. The rites, a solemn pontificial field mass, will be celebrated in the Jamboree Theater on the South Monument Grounds at 10 a. m.

3,500 to Participate.

More than 3,000 Catholic boys attending the encampment and more than 500 from the parishes in the Archdiocese of Baltimore will participate.

By invitation of the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, the Most Rev. Joseph F. Rummell, Archbishop of New Orleans, will pontificate at the throne. The Most Rev. Francis J. L. Beckman, Archbishop of Dubuque, will preach the sermon.

Scouts from parishes in Washington will perform the functions of acolytes and other altar assistants. Officers of the mass will be Scout chaplains from their home dioceses. The arena bleachers will accommodate 12,000 persons, and the public is invited.

Catholic chaplain of the Jamboree camp is the Rev. Louis C. Vaeth, who is assisted by the Rev. P. Barcelo, C. S. C., and 20 priests from the United States and foreign countries. Mass is celebrated daily in sections of the camp where Catholic boys are located.

Several thousand campers visited Mount Vernon yesterday. Before the Jamboree closes next Friday, all 27,000 of the boys and their older leaders will have visited the Washington shrine.

The Naval Academy was host to 365 Sea Scouts constituting the starboard watch of the Jamboree contingent, Lieut. A. J. Bolton of the President's Jamboree Committee conducting the sightseers to Annapolis.

Sidelights of Jamboree

"Uncle Dan" Beard, 87-year-old National Scout Commissioner, presented Eagle badges last night to 20 Texas boys.

Judge Robert H. Scott flew here from Los Angeles to attend yesterday's twenty-seventh annual meeting of the National Council. He will remain in Washington for the duration of the Jamboree.

Voting opened yesterday in the Boys' Life tent on flags submitted in the National Patrol Flag Contest. The three banners that poll the most ballots will win $25, $15 and $10 for their sponsors. Frank L. Rigney, of Boys' Life, is in charge of the exhibit.

An owl believed to be nearly 100 years old is doing mascot duty for one of the east Texas troops. His admirers call him Judge Montgomery and he answers back, "Hoo-hoo."

"Uncle Dan" Beard blossomed out yesterday in his summer uniform, a white ensemble which elicited second looks wherever he went on the 350-acre reservation.

The Jamboree Journal reports the plight of an unidentified man who walked up to a Scout in Section L and asked if he knew so-and-so, his son. Desirous though the Scouts was of doing the visitor a good turn, he couldn't place the lad and asked father for a description.

"Well," came the reply, "he's about 14, has dark hair and eyes, is wearing a brown shirt, brown shorts, a broad-brimmed hat, tan shoes, and has a scarf around his neck."

As if in preparation for the focus of Scout cameras, the letters marking the bureau are large and black against a white background—so that there will be no trouble proving to the folks back home, the subjects being photographed "stood where J. Edgar Hoover stood."

With only three of the ten Jamboree days ended, many of the Scouts already are loaded down with Washington souvenirs that range all the way from restaurant menus to cake plates bearing pictures of the Capitol.

Losses of Scouts In 'No Man's Land' Virginia Problem

The "No Man's Land" question asserted itself again yesterday, this time in connection with the Boy Scout Jamboree.

Comprising a large acreage near the Virginia end of Highway Bridge and along a portion of Roue 1, "No Man's Land" derives its name from the fact its title and jurisdiction are still in dispute between Virginia and the Federal Government.

Many Scout tents are pitched in the moot zone, and yesterday United States Park Police were summoned to investigate reports of blankets and other supplies being stolen from one of the supply tents. When the officers discovered the thefts had been committed in "No Man's Land," they requested Sheriff Howard Fields, of Arlington County, to take over the case.

A colored man was reported held late yesterday in the Arlington Jail and two others were being sought.

The Texas Arrives For Training Trip

Tomorrow 16 officers and 180 men from the Maryland Reserve, together with contingents from Richmond, Norfolk and Newport News, will board the battleship for a cruise to Boston.

The gunboat Erie and the destroyers J. Fred Talbott, Roper, Fairfax, Jacob Jones, Claxton and Manley arrived back at the Academy during the day with 200 members of the junior class, who have been cruising off the Atlantic Coast. Next week the squadron will take another group of 200 juniors on a similar cruise.

Stock Issue Approved For Arlington Bus Line

Richmond, Va., July 2 (AP).—Arlington and Fairfax Motor Transportation Co. was authorized today by the State corporation commission to issue 100 shares of $100 par common stock and to apply the $10,000 proceeds to pay outstanding obligations and to purchase new equipment.

Scout Workers' Pension Plan Launched Here

President Walter W. Head of the Boy Scouts of America yesterday was empowered to appoint a committee to devise a system for pensioning aged or incapacitated employes of the organization.

J. W. Montgomery, of Portsmouth, submitted the resolution, which held that the withholding of an assured income for such employes "is not only unfair and unjust, but obviously poor business."

All officers were re-elected at the Jamboree, including President Roosevelt, honorary president. Others retained in office were Herbert Hoover, Colin H. Livingstone, Daniel Carter Beard and Senator William G. McAdoo, honorary vice-presidents; John Sherman Hoyt, Stuart W. French, Col. Theodore Roosevelt and Mell R. Wilkinson, vice presidents; Lewis Gawtry, treasurer; Dr. James E. West, chief Scout executive, and George J. Fisher, deputy chief Scout executive.

Head was re-elected as president, and "Uncle Dan" Beard will continue as national Scout commissioner.

The 13 members of the executive board whose terms expired this year were re-elected for three more years.

The council adopted resolutions of gratitude to President Roosevelt, the foreign nations who sent delegates here, public and private officials in Washington, volunteer Scout leaders and three-score clubs and societies which helped make the Jamboree possible.

Greetings also were sent to Lord Baden Powell, chief Scout of the world, who was reminded more than 1,000 American boys will go to the Fifth World Jamboree in Holland this summer.

Delegates to the meeting stood in honor of the Hero Scouts, whose names were presented by "Uncle Dan" Beard. Holders of life-saving awards from the National Court of Honor during the last year, numbering 22, received gold medals and certificates for heroism.

Roosevelt Asks Nation to War On Forest Fires

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 2.—In an appeal to the public to "keep fire away from our forests," President Roosevelt said tonight 25 per cent of all such fires were incendiary in origin and another 25 per cent were caused by smokers.

"We are destroying our forest wealth through fire alone at the rate of $51,000,000 a year," he said in a formal statement, issued in connection with the Department of Agriculture's education campaign at the Boy Sout Jamboree in Washington.

The President shortly before had inspected final plans for construction of a fire break on his own Val-Kill cottage farm near here.

"More than 30 years ago we, as a Nation, began a great battle to save our forest resources," he said.

"This battle we are renewing, I am proud to say, over a wide front.

"Twelve million acres of land unsuited to agriculture have been acquired by the Government since 1933, and will be given a chance to become again a rich domain of useful trees, clear streams, and abundant wild life.

"More than a billion seedlings have been set out in areas so completely ruined by cutting and burning that nature's methods of reforesting had little chance against man's methods of destruction.

"Foresters and the men of the CCC are doing their part in the battle to protect and increase our forest wealth, but they are waging a stubborn war against fire.

"Behind this simple statement there is a tragic story. Nine times out of ten the thing that starts a forest fire is man's carelessness or his indifference."

Fire Levels Tent in Heart of Scout Encampment

A flurry of excitement came to the Jamboree grounds yesterday when this tent, used by photographers, burned to the ground. An engine stationed on the grounds put out the fire. There was little damage save to the tent and some telephones.

Post Special Jamboree Reporter.

There was a radio broadcast direct from the grounds last evening. This program, which was over the National Broadcasting System, started with several selections played by a drum and bugle corps from Youngstown, Ohio.

JACK PARKER.

Next, a group of fellows from the Sierra Nevada Mountains, California, sang a song they had written to the tune of "Halls of Montezuma" about the Sierras. They were accompanied by a guitar, played by one of them.

As a final number, Homer Paul Anderson, editor of the Jamboree Journal, was introduced. He gave some of the last-minute news and oddities of the camp.

This was an enjoyable program, and I'm sure the assembled crowd found it so.

I had to arise at the early hour of 6 a. m. yesterday in order to participate in an excursion to Mount Vernon. I had been sleeping well, and it was cold so I was almost persuaded to call the trip off.

The other boys and I jumped around lively for a few minutes before breakfast because we were to leave as early as possible After hurriedly gulping down our breakfast, we set out on foot for Hains Point, where our boat was waiting.

With much singing and cheering, we marched in columns of four, the entire line being over half a mile long, to the City of Washington. The boat was docked by a barge off the west side of the point.

Our troop arrived among the first about 8:30 o'clock, and we went right on board. After patiently waiting for the rest of the party to arrive, we were off for a dandy time about 8:45.

The trip down was very enjoyable, as the air was cool and the weather clear and sunny. The only exciting incident on the way was one fellow losing his hat overboard. He had jumped up from his seat suddenly to see something on the deck below when a gust of wind caught it.

The boat docked at Mount Vernon about 9:45 o'clock. Again we had to wait for the seemingly never-ending column to pass from the ship. As soon as we were on land, we proceeded directly to the front lawn of the mansion. Here we disbanded to go as we wished, having made plans to meet under a tree later and proceed to the boat as a unit.

After one hour and 20 minutes of interesting wandering, we marched back to our boat.

The City of Washington pulled out from the dock at 11:30. We weren't very far from the dock when someone else's hat went overboard in the shuffle. Before we were quite all the way back there was a case of seasickness, which, however, was quickly remedied by an alert Scoutmaster.

The boat pulled in at 12:20. I don't understand why we made a faster trip upstream than down, but there was a difference of 10 minutes.

Back on land again, we marched again back to camp and found lunch waiting for us when we arrived. And we were hungry, too!

Carolina Tourist Finds Grave of Kin Lost in War

Front Royal, Va., July 2.—Mrs. Mattie Parks, of Goldsboro, N. C., has discovered in Front Royal the grave of her uncle, John Adams, a soldier of the War Between the States.

Adams enlisted in a North Carolina regiment in 1861, and his family never heard of him afterward. This week, his niece, Mrs. Parks, touring the Shenandoah National Park, stopped overnight here and visited Prospect Hill Cemetery. In the circle of approximately two hundred graves of Confederate soldiers which surrounds a Confederate monument, Mrs. Parks found a small stone with the inscription, "John Adams, North Carolina Regiment, died 1864." This was the first information any member of Adams family had as to what happened to Adams.

Warren Rifles Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, planned today to make an effort to identify Adams' regiment.

Most of the graves of soldiers in Front Royal are of Confederates who were killed on the Manassas and other nearby battlefields, or who died in military hospitals here.

Concerts Canceled.

Because of the Boy Scout Jamboree, band concerts scheduled for next week have been canceled, it was announced by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of the National Capital Parks.

Scouts to Portray Fountain of Youth In Pageant Tonight

Ponce de Leon will find his fountain of youth tonight when 1,800 Boy Scouts from Florida, Georgia, North and South Carolina reenact the Spanish explorer's quest in the Washington Monument arena.

Sir Walter Raleigh, De Soto, the story of Floridian statehood, the sailing of the steamer Savannah, the plundering "Pirates of Tampa," the first airplane flight from Kitty Hawk are among the other features of the pageant, which will culminate in Ponce de Leon's discovery of scouting and his renewal of youth in a fountain of Scouts from, which will pour 100 boys to form a living badge.

"Down in Dixie" will be the drama staged by 1,500 Scouts from Louisiana, Arkansas, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee on the second half of the program.

The program will begin at 8 o'clock. Reserved seats are on sale downtown and on the grounds. Reservations may be made by telephoning Metropolitan 2612.

Michigan Woman Slain; Friend Found Wounded

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 2 (AP).—Mrs. J. M. Parker, 43, was shot and fatally wounded today in her summer home near here and Charles Quickstall, 44, of Columbus, Ohio, was found wounded in the kitchen, a pistol in his hand.

Deputy Sheriff Charles Connor said Quickstall left a note saying, "as long as we can't live together we can't live at all." Quickstall may recover.

Bait To Catch Voters.

Tammany's plot to snare Senator Wagner and use him as bait to draw voters away from Mayor LaGuardia in the coming mayoralty contest is rightly regarded as a tribute to both men. It is an acknowledgment that no ordinary run-of-the-mine Tammany candidate has much chance of victory over the present incumbent. Hence the pressure that is being brought to bear upon Mr. Wagner to induce him to rescue a faction-ridden municipal machine. Tammany would like to ride to power on the prestige the Senator has acquired by hard and conscientious labor in public office.

It would be most unfortunate if the Senator were to yield to these importunities of politicians whose chief concern is vote-getting. For to do so he would have to resign a position that enables him to render valuable service to his State and to the Nation. Mr. Wagner's legislative record is certainly not flawless; in fact, he has sponsored such defective measures as the recovery act and the labor relations act.

Nevertheless, his positive achievements in the field of social legislation, to which he has devoted his major efforts, far outweigh his failures. He definitely belongs to that select group of Senators who have the courage of their convictions and the energy to translate them into action. Congress and the country cannot afford to lose men of this stamp, unless they are drafted for more important tasks.

If our cities could be freed from the grip of corrupt political machines, and if they offered competent administrators rewards commensurate with their merits, the office of mayor in populous centers would be among the most coveted within the gift of the people. The mayoralty of New York would certainly be much more important than a senatorship if a man could enter upon his duties free from damaging political commitments and reasonably sure that the good he did would live after him.

No candidate put forward by Tammany, however, can give his undivided allegiance to the public interest. If he tried to do so, his political sponsors would be quick to remind him that he was there to rescue not to submerge them. If he remained obdurate, a return to private life after the next election would probably be his fate.

For personal reasons as well as out of regard for the public interest, therefore, it would appear short-sighted of Senator Wagner to risk his political future by responding to Tammany's appeal. His training and legislative experience have qualified him to serve as a national legislator, not as a municipal official. There would be no justification whatever for drafting him into a local contest merely for the sake of making a good race against Mayor LaGuardia.

The Police Clean-up.

It begins to be understood why law-enforcement officers often found gambling dens empty when they were raided last spring. Tips were warning the gamblers away. Now it appears that these came from within the Police Department. At least this is the conclusion to be drawn from the presence of five police officers' names on a list of 124 persons indicted yesterday on gaming charges.

The grand jury also named a sixth officer, suspected of extortion. Though he was not involved with gamblers, he, too, is accused of having sold "protection." The viciousness of that practice can be readily appreciated from the fact that it puts the police in partnership with criminals. When crime begins masquerading in police uniforms, it is high time for a thorough clean-up. Maj. Brown and his colleagues are to be congratulated for their forthrightness in admitting this and in striking vigorously at what appears to be rottenness in their midst.

The district attorney's office also deserves warmest thanks for the clean-up of gambling in Washington. So far as is known, gambling has been the only considerable racket to have settled here. It has recently been almost completely disorganized. The task now is to keep it so, while maintaining a close watch in all quarters to prevent any similar noxious growths from taking root here.

The Tydings Rider.

It was a patched, a ragged, tax bill that finally emerged from the Senate District Committee. But by far the most unbecoming improvisation in the measure is Senator Tydings' proposal to "protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies." It has not the slightest bearing on the District tax problem. Moreover, it involves the highly controversial question of whether manufacturers the country over may fairly require dealers to abide by set prices in retailing goods. The debate on this point alone is certain to delay settlement of Washington's financial program for a considerable time.

Yet Senator Tydings' action in attaching his rider to the bill is only typical of the treatment the city receives from many members of Congress. To them, the affairs of the Capital are of little importance. The problem of drafting a revenue bill for the District has proved to be complicated enough in any circumstance. When legislators further bog down the local tax bill with pet measures of their own, their action may well be considered a last straw upon the burden of political handicaps which the District carries.

Only A Flank Movement.

The Administration's compromise bill to increase the membership of the Supreme Court is a frank acknowledgment of defeat for the original court-packing proposal. With a majority in the Senate opposed to the creation of six new places on the Supreme Bench, and with public opinion running strongly against it, the President realized the futility of continuing the fight on that basis. Introduction of the new bill should be clearly recognized, however, as a flank movement in the same campaign.

The authors of the new measure have tried to minimize the objections on which the first court bill foundered. They have raised the age at which senility is supposed to impair a justice's usefulness from 70 to 75. They have provided for a gradual packing instead of a sudden increase of six members. And they would permit the court to revert to its present size when the judges to whom the President objects have been weeded out.

Undoubtedly these provisions are less dangerous than the President's discredited attempt to take the Supreme Court wholly in tow. But the difference between the two bills is one of degree and not of kind. Underlying both of them is the indefensible policy of packing the Supreme Court to change its opinions. That unprincipled proposal cannot be made acceptable simply by reducing the dose.

In some respects the new bill is more significant for the points it concedes to the opposition group than for its efforts to carry out the President's wishes. It recognizes that the membership of the court should not be permanently enlarged. That sweeps away all the nonsense previously heard about the court not being able to keep abreast of its work with its present membership. Moreover, it raises a pertinent question as to why there should be any temporary change in the number of justices.

Since the court keeps its calendar relatively clear, it cannot be reasonably argued that the justices past 75 need younger substitutes to do their work. No responsible person has charged any one of the justices with incompetence. Consequently, Senator Robinson must build his case on the same flimsy foundation on which the White House measure rested. The only excuse for any Supreme Court bill is the desire of the Administration to influence that tribunal's decisions.

The severe indictment of the President's first bill by the Senate Judiciary Committee applies with almost equal force, therefore, to the current substitute. It is a "needless, futile and utterly dangerous abandonment of constitutional principle." It points the way toward "evasion of the Constitution" and thereby "violates every sacred tradition of American democracy." "Its ultimate operation would be to make this Government one of men rather than one of law."

If this substitute measure is debated before the Senate on the basis of principle, it is difficult to see how it can attain more support in the end than did the discarded White House bill. The issue is simply whether or not the Supreme Court shall be packed. Differences between packing methods are incidental. So long as that issue is kept clear, the democratic tradition of the Senate will be a powerful obstacle to any encroachment upon the independence of the courts.

Lump Sums Vs. Earmarking.

One of the special reports prepared for the President's reorganization committee by A. E. Buck sharply criticizes the Congressional practice of itemizing appropriations in minute detail. Mr. Buck recommends a substantial reduction in the number of such items in routine supply bills.

This does not imply, however, that Congress should go to the other extreme of voting huge lump-sum appropriations, leaving the executive branch of government free to allocate funds at its discretion. In that case, Congress surrenders its right of control over the public purse in an irresponsible manner. When appropriations are too detailed, on the other hand, the legislative branch of government encroaches on the proper administrative domain.

Mr. Buck is doubtless correct in asserting that budget-making would be greatly facilitated and economies encouraged if there were fewer items in appropriation measures. When a specified sum of money can be used only for a strictly defined purpose, it usually is spent whether needed or not. If there is leeway for shifting unexpended balances, the same amount of money often goes farther and produces better results.

The case against extreme itemization in supply bills is summed up very convincingly in an article by F. A. Cleveland, quoted in the report. "Given a responsible Government," he says, "and a real executive, the legislative restrictions which go with detailed appropriations are a first obstacle to efficiency to be removed."

That opinion was delivered in 1913, however, long before anybody conceived of a Congress capable of voting billions of relief funds to be apportioned by executive decree. Proper budgetary and accounting methods call for a rational mean between the extremes of excessive earmarking of appropriations and removal of essential controls over executive spending.

Still In A Perplexed State.

The breach which occurred between the Fascist powers on the one hand and Great Britain and France on the other at the time of the Leipzig incident shows no signs of healing.

Twice the London nonintervention committee, on which all four powers are represented, grappled with the problem of how the gap in the international sea patrol, created by the withdrawal of Germany and Italy, is to be filled. But on neither occasion was any progress made. The Fascist powers have been dead set against authorizing France and Britain to take over the German and Italian zones. Apparently they fear that a truly impartial enforcement of the nonintervention agreement would work to the disadvantage of their puppet, Gen. Franco, whose ultimate victory they are determined to bring about.

As a counterproposal, Germany and Italy have suggested that the sea patrol be abandoned entirely while, at the same time, both the loyalists and the insurgents be granted belligerent rights. This would mean that both sides in the Spanish struggle could stop and search neutral ships for contraband intended for the enemy.

At one time Great Britain appeared ready to pursue such a course. Because of the extent of the territory now under his control, Franco is theoretically entitled to belligerent rights. But in view of the fact that normal international practices were suspended by the nations at the outset of the civil war, so that aid which the regularly constituted Spanish government was entitled to receive from the outside world was withheld, such action would come with poor grace at the present time. At any rate, the French have made it clear they will have none of such a policy, for it would unquestionably lead to a rebellion of the left wing of the Popular Front, and thus precipitate a new political crisis.

France is in no mood to court domestic political complications merely to satisfy Berlin and Rome. On the contrary, there are indications that to solidify the coalition upon which it depends for support, the Chautemps government may decide to take a stronger stand on the Spanish problem. And because the British are also anxious to do nothing to embarrass that government, they, too, have dropped the idea of extending belligerent rights to the combatants in Spain.

The Spanish crisis, therefore, remains in an uncertain and perplexed state. But there are signs that one or the other of the Fascist powers may soon recognize the fact that they have overextended themselves, and flee to safety regardless of what its partner may do. For while retreat is difficult, they cannot view with equanimity the complete disruption of the nonintervention agreement. With France threatening to eliminate its patrol along the Spanish border, thus opening a hole through which the loyalists might receive much-needed supplies, the Fascist powers have good reason to reconsider their position.

Tough On Liars.

This year's crop of June newlyweds didn't have to worry about it. And in all probability it will not even be perfected in time to menace love's young dream in 1938. But after that lads and lassies may find their style considerably cramped because the lie detector'll get them if they don't watch out. At least, that is a logical interpretation to put on a recent announcement by Dr. Phillips Thomas, of Pittsburgh.

"Every thought that flashes through the human mind, or even the slightest mental or physical movement," states Dr. Thomas, "has a meaning of its own." Surely Dr. Thomas must realize that he is some 10 years behind Gilda Gray and Mae West in making this discovery. But what is new in connection with this bit of research is the possibility that mental reactions may be scientifically interpreted, even in the lovelorn field. "She loves me, she loves me not" is a question which may no longer be left to luck and daisies. The outcome of such an experiment with heart throbs in a machine age should interest even H. G. Wells in his forecasts for the future.

And if, as Dr. Thomas believes, it will be possible to capture and interpret thoughts through electrical impulses, the fortune hunter will have a hard time phrasing his plea. The little machine is likely to register dollar marks instead of hearts. But men are not the only ones who will suffer by it. Think what will happen to the contraption when an unsuspecting young lady utters the age-old stall, "Oh, this is so sudden!"

A psychologist will subject a group of surrealists to tests for sanity. We await with considerable trepidation the outcome of this experiment. If these guys are sane, we'll know our condition is what we've often suspected it was.

Now a physician comes to the bat with the statement that excessive laughter will cause serious heart trouble. Maybe so, but, alas! it never kills those who laugh at their own jokes.

Rome is famous for its seven hills—and one big bluff.

Age And Ability.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the approach of our great national holiday celebrating the Declaration of Independence, it is interesting to note the ages of the Founding Fathers whom we are apt to think of as mature and experienced statesmen in contrast with some of the present Administration advisers.

In 1776 Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of Independence, was 33. The resolution was introduced by Richard Henry Lee, aged 44, seconded by John Adams, aged 41. James Madison, "Father of the Constitution," was 25 and Alexander Hamilton, who was so greatly instrumental in securing the ratification of the Constitution, was 21. This brilliant financial genius became Secretary of the Treasury under Washington in 1789 at the age of 32.

Washington, himself, was 44 when he became commander-in-chief of the Colonial Army after the signing of the Declaration.

After all is there any connection between age and ability?

Types Of Bargaining.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No one doubts the righteousness or the feasibility of collective bargaining. It is democratic and it is American. It has come to stay.

But solidified bargaining is a totally different thing. It operates in an exactly opposite direction. The idea of a "sole bargaining agent" is an offense to all good Americans who have been taught to believe in majority rule.

The methods by which the C. I. O. expects to obtain its majorities when once they succeed in getting the signatures of responsible companies, are being displayed very clearly in the painful events daily occurring in Ohio and Illinois.

Solidarity can never be obtained without terrorism and terrorism now being used by a noisy, law defying minority could never have gone so far in free America without the sympathy and support of an Administration which is practicing the same thing by a process which it calls "turning on the heat."

Chief Executive As Quarterback.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is probably less responsible government today in the United States than at any period within this generation. This is attributable largely to the confusion on the part of the national, State and local governmental heads, with the general source of confusion heading up with the Chief Executive of the Nation. The confusion on his part flows directly from his philosophy of government—that government is a game in which the Executive functions as a quarterback.

This theory would probably work all right if the American people had been so coached as to make workable such a theory. But the American people have been taught for more than a century and a half that this is a government of laws and not of men or quarterbacks.

The remarkable thing about this present confusion is that it is not more than it is. If we dismiss the ballyhoo attending the pick-up in general conditions, for which we still have to pay very largely (and I am speaking as a Democrat who has never voted for a Republican, though I have been voting for 30 years), I am frank to say that Mr. Roosevelt's administration of the Nation's affairs has been consistently confusing, and but for the blind party loyalty that has been given him by the recognized party leaders, his Administration would have been ditched long ere this good hour.

My first bewilderment resulting from an application of this new theory of government by quarterback hunches was occasioned by the change of plays in the summer of 1933 when, after the most elaborate build-up in recent history, Mr. Roosevelt simply blew-up the London economic conference, and that without the slightest explanation. Today I am forced to be satisfied with the inference that it was either inside state information which couldn't be divulged or a mere hunch on the part of Mr. Roosevelt. Subsequent changes in the State Department support the inference that it was a hunch overplayed by a subordinate.

My next great surprise came when Mr. Roosevelt let go his great blast at the Supreme Court. I had been of the impression that the NIRA was adopted as an emergency measure to be liquidated upon the passing of the emergency that gave it birth. This new philosophy that government is a game and the plays are matters of judgment or hunches, as the case may be, manifests itself in a most peculiar fashion. I expected Mr. Roosevelt to have thrown his hat in the air and congratulated the court for relieving him of a great embarrassment, that the NIRA had served its purpose in that it had safely bridged the depression, irrespective of its invalidity, and that the Administration could then return to its party platform and the performance of its pledges.

And I have an abiding conviction that Mr. Justice Cardozo had a similar feeling, or he, perhaps the most liberal member of the court, would not have taken the Congress to task, as he did, for completely abdicating its legislative function and instead establishing a roving commission whose authority was in no wise canalized, but actually overflowed the whole landscape. Imagine the hurt that this liberal justice experienced at being bawled out for taking the ball out of turn, though he thought, of course, that he had made a touchdown for the team—and, by the rule-book, he had, for he gave the Chief Executive an alibi in that he opened the way for an orderly and graceful retreat back to constitutional government.

But why give additional evidence of Mr. Roosevelt's theory that government is a game to be run by teams with the office of quarterback as the chief office? This theory is behind the move to reorganize the Federal departments, in which reorganization the powers of the Chief Executive are enlarged and extended; it is behind the reorganization of the judiciary by which the courts would become subservient to the Executive will; it is back of the plan for the Chief Executive's continued control of relief expenditures as against a division of support and control on the part of the States and subdivisions thereof. In short, it is this theory that makes Mr. Roosevelt's objectives, to be obtained by judgment or hunches, as the case may be, the equivalent of, if not substitutes for, the constitutional functions of the Nation's Chief Executive.

Until this notion on the part of Mr. Roosevelt is either completely liquidated or fully accepted and acquiesced in by the American people there can be nothing other than chaos and confusion. Government by hunches, surprise or indignation, if challenged, must inevitably result in complete chaos and confusion. You can't compromise with this theory of government. You must destroy it or accept it. The choice must be made, and the sooner the better.

A Layman's Protest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Pity the layman (called "the consumer," and "the voter" and en masse "the great American public"). We are beset with analyses of the present situation so profuse, so profound and so often profane that we struggle for some understanding when "all we know is what we read in the papers."

We know our President, whom we want terribly to worship and follow, advocated something which upset beliefs gathered through childhood and since of the impregnable place of the Supreme Court in the scheme of things. So our judgment is shaken; we are confused.

We know our President is right in wanting to help the underprivileged, and yet our columnist in whom we have great faith, yea even the impeccable Dorothy Thompson, warns that we are on the verge of fascism should a bill called "Hours and Wage Standards" go through.

We know that we cannot trespass and yet our President, and, holy of holies, a member of his Cabinet seem not to be alarmed and even are slow to inform us what happens when the mails are stopped. We are bewildered. We must quickly find something to hold on to that we can understand.

Our favorite columnist gets us all straight on developments and along comes an inside dopester who says the reasonable, logical steps taken have all been done for a secret, ulterior motive beyond the powers of the mere layman to appreciate. And so we are shaken and unsure. We are crushed under the weight of too many conflicting analyses and brilliant headlines. We need to have faith in something and yet faith is that at which all darts are pointed. Arguments for and against all seem reasonable. Hereafter should we not read news given us and let the analysts go? We must earn a living and have not time to figure out which is sound and which is not and anyway our background is such that we can't be sure even if we did.

And Hugh Johnson, who always manages to reach us, somehow, lands us a terrific wallop when he forever says in one breath that the President is on the right track and adds but the men he has chosen to do the job are impossible or that the men are alright, but the idea screwy, that the President is surrounded by stupid or scheming advisers or theorists. Ye Gods, where does that leave me, the layman? We are confused.

Fascism and Communism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Conrad Paine in The Post issue of June 30 stated that he defied anyone to show that the Soviet system hadn't done more for the worker than any other system during the past 20 years. Mr. Paine either gets his ideas from Soviet propaganda or he has a good imagination.

I went to Europe within the past two years. The workers in the Fascist countries appeared happier, better clothed, better housed and better fed than those in Russia. However, none of them, either in Russia or the Fascist countries had the standard of living that the American workman has. The average American workman would appear rich and prosperous to the average Russian worker.

Our system of competition has given our workers radios, automobiles, telephones, bath tubs and thousands of conveniences the Russian worker would consider the greatest of luxuries. All the Russian worker has done is change his bosses. Now he has Stalin and his political henchmen to tell him where he will work, the hours he must work and the place he must live. Both the Communist and Fascist countries have stamped out the workers' freedom and made him a slave of the state and the state is in the hands of a dictator. I invite Mr. Paine to go see for himself, after all, just how much difference there is between fascism and communism—very little.

Renoir In New York.

IF you expect to be in New York any time this summer, be sure to put among the "musts" of your schedule of things to do, a visit to the Renoir exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Otherwise, I am afraid you are going to be sorry, since it is scarcely probable that there will soon again be an opportunity for seeing such a superb collection by one of the most interesting, and perhaps greatest, of modern painters.

I saw it not long after it opened in May—it continues through September 12—at a time when the experience was particularly needed as an antidote to an attack of surrealiste poison so severe it threatened a case of general aesthetic toxemia.

Why, of all things, there should have been a fresh outburst last spring of this most odious of the infections spread by the modernists, heaven, or more properly its antonym, only knows. But there it was and strive as I might I could not altogether avoid it.

* * * *

Having succumbed at first exposure (as usual), to the contagion, I seized upon news of the Renoir show with something of the avidity of one in quest of a specific therapy.

That way, I was sure, lay refreshment of the spirit and compensation for many sad things that are none the less determining factors in a man's life because they are intangible.

So, when I got within reach of the exhibition I lost no time in getting out to it.

The moment I arrived, recuperation set in, and by the time the rounds of the several galleries needed to hold the show had been made. I was feeling as chipper as in those long vanished days when Renoir was first dawning upon my consciousness.

Being one of those people who invariably hit pay days, no matter if decades apart, when they visit public exhibitions, I was not in the least surprised to find the admission sign over the door of the Metropolitan's great building in Central Park. But despite this dismal fact (and it is astonishing what a barrier to exhibition success even a quarter may be), the Renoir galleries were crowded, not with the idle, ignorant, sensation-loving bipeds who contribute so much in gossip and sometimes, also, misdirected cash, to the triumph of dealers' vogues, but with an audience that gave every indication of informed attention and intelligent response.

Pierre August Renoir (1841-1919) was a prolific painter and it seemed to me that the Metropolitan's collection had been uncommonly well selected; it was certainly stimulating to realize that it had been possible to assemble such a large number of representative examples in a country as notoriously barbaric as the United States.

Things in which I took particular delight, to mention a few, among the 67 exhibits (they represent 38 collectors and 5 museums), were the portrait of Claude Monet at a table reading and smoking a pipe, painted in 1872 and once published as a study of Sisley, also a fellow student in Glyre's studio (lent by Arthur Bache); "La Loge," showing the model, Nini, and Renoir's brother, Edmond, in an opera box, (lent by Robert Treat Paine 2d); "Child With Hoop" (circa 1875 lent by Mrs. Abram Eisenberg); "Mme. Charpentier and Her Children" (Metropolitan Museum Wolfe Fund purchase, 1907; this famous work proved a turning point in Renoir's career, due to its success at the 1879 Salon, for which it was accepted through the influence of Mme. Charpentier, wife of the publisher, Georges Charpentier); "Dejeuner des Canotiers" (painted in 1881 at Bougival and containing portraits of some of Renoir's friends, lent by the Phillips Memorial Gallery); "Au Moulin de la Galett" (1875, lent by John Hay Whitney); "Girl With Cat," a work of strange fascination indeed (circa 1882, lent by J. H. Whittemore Co.); the charming portrait of Mme. Renoir nursing Pierre, the artist's eldest son, born 1885 (lent by Mrs. Hunt Henderson); the group consisting of Gabrielle, the nurse; his second son, Jean, born 1893, and the concierge's daughter (lent by Mme. Edouard Jonas), and the portrait of Claud, his youngest son, born 1901, at an easel (lent anonymously).

The magnificent portrait of Tilla Durieux, a famous actress who married the German art dealer, Paul Cassirer (lent by Stephen Clark), is cited by Josephine L. Allen in her admirable Renoir essay in the May, 1937, Bulletin of the Metropolitan Museum, as an example of Renoir's energy and indomitable will. He went to Munich in 1919 to paint it, though suffering acutely with the arthritis which, during his last years, made it necessary for him to use a wheel chair and have his brush strapped to his arm.

Besides the paintings, the show includes several bronzes of individual power. Unable because of his arthritic hands to model himself, they were executed from his designs and under his direction by an uncommonly sympathetic young sculptor friend named Guino. One of these, "The Judgment of Paris" (lent by Dr. and Mrs. Harry Dawkin), is a relief after a large canvas done by Renoir in 1908, now in Charles Laughton's London collection.

The Postilion
Takes To The Road

The Way To Tennessee

Leaving Pineville, Ky., which lies in the same dark valley as Harlan, I was given a lift with a carload of youngsters bound for a swim. Though they lived only a few miles from Harlan, they seemed to have a freshness and a vitality which I hadn't been able to find in that "bloody" county.

TOM McCARTHY.

There must have been at least eight or nine kids in the car. The back seat was a tangle of heads and arms, whose owners varied in age from 12 to 20. In the front seat, after the addition of myself, there were four. The fact that I was crowding them didn't seem to make much difference. They were having a fine time, took the crowding as a joke, and insisted that I come along for a swim.

That was impossible, if I were to get into Tennessee that night, but the invitation sounded like real hospitality. "Yes, sir," I thought to myself, "real American boys. You'd never believe they live almost next door to gun-totin' Harlan."

During the ride I happened to mention that the road out of Pineville over which we were riding was so crooked that even a racing driver would have trouble negotiating it at 25 miles an hour. Somebody let out a whoop, and said to ask Johnny about that.

Johnny, a fresh looking boy of about 19, was driving the car and he began to laugh.

"Say," he explained, "we've made this 14-mile stretch into Middlesboro in 16 minutes."

"Tell him about the other night, Johnny," a voice from the back seat urged.

"Ah, it was nothing," Johnny said, "we just got picked up for speeding and drunken driving, and I don't think they'd have bothered us at all if Frankie here hadn't been firing his revolver out the back window at the signs along the road."

And the funny thing is that they were as nice a gang of kids as I've met.

From Middlesboro, I was given a lift over to Coal Creek, Tenn., which is only a few miles from Norris Dam, my next objective. The truck I was riding in carried a portion of a load of pottery in the back, well packed with straw. That straw looked as though it would make a comfortable bed, so I asked the driver if I could sleep there. He said he didn't mind at all, but that he was going to the town's one hotel.

When we arrived in Coal Creek, we found a carnival in progress and, while that didn't interest the trucker, it did interest me. As I came into the carnival lot, the crowd had already started to thin out. One barker, however, still aspired to create interest in his own exhibit, which consisted of a rather thin and knotty girl, attired in a brief dancing costume over which she had drawn a soiled, pink wrap.

"Look at her—look at her, men," invited the barker, a little man with a broad face and long unkempt hair. "Is she bee-oo-ti-ful?" he asked the grinning crowd of farm boys. "And can she dance!" he added, more as an exclamation than a question.

"Can she?" somebody in the audience asked, and the circle of listeners wavered in a convulsive laugh at the daring of the local wit.

"She can," shouted the little man, bringing his hand down hard on the ticket booth. "She can!"

The he leaned forward and announced in an intimate whisper which could be heard half way across the lot, "Boys, this is the last show tonight. I'm telling you it'll be worth the price of admission. It'll be worth every red cent in that thin, measly dime, which is the small fee we ask of you to see the one and only Clee-ah-pat-rah dance her own seductive sensation, the 'Midnight Special.'

"We would like to give the show right out here on this platform," he continued in a this-is-between-you-and-me voice, "but you know how such things are?"

"Yeah man!" the wit in the audience testified, as another gust of laughter swept the circle.

"Howevah, howevah," the barker hastened, thinking he now had his audience under control, "we're going to give you a real show, inside." He began to pound on a little drum, as the one-and-only-Cleeh-pat-rah gave a wiggle or two before dashing into the tent.

"Who'll be first," the little man cried, as the thread of laughter which had followed his spiel became a roar.

"Who'll be the first to pay the thin and measly dime to see Cleo—the one and only Cleo——" He broke off suddenly, as the grinning crowd of farm boys began to slide away down the carnival lot. "Hey, there," the little man shouted, "hey, there!"

"The chance of a lifetime—the opportunity of——," his intended conclusion was lost in his own angry muttering. The appreciative audience to the free part of the performance had moved en masse down the lot.

"What's the trouble," I asked, "no business?"

"Business—business," he bit at the words. "Why that's what they've been doin' all week. They hang around for the free part of the show, their faces drippin' with grins, and then beat it away when I try to get a measly dime out of them."

"A couple of years ago," he continued, "you couldn't keep them away from a show like this with a line of pitch forks. And now, up and down the State I go and they just ain't interested."

"Maybe they can't afford it," I suggested, not too helpfully.

"Afford it!" he snorted and then a grin creased his face. "No, I guess the trouble is these jakes are gettin' wised up."

• • • •

I left the little man whose show was being ruined by the spread of city sophistication, even unto the confines of Coal Creek, and went back to town to find the truck. It was parked just a few yards off the main street, in a driveway beside the hotel.

Phonograph music or a snatch of conversation would drift to me, to be drowned out by a burst of laughter, or the shouts of a homecoming drunk.

From one of the windows of the hotel there issued a steady snore of the complacent buzz-saw variety and from another there came at intervals the sound of a woman coughing. Pretty soon that cought dominated the other sounds and I found myself tensely listening . . . to it or for it. It came regularly, every few minutes, a dull, hopeless, mechanical sort of thing. It would start, persist for a while, and then, cut itself off.

At last it became more violent and I heard a man's voice, incredibly tired, bridling the note of hysteria with a studied quietness, saying, "Honey, are you going to keep coughing like that all nght?"

There was no reply, Then the cough stopped, And the street, of a sudden, seemed very quet.

Money for Abstract Art

In the Guggenheim endowment for abstract, or "non-objective" art, announced this week, our esthetic evolution may jump a notch or two, but it undoubtedly moves ahead. By "abstract art" is meant art which does not represent anything; a painting of a landscape, for example, is "objective" because it shows the viewer a picture of something; a painting by Kandinsky, on the other hand, is "abstract" because its spots of color, lines and shapes are put in for their own sakes and are not intended to look like anything."

Curiously enough, almost all the music we hear and enjoy—from the popular tune up to the symphony—is abstract. Occasionally there is a work, or portion of a work, which represents Nature as objectively as an ordinary picture; the fiddler in Saint-Saens' "Danse Macabre," for example, or the roostercrows, bird-songs, etc., in a few other pieces of music. But, for the most part, the world prefers music which is attractive in its own terms and not representative of the world of nature.

Many experts believe that painting is going through the same evolution, so that one day people will lose their taste for representative paintings and incline toward abstractions. If this be true, the Guggenheim endowment is bound to speed up this development of taste.

American Labor Relations Today

Wagner Act Considers All Workers As 'Victims.'

By Leo Wolman.

Following are extracts from an article appearing in the current Political Science Quarterly. The author is a professor of economics at Columbia University.

THE FORCES that have played on American labor relations since 1933 have been immeasurably more complex than in the past. A large, if dwindling, army of unemployed has for some years been kept out of the labor market by a variety of devices so that we have been witnessing the unusual spectacle of steeply rising wage rates for the employed and the existence of a widespread surplus of labor. The frequency and duration of strikes have been affected by the willingness of local and Federal relief agencies to support strikers during their periods of voluntary idleness. More important still have been the development of a Federal labor policy and the enactment of legislation intended to make that policy effective.

The foundation of this edifice of an American labor policy is the national labor relations (Wagner-Connery) act, approved by the President, July 5, 1935, and, in some of its terms at least, upheld by the United States Supreme Court in a series of decisions issued on April 12, 1937.

In view of the significance of this act and the effect it has already had on labor relations, not to speak of its probable influence in the future now that it has the sanction of favorable Supreme Court decisions, the general character of this type of law deserves closer examination than it has yet received. The act, so far as one can judge by its terms and the way it is administered, is quite unlike the trade-union law of England. It goes far beyond the English law in the rights it confers on labor, individually and collectively, and in the degree of control it undertakes to exercise over the rights of employers and the procedure and outcome of negotiations between labor and industry.

The assumptions on which the law and its administration rest seem likewise to be novel in this kind of legislation and suggest elaborate, if implicit, hypotheses regarding the social or moral and economic consequences of the chronic weakness of organized labor in the United States during the last half-century.

American Workmen Long Unorganized.

BY ITS TERMS, American workmen have been universally victimized by their employers and have surrendered to them their freedom of action. Persuasive as this view may be in specific cases, it does not afford a satisfactory explanation of the fact that more than 25,000,000 employes, excluding agricultural laborers and domestic servants, have remained unorganized in this country for decades. During the last four years, in particular, organizing campaigns have been conducted with unparalleled vigor, at great cost, and in the main free of interference from the usual sources. Yet there is ample evidence that a large number, and in some cases the majority, of employes have been slow to join the union which was soliciting their support.

For this reason, unions have been signing limited agreements with employers and, like the employers, have hesitated to raise the question of membership lest an election reveal their weakness. For the same reason, unions now as in the past have fought for the closed shop or the check-off, or both, knowing that either of these measures would drive reluctant and recalcitrant workmen into their ranks and would keep them there. Employers who are familiar with the methods of organizers and their staffs and appreciate the "influence" which an organized and militant minority can exert on their fellow workmen, regard a statute as one-sided and harmful which, by implication, condones force and intimidation when it happens to be used by organized labor.

The economic assumptions of the Wagner act and of the labor policy of this Administration have been variously stated. But they reflect the predominant popular opinion of these past years as to the cause of business depression and the sources of business stability and economic security. Mr. Francis Biddle, chairman of the first National Labor Relations Board, held that "the underlying theory behind this (the Wagner) act, and behind most of the New Deal legislation, is that the economic crisis was caused by a maladministration of wealth."

The act itself is more explicit and far-reaching, for it states in its preamble that:

The inequality of bargaining power between employes who do not possess full freedom of association or actual liberty of contract and employers who are organized in the corporate or other forms of ownership association substantially burdens and affects the flow of commerce, and tends to aggravate recurrent business depressions by depressing wage rates and the purchasing power of wage earners in industry and by preventing the stabilization of competitive wage rates within and between industries.

DR. LEO WOLMAN.

Labor's Real Income Reached Peak In 1920-29.

IN THESE WORDS there is compressed a whole body of economic doctrine and historical interpretation. The evidence on which the doctrine depends hardly squares with the relevant facts. During the ten years following 1920 the real income of labor in the United States reached a peak for all time. While the available indexes of national income are capable of improvement, such as they are they show no decline, during the years preceding the depression, in labor's share in the total national income. Nor is there compelling evidence to support the widely held supposition that the American unemployment rate had risen in the course of this period of post-war prosperity. In agreement, further, with the traditional position of organized labor in this and other countries, the authors of the Wagner act apparently believe in the power of fixed and uniform wage rates to stabilize the real income of wage-earners.

There is ample social justification for attempting to raise excessively low wages that outrage the standards of decency of a community. But there is no more reason to hope that an inflexible wage structure, insensitive to the changing conditions of an economy, will succeed in lifting the standards of living of labor than that an inflexible price structure will conduce to the lasting prosperity of industry. There is similar justification in a democratic society for policies designed to bring about greater equality in the distribution of wealth and income. But for this purpose as well there are simpler and more direct measures, such as taxation, that may be expected to achieve the desired goal without at the same time threatening serious injury to the prospective beneficiaries of our social policy.

It should be clear that a law drawn on these assumptions would contain provisions sufficiently drastic to achieve its foremost objective of furthering the unionization of industry. The principal provisions of the Wagner act, accordingly, enumerate and define unfair practices on the part of employers, indicate the general principles in accordance with which employes may choose their representatives for the purposes of collective bargaining, and set up a board to interpret and apply the law.

Unfair Labor Practices Section Offers Difficulty.

THE UNFAIR labor practices listed in the law all involve unusual difficulties in administration. The prohibition of coercive and discriminatory acts against employes by reason of their membership or activity in labor unions calls for the review of all cases of discharge which are lodged with the Labor Relations Board. In ordinary times such a review would be a task of formidable proportions. During aggressive organizing drives, when activities in the interest of unionization are coupled with violations of shop discipline and acts of insubordination, an intolerable burden must inevitably be placed on the enforcement agency, and many complaints, good and bad, will go by default. More important, however, is the prohibition of the two more subtle forms of unfair labor practice the effects of which remain to be seen.

The first consists in dominating, or interfering with the formation or administration of any labor organization, or contributing financial or other support to it, and the second in refusing to bargain collectively with the representatives of one's employes.

The prohibition against domination and interference with workmen's organization is directed against company unions and similar types of employe representation. Its effect has already been to dissolve many such organizations throughout the country and, in the past weeks, to convert an increasing number of them into independent units, with dues-paying members, in form, at any rate, not unlike the orthodox trade union. This development is the outcome of a decision by the Labor Relations Board in a case affecting the status of a company union in the Fort Wayne plant of the International Harvester Co. This is the leading case of its kind because of the age and high reputation of the Harvester Co.'s plan of employe representation and because it was not complicated by the usual charges of coercion, discrimination and the like. The issue was solely the right of the management to foster this type of an arrangement.

In a decision which all but denies the existence of a strong mutuality of interest between employer and employe, the plan was ordered disestablished. The lengthy opinion of the board is so revealing a document that it should be read by all students of industrial relations. It is full of reflections of the views of the board as to the correct forms of labor relations, but its flavor is suggested in the following excerpt from the decision:

The aspect of management support of the Plan is difficult to describe in a manner which will adequately convey the extent to which the Plan has been interwoven into the daily life, both of work and of social and athletic activities, of the Fort Wayne employes. Through the years of operation of the Plan, the management, convinced of its soundness, has carefully supplied prop after prop for its support so that today the average employe at the plant accepts the Plan as an institution without any realization of the careful structure that has been built to keep the Plan alive and functioning . . .

Wherever possible the Plan has been linked with activities and working conditions that are obviously beneficial to the employes and desired by them, so that the Plan may both receive credit for the benefits resulting from the other activities and be regarded by the employes as an integral part of the plant life . . .

Definition Needed For 'Collective Bargaining.'

IN ADDITION to this power to disestablish existing bargaining agencies of employes, the board may find an employer guilty of an unfair labor practice if, in its judgment, he has refused to bargain collectively with the lawful representatives of his labor force. But what is collective bargaining? Is it bargaining that results in a contract? Does the power of the board to require collective bargaining carry with it the right to pass on the merits of labor's demands, on the one hand, and of the employer's counter proposals, on the other? If so, the exercise of this power comes perilously close to compulsory arbitration.

The power of life and death, which the Labor Relations Board has over any labor organization, it derives to even greater extent from those sections of the act that authorize the board to supervise the choice of appropriate employe representatives. Disputes over representation have in the main been between the so-called bona fide unions and company unions. The authority of the board, however, has been invoked to settle similar disputes between several competing "bona fide" unions and on occasion between a national organization and one of its constituent local bodies. In such cases the board has hitherto shown great reluctance to intervene.

Now that the lines have become more sharply drawn between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., controversies are bound to occur with greater frequency. At the same time many of the new independent plant unions will begin to assert themselves and demand their bargaining rights. Only during the past weeks three unions—one affiliated with the A. F. of L., the second with the C. I. O., and the third an independent plant union—have become involved in a dispute over the right to represent employes of the Consolidated Co., of New York. As these disputes grow in number and are brought before the board the pressure to intervene will become too strong to resist. When that happens, both the law and the board will be exposed to severer tests than they have yet encountered. For, however the board may rule in these cases, its decisions will have the effect of destroying one of several competing unions. This eventuality may well produce political repercussions and some questioning of the national labor relations act by the unions themselves.

Sharp Contrast Seen With British Labor Laws.

THIS, THEN, is the law under which industry and labor will be required to operate from now on. Its compulsions run deep. As applied, it has proved the most effective organizing weapon with which this country has yet had experience. It stands in sharp contrast to the labor law of England, by the terms of which coercive acts are outlawed, threats against the public authorities forbidden, the accounts of labor unions made subject to registration with public agencies, and the contributions of labor unions to political parties brought under strict control. If there is merit in the current demands amendments to the Wagner act, it consists not in framing new and elaborate statutes, but in defining more clearly the rights and responsibilities of employers and subjecting organized labor to simple and decent regulations of this sort. For as private agencies aspire to public power they must be ready to assume the duties inherent in their new position.

Storm Over Asia

By

The Amur Clash.

THIS WEEK'S bloody encounter on the Amur, the river which forms part of the boundary separating Soviet Siberia from the Japanese puppet state of Manchukuo, cannot safely be dismissed as just another border incident. On the contrary, available evidence would seem to indicate htat it was an act of deliberate provocation by the Japanese militarists. As such it is an illuminating indication of how easily wars can be produced by those who feel they can benefit by them.

At the moment, the indications are that there will be a return to that state of armed uneasiness which has characterized Russo-Japanese relations for years, rather than war. The odds unquestionably favor a peaceful settlement. But for some time in the future, as during the recent past, the peace of the Far East may remain at the mercy of an incident.

IT TAKES TWO to make a war. There is every reason to believe that the Moscow government wants peace. Proof of this is to be found in the sensible proposal of Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet foreign commissar, that, pending a diplomatic negotiation of the dispute over the ownership of the Amur Islands, both nations withdraw their troops to their respective mainlands.

Does Japan want war? It is difficult to believe she does. No matter how weak, how rent by internal dissensions, how broken in spirit Soviet Russia may be, that nation is, on its home grounds, probably more than a match for the Japanese.

Older Japanese officers have reason to recall how, at the time of Japan's intervention in Siberia (1918-1922), even the non-Bolshevik and anti-Bolshevik population of that region rose up against the invaders.

Japan lost face by the palpable failure of the expensive efforts it made during those years to gain a foothold in Siberia. There is no doubt that in the back of some Japanese minds there is a desire to avenge this single failure of the Japanese war machine. But, if Japan failed then, when Soviet authority was not firmly established in the region between Lake Baikal and the Pacific, the odds would seem to be infinitely greater now against a successful conquest of eastern Siberia and the Maritime Province.

Not only has Russia fortified that region and garrisoned it with at least 300,000 troops, but it also maintains there a very considerable air force which could be employed to take the war to Japan itself.

The hot-headed spirits of the Kwantung army may desire to take the chance. But it is doubtful if, in this matter, they could prevail against the cooler heads in Tokyo and in the headquarters of the Japanese war machine itself.

IF NOT WAR, what, then, does Japan hope to accomplish by baiting the Russian bear at this time? To this question various possible answers can be given. But they can all be summarized in the one word—prestige.

During the last two years, up until the time of the recent Soviet army purge, the military prestige of Russia has steadily grown. Had it not been for this circumstance, the Franco-Russian and the Russo-Czechoslovak alliances would not have been made and, in turn, Japan would not have found it necessary to conclude the diplomatically dangerous anti-Comintern pact with Nazi Germany. This pact between Hitler and the Japanese militarists constituted an admission by the latter that Japan alone was no match for the Soviet; that a successful war against that nation must, perforce, be a war on two fronts.

Yet two developments that took place subsequently showed that the time was far from ripe for such a war. In the first place, the Spanish civil war demonstrated, many military experts were convinced, the superiority of Russian over German and Italian planes. And, secondly, the drubbing given by the Soviet last year to mixed Mongol, Manchukuo and Japanese troops that sought to invade Outer Mongolia blocked Japan from carrying out a flanking move against Soviet Siberia.

THUS, JAPAN was left holding the bag, as it were. The anti-Comintern pact was proving a liability rather than an asset. And, because of Russia's growing prestige, concurrent with the loss of face by Japanese militarists in the fighting along the Outer Mongolian border and in the fighting in Suiyan where the Chinese held their ground against the Japanese-Manchukuo invaders, the stock of the Japanese army went down.

This was reflected in the rebellion of the Diet against the Hirota and Hayashi governments. It was also reflected in a friendlier feeling by the Nanking government toward Russia. Indeed, in China, the policy favored by the Soviet regime of a united front against aggressors was tacitly accepted by Nanking after the Sian kidnaping episode.

The alliance now in process of being established between the Nanking army directed by Chiang Kai-shek and the Chinese Reds in the northwest creates a bridge between Nanking and Moscow.

That bridge has not yet been crossed. But it might be, unless it can be demonstrated to China's satisfaction that Russia is a very weak reed to lean on.

It is clear from this that, if, at this time, a diplomatic defeat can be administered the Soviet Union, Russia's prestige will be lowered. But such a defeat is only possible, if, feeling itself in too weak a position to fight, Russia reverts to the policy it pursued toward Japan in 1932, 1933 and 1934, when, almost without resistance, it steadily gave way in the face of Japanese pressure.

• • • •

BUT THE IMPLICATIONS of Japan's provocative move on the Amur extend far beyond the Far East.

In Europe, Germany, aided by Italy, has been engaged for some time in an attempt to isolate the Soviet Union. Because of French resistance and British doubts as to the real inwardness of Nazi policy, it has failed in this effort. Nonetheless, the successive purges that have taken place in Russia and, in particular, the execution of Marshal Tukhachevsky and the seven other high officers of the Red army has undoubtedly weakened Russia's prestige in Europe. That prestige would be dealt a further blow should the German-Italian program regarding Spain meet with success, as, after Bilbao, many are now inclined to believe it will.

It is hardly surprising, then, that, after being quiescent for some months, during which time Japan began to flirt with the idea of a peaceful settlement with Russia and China, the Japanese militarists now show signs of resuming their aggressive tactics. They probably feel they can do it with impunity. They probably feel there is nothing to be lost and much to be gained by a provocative course. But, they may find they have been exaggerating both Russia's weakness and their own strength.

The Fourth of July

By William Lyon Phelps

Safe And Sane?

During my boyhood, this coming midnight was for me a delirium of bliss; for on the glorious Fourth my mother allowed me to rise at midnight and go out on the street and yell until breakfast. While that method of entertainment does not appeal to me now, I shall never forget what happiness it brought then; and I am sorry for small boys today because we have what is strangely called a safe and sane Fourth. Is it? In the day of my youth we fired off crackers and guns and pistols and toy cannon—and how we enjoyed it! In the whole nation a few boys were injured. But where gunpowder slew its iota, the automobile slays its quota. And the quota is appalling. This Fourth of July week-end is going to be tragic indeed. We know now that many persons who ate their breakfast this morning will not eat it Monday morning, because they will be dead. Safe and sane.

• • • •

In those days the Declaration of Independence was publicly read aloud and a Fourth of July oration was pronounced by the local orator. I distinctly remember in Hartford hearing the Declaration in Bushnell Park and Joe Barbour making an eloquent oration to the crowd.

Two things we might remember on this Fourth of July. Every American should make a Declaration of Independence in his own heart. Liberty everywhere is in greater danger than it was in 1776. Let us determine to keep our liberty as it is the most precious thing we have.

The second thing to remember is that the nation we hated in 1776 is now our most intimate friend, our closest associate in the whole world. And it is the one great world-power in the Eastern Hemisphere that steadfastly upholds the principle of human freedom.

Two Protestant Pastors Fined In Reich Purge

Two Others Freed; Synod Disorganized; Sweeping Arrests Reported.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 2.—Two Confessional Synod pastors tonight were fined 600 marks (about $240) each with the alternative of going to jail for 30 days after a four-hour secret trial in Moabit Court.

They, with two other leaders of the Fundamentalist bloc against Nazi church policy who were acquitted, were tried on charges of inciting defiance of government decrees.

All had been held under arest for two weeks awaiting trial on the specific accusation that they publicly read the names of persons who had left the church.

The Rev. Martin Niemoeller, most outspoken of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's Protestant antagonists, was arrested on the same charge yesterday.

The convicted pastors were the Rev. Arnim-Luetzlow and the Rev. Niesel. Those freed were the Rev. Gerhard Jacobi, pastor of Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Church, and a church lawyer named Ehlers.

Leaders of the synod, who had anxiously awaited the verdict, declared their group is now completely disorganized. They said they did not even know who of their pastors were in jail and who were not.

Word reached them by "grapevine" from southern Germany, they said, widespread arrests were being made there.

A vicar and a stenographer were reported held at Munich. Several pastors were said to have been arrested at Wuerttemberg on charges of announcing from their pulpits they would refuse to pledge unqualified allegiance to Hitler.

Secret police, it was disclosed, spent 7 hours last night searching synod headquarters. Gloomy confessional officials said 30,000 marks (about $12,000), manuscripts, multigraphs and other material had been seized.

Leaders declared they would instruct local church bodies, one after the other, to commit the same offense for which the two pastors were convicted today; that is, that they read from the pulpit the names of resigned members of the church in their communities.

White House Lifts Photographic Ban On News Services

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 2.—White House officials today lifted from two news photographic organizations a ban imposed because of pictures taken by visitors at the Democratic "love feast" on Jefferson Island last week and distributed by the two services.

The organizations are the Associated Press, of which Edward Stanley is executive editor in the news photo division, and the Acme News Picture Service, of which Fred Ferguson is president.

Ferguson and Stanley visited President Roosevelt here yesterday and, following the conference, issued the following statement:

"We called on the President at his invitation and laid before him our points of view with reference to the situation arising over the taking of pictures on Jefferson Island last week.

"We did not make any request for action on the part of the President. We merely wanted him to understand fully our position in the matter.

"We told the President that we did not feel that there had been any impropriety or violation of the agreements that we or other reputable news or photographic organizations maintained with the White House.

"We believe that the matter is being amicably and amiably adjusted in our negotiations with Secretary Early."

The Once Over

Where Did She Get That Hat?

Women's styles have always had their amusing angle, but this is the first season the girls have taken to wearing a rope for a hat.

• • • •

It is hard to tell whether they have been to a milliner or to a cowboy.

• • • •

The rage this summer is the open-faced bonnet that seems to be a combination lasso, head bandage and anchor line, retaining the funniest features of each.

• • • •

A lot of girls look as if they had been standing too close to a canerack, while the boys were trying to ring the gold-headed walking-stick.

• • • •

Or as if the milliners of America had confused hat designing with quoits.

• • • •

One writer declared the women's hats this year looked like something the top of which had been chewed off by mice, but we won't go that far.

• • • •

This open influence is reflected in other departments of milady's wardrobe. Take shoes, for example. Have you noticed those shredded pumps evidently made by shoemakers who were short of leather but had plenty of string?

• • • •

At first glance the girls seem to be shuffling about town in their bare feet. Your impulse when you see the Well Dressed Gal of 1937 is to warn her to look out for tacks.

• • • •

Even New York has fallen for the sandal for street wear and the foremost martyrs to style this summer are the girls who wear them in those subway rushes. They give as much protection to a foot in the subway as a veil would give to a face in a Johnstown riot.

• • • •

But maybe something should be done before the style magazines proclaim that an ideal street frock may be made by digging up two yards of fish-netting and cutting holes for the arms.

Traffic Note.

Washington is so full of ethics this season that it is practically impossible for a man who is only 99 per cent honest to get through the streets.

So many people are being banged up in disturbances all over the country that they are singing it "Three cheers for the red, black and blue."

Spiritual Values.

I love to rise and view the dawn
In springtime, kiss the dewy lawn,
Because, when all is done and said,
The dawn is something good to see,
And rising then is good for me.
I view with awe, and bow my head,
And yawn and hie me back to bed.

NYA Group Shows Playthings Made Of Prune Boxes

If one is to judge by the NYA toy and craft exhibit now on display in the old Cardozo School at First and N streets southwest, the New Deal soon will be getting out a pamphlet entitled: "One Thousand Things to Make From a Prune Box, or How to Make Every Scrap Count."

Streamlined trains, waterproof boats, every animal in the circus, bird boxes, doll house furniture, sand sets, jigsaw puzzles, foot rests—these are a small sample of prune-box products in the exhibit.

The prunes from the boxes go to WPA families. The toys and furniture go to WPA nursery schools. Typewriter ribbon spools that are begged and borrowed and wooden spools from which WPA workers have used the thread are turned into the wheels that make the toys workable.

Seventy colored boys and girls are asisgned to the project, which is supervised by Mrs. M. P. Hackney and Mrs. F. E. Chisholm.

Services for the day will begin with celebration of the Holy Communion in the Chapel of St. Mary at 7:30 a. m.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Washington, has sent a special message to James E. West, chief scout executive at the national jamboree headquarters, extending a cordial welcome to the Boy Scouts, not only at the Sunday services, but when they come to Mount St. Alban for individual pilgrimage during the week. Volunteer aides are on duty from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. and from 2 p. m. to 5 p. m. on week days.

13 States Swept By Grasshoppers

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that grasshoppers were "becoming destructive" in 13 farm States, with local outbreaks in six others.

A survey showed the insects already had damaged small grains, truck crops, alfalfa and cotton and remained a threat to corn and other later crops. They were especially numerous in the Panhandles of Oklahoma, Texas and South Dakota.

Serious outbreaks were reported in Colorado, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, Wyoming, the Dakotas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and Illinois.

"Local outbreaks" were reported in New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, California, Minnesota and Michigan.

12,000 Off WPA Rolls in N. Y. City

New York, July 2 (AP).—Two members of the WPA Teachers Union charged they were dismissed for "union activity" today as demonstrations continued against removal of nearly 12,000 workers from WPA employment rolls in New York City.

William Levner, chairman of the grievance committee of the WPA Teachers Union local, and Spero Galanopulo, editor of the union's newspaper, said they would protest their dismissals to Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, who once said, "No WPA worker shall be dismissed for active participation in any union."

While WPA pickets bearing banners demanding "Give back our jobs" continued to picket the Government's works project headquarters, more than 4,000 of the 11,800 dismissed workers had applied today for home relief.

With two Boy Scouts participating in the unveiling, a $4,000 pulpit memorializing the late Earle Wilfley, former pastor of the church, will be dedicated tomorrow morning in National City Christian Church.

The unveiling will be done by Wilfley Henn, of Geneva, Ohio, a grandson of Dr. Wilfley, and Robert Calvert, jr. Between 300 and 400 Boy Scouts, here for the national jamboree, will be present for the service, at which Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, pastor, will give a sermon on "Boys Will Be Boys—Unless They Are Boy Scouts."

Present for the dedication service will be Mrs. Wilfley, and her daughters, Katherine Wilfley and Mrs. Margaret Wilfley Henn, of Geneva, Ohio.

"The pulpit of this church is dedicated to the Gospel of Jesus Christ and in recognition of the ministry of Earle Wilfley, who for 21 years served as pastor of this congregation with inspiring vision, unwearied patience, persistent labor, dauntless courage and steadfast faith. In season and out of season he urged the ideal of a noble and representative Christian church in the Nation's Capital. Responding to his zeal the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ caught the vision and realized it in the erection of the National City Christian Church."

Philatelic Sales Top Normal Years

Postmaster General James A. Farley announced last night that stamp sales to collectors through the Post-office Department's philatelic agency for the fiscal year just ended amounted to $1,945,019, the highest normal year in the history of the agency.

This figure has been exceeded only once in the past, that being for the fiscal year 1935, when the sale of special issues of stamps in uncut sheets and blocks resulted in the agency's receipts for that year going over the $2,000,000 mark.

For the fiscal year 1936, Philatelic Agency receipts totaled $1,846,253, the highest previous normal year. Four years ago, in the fiscal year 1933, stamp sales through the Philatelic Agency amounted to only $302,619.

Today's Sermon

Rector, Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation.

Tomorrow we celebrate the anniversary of the birth of our Nation, which in the words of our national anthem we sing of as, "the land of the free and the home of the brave." Topography, geography, natural beauty and resources may enhance a territory, but it is spiritual qualities which make great a nation of men. But ere we sing of freedom and bravery we must know what they are and be sure that we have them lest our song be an idle boast.

Freedom, of course, necessitates that we have the ability to pursue a sensible course. It first of all requires the mastery of destructive, selfish and base inclinations. No individual or nation is free until there is internal order and control. Action must be directed from within. After due consideration of both ourselves and others we must determine the course, and then because of mastery of selfish desires be free to pursue it. Freedom cometh not of laws but of an inner attitude. It is not to be confused with licentiousness, because this is senseless, taking no thought of ourselves or others.

Bravery is the willingness to dare and to risk. But like freedom, must look to a sensible end. Bravery manifested for an evil or selfish end is destructive and wasteful. It is only the bravery that seeks the good and holy that is desirable.

Then let us consider whether we are free and brave. Let us remember that such qualities are not of man alone but are kindled by the divine spark that is within him. Let us seek God's help that we and our Nation may be truly free and truly brave.

Daugherty to Preach.

Salads Aid In Freedom For Holiday

Recipes Are Offered for Picnics and Outdoor Luncheons.

By Rebekah Blake.

Are you going away for the Fourth of July or are you staying at home and receiving guests? Are you going to eat out or in your own dining room? Whatever your plans are, you will eat and you won't want to spend all of your holiday cooking and preparing food.

Because of summer weather, you won't want a hot dinner, but all-cold meals are not considered healthful. An ideal combination is to choose a light but nourishing salad as the principal dish and supplement it with a hot soup or a hot beverage.

Whole-meal salads fit into many needs, from picnics and terrace or outdoor luncheons to inside dinners. They may include all of the necessary constituents of a well-balanced meal or may be supplemented by a protein as meat, hot or cold, cheese or hard-cooked or deviled eggs. Beet Delight or Hacienda salad may be used for this purpose.

Hacienda Salad.

1 cup cooked rice
2-3 cup sliced or chopped ripe olives.
½ cup chopped green sweet pepper
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 cup cooked string beans
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
Lettuce
Highly seasoned French dressing
Salt to taste

Combine rice, ripe olives, green pepper, onion, salt, string beans (cut into suitable lengths) and mayonnaise, blend. Serve on lettuce garnished salad plates with French dressing. Serves 4 to 6.

If you are planning an outdoor meal at home and want it to be more than a picnic, let the following suggestions for a menu help you in your plans for the Fourth. Leave the tomatoes and avocados unprepared until serving time. Serve cold fried chicken for it is as good as hot chicken and Independence Day is not complete without it.

Cold Fried Chicken.

Sliced tomatoes and avocados
French dressing
Ripe Olives Beet Pickles
Cheese Stuffed Prunes
French Bread Sticks Butter
Sponge Cake and Berries With Ice Cream
Iced Tea Coffee

A holiday feast may be gotten together with short notice if your canned goods shelf is well supplied and you make use of it. The following menu is an appropriate one for the occasion and may be prepared entirely from cans.

Chilled Tomato or Sauerkraut Juice
Chicken Noodles
Canned Veal Loaf
Spiced Peach Pickles Brown Bread
Canned Mixed Vegetable Salad
Sliced Pineapple With Creamed Roquefort Cheese
Chocolate Wafers Coffee

Deviled ham, with its well-seasoned taste of spices is a good sandwich filling.

Baked beans make a hearty filling for such an occasion. The beans can be used cold just as they come from the can, or they can be mixed with such seasonings as mustard, catsup, chopped celery or union.

Avoid using lettuce as it is likely to wilt before time to eat. Wrap each sandwich in wax paper to make it easy to handle when you are ready to eat.

Of course, the children, especially, will crave firecrackers and other explosives on this day. The wisdom of a safe and sane Fourth isn't always apparent to younsters who love a big noise. But the absence of these will quickly be forgotten if you let the juveniles celebrate with candy counterparts of firecrackers and pinwheels for dessert, plus a few harmless toy noisemakers as energy outlets.

The children can make their own firecrackers with perfect safety with these short-cut candy recipes. Real firecrackers often don't go off; but these recipes for candy firecrackers are sure to be a bang-up success because they are absolutely failure proof.

Safe and Sane Firecrackers.

¼ cup sweetened condensed milk
¼ teaspoon peppermint extract

Blend sifted confectioners' sugar gradually with sweetened condensed milk, using fork. Add peppermint extract and continue mixing until smooth and creamy. Use just enough sugar so that the fondant will hold its shape when formed into rolls. Roll out on a board or waxed paper dusted lightly with confectioners' sugar, making long rolls about ½ to ¾-inch thick. Cut rolls into about 3½-inch lengths. Cover with melted dipping chocolate which has been cooled. Chill. Make fuses of bits of string held in place with pins, or of lengths of colored tooth picks or strips of candied fruit. Makes about ten.

Happy Holiday Pinwheels.

1½ cups confectioners' sugar
½ cup sweetened condensed milk
1 tablespoon vanilla
¾ cup sweetened condensed milk
¼ cup confectioners' sugar

Sift together cocoa and 1½ cups confectioners' sugar. Moisten with ½ cup sweetened condensed milk and vanilla. Blend thoroughly Pat out on board or waxed paper, which has been dusted with confectioners' sugar, into oblong layer ¼-inch thick. Blend remaining confectioners' sugar and sweetened condensed milk. Tint with vegetable coloring if desired. Spread with spatula on top of dark layer. Roll as in making jelly roll, folding edges to conceal fondant. Allow to stand in cool place until firm. Cut into diagonal slices ½-inch thick. Wipe knife after each slice, to keep the colors clear. Makes 15 to 20 pinwheels.

Candy Firecrackers are Harmless

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"How to Handle Gold Diggers?" Is Question of Hostess Imposed Upon By Week-End Guest.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I should greatly appreciate your common-sense advice on my problem, namely: how to handle gold diggers? Because I believe in courtesy I find myself continually imposed upon and I don't know what else to do besides fume internally. For example, some friends were house guests of ours on a recent week-end. They brought along a friend of theirs whom we didn't know, and who stopped at a hotel some distance away. She listened to our plans for our house guests. If she liked the sound of them, she joined in without being asked. If she didn't like them, she asked to be dropped at some theater of her choice, but never asked us to join her.

She came along to restaurants, carefully ordered the best of everything, watched the men argue over the check and never once made a move to pay her share. My husband, as host, paid all checks, of course. She came uninvited to our home for meals with our guests and was with us every day as a fifth wheel. She never once asked if it was convenient and never once said, "Thank you." In leaving, she did not make even a formal gesture of saying she hoped she might reciprocate some time, but stood silently by while our friends expressed their appreciation.

• • • •

What should I have done? I said nothing at first, because it takes time to learn when one is being "worked." Also, I didn't want our friendship with our guests to be marred. I know that our guests were grievously at fault in foisting this girl on us, but aside from that they never for a minute imposed on us in any way. When they left they hadn't the slightest idea of how my husband and I felt. In the future, how should I handle such persons as this girl? I want to do it tactfully, so as not to put myself in the position of being as discourteous as such offenders. EXPLOITED.

• • • •

What to Believe.

DEAR EXPLOITED: As the story stands, we are justified in assuming that your week-end guests were entirely at fault in having brought the other woman along. How do you know, for instance, that they didn't urge her to come; perhaps saying, "Oh, but you must come. You'll enjoy the trip; you'll love Washington, and So-and-So's will be delighted to have you. They're the most hospitable couple in the world; with them, it's always the more the merrier."

• • • •

Perhaps she didn't have enough money to attempt to entertain a luncheon, dinner or theater party while here; and she may have thought it would be untoward to offer to pay her own table bill when in a party arranged by others. Perhaps she was doing her best to alleviate what she intuitively perceived to be a tense and embarrassing situation on those occasions when she asked to be dropped off at a theater. She may have realized she was a fifth wheel, and assumed that you had things to talk over which were not for a fifth's ears.

• • • •

Her very silence at the time of saying good-by may have been prompted more by mortification than by cold-blooded ingratitude. She may have departed thinking, "Thank heaven, that's over. I thought I'd never live through it. Never again any second-hand invitations for me." I daresay your burning resentment of her presence showed through the veneer of your determined cordiality more than once. Inasmuch as your week-end guests offered no explanation of, or apology for, her tagging along, it must be that they were entirely responsible for it. Had she thrust herself upon them, I am sure they would have confided as much in you.

• • • •

Since you value their friendship too much to wish to offend them by word or action, there was nothing you could have done other than what you did do. Any coolness shown the other woman would have been a tacit rebuke of their having inducted her into the week-end program. It is my guess that the week-end itself was punishment enough for the girl's thoughtless presumption; and that, if she had been a case-hardened "gold digger," she would have overwhelmed you with hypocritical effusions of pretended appreciation at the visit's end. A Peasant Model.

New York (AP).—A peasant blouse is the solution of the problem of what to wear with a full-pleated skirt. Its round neck and loose smocking are particularly becoming with the new type skirt. The costume is reminiscent of those worn at European folk dances.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

SHE'S the kind of a lady who can be a duchess on any occasion, even at a picnic. And her house is like that, too, gracious and poised and yet unpretentious with an effortless ease.

We were driving along her street one hot, hot afternoon recently, and on an impulse decided to stop in.

And there she was looking as fresh as a daisy in a pink linen dress and her hair just out from a wet comb. The house was pleasantly orderly (but not nasty-nice—after all she has a rambunctious pair of children who take care of that).

"Just a second," she said when she had seated us in a breeze, "I'll be back with tea."

She flew out to the kitchen and before we'd fanned our fan a dozen fans, there she was with a tray of ice tea and a plate of oatmeal cookies.

As she sat down before that tray and served the tea, we thought what a thoroughly successful woman she was. Not famous. Not even rich. But doing a perfectly splendid job of making a pleasant home for her family, and that's no sinecure. (Look how many of us fail to keep things going with both efficiency and beauty—or with either!)

That living room seemed like a haven on a hot day. Very pale aquamarine walls . . . a mulberry broadloom rug that someway didn't seem hot because it made such a shady background for the slip covers of very flowery chintz on an aquamarine ground. The curtains were plain aquamarine chintz lined with cream and tied back with heavy mulberry cord. The pictures on the walls were framed in flat silver frames and the lamp bases and accessories were silver.

There was a room that would seem like a cool and tranquil retreat in summer and like a hospitable room of friendly warmth in winter, so versatile and satisfying was it.

Picnic Season Brings Prizes For Sandwiches

NOW that picnic season is in full reign, it is time to think of sandwiches and their contents, for, of course, no picnic is complete without sandwiches, and the sandwich is only as good as its filling.

This week The Post is featuring a sandwich contest. The winners of this contest will receive cash awards. These money prizes will be $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the three remaining prizes.

Perhaps you have a good recipe for sandwich filling, such as beef salad, cheese and pepper, chocolate, chopped ham, date and nut, maple, cheese and nut, nut and celery or vetetable. Or perhaps your recipe for rolled carrot, mushroom, shrimp and liver or ribbon sandwiches is an especially successful one.

Whatever your recipe is, if it is for a sandwich, send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post food editor, so she will receive it not later than next Saturday.

Copy your name and address clearly on your recipe.

Bachelor Girl Has Different Etiquette Rule

Must Live Under Standard Unlike Woman Who Has Family.

By Margaret Wallace

Etiquette for the woman who works and lives alone has had to be rewritten in this era. This woman quite naturally has a quite different code of etiquette from the one who lives at home. A woman who lives alone must be her own chaperon and erect for herself the "protections" which come to the woman with home life. This does not mean that the bachelor girl or widow can be more lax in her observation of what is considered good form. Yet rules and regulations must be different for the one-woman establishment than they are for a family one.

Avoid Late Callers.

The girl who lives alone must avoid late masculine callers and the reputation of being out at all hours of the night. This does not mean that a bachelor girl or widow may not go to the theater and to supper or dance afterwards in a reputable place. It does not mean either that a girl who lives alone in Washington must always have a chaperon for such festivities. A girl who earns her own living is certainly able to judge the type of places she may go with a young man. While the young girl who lives with her family may ask a young man to come in after he escorts her home, the bachelor girl never should do so unless there is a group, with a married man and his wife or some person present who could be considered a chaperon.

It would be silly to tell a working girl who has an apartment by herself, or with a friend, that she can never invite men to call on her in her home. But the wise girl will be very discriminating as to her men callers and insist that they make these calls in the hours convention designates as proper calling hours. The wise girl will maintain the dignity of a girl receiving a caller in her parent's home. The modern young man will conform to her ideas of formality, of a young man calling on a modern young woman, in her apartment. He will at all times regard himself as a guest and the young woman as a hostess.

Leave at Reasonable Hour.

The well-bred young man will leave at a reasonable hour. If he does not, it is quite correct, under the circumstances for the bachelor woman hostess to indicate that it is time for him to leave, and to wish him a pleasant good night.

Common sense and dignity must be the watchwords of the woman who lives alone. The well-bred young woman will maintain the standard of formality and convention when she lives alone as she would if she lived with her family. She will exact these standards from her guests, men or women. The wise woman even though she wants to live her own life, will avoid being "talked about" or giving anybody a reason for "talking about her."

Jaded Appetites Often Are Revived By Old-Time Dish

LAZY APPETITES can be prodded into action by introducing a few old dishes that are new to the family's menu. During the spring when the family loses the usual zest for mealtimes, try chicken creole, a palate-teaser from old New Orleans.

Wash and cut one large, tender, milk-fed chicken, removing excess fat from portions and render in large skillet. Sear the chicken in hot fat and remove. Cut one onion, large green pepper and clove of garlick in small bits and add to the fat. (If there is not sufficient fat from the fowl, add butter.) Fry until light brown. Add can of tomatoes and half cup of chopped celery. Season with salt and curry to taste. Add the seared chicken, cover and let simmer until the chicken is tender. Thicken gravy as desired and serve with fluffy rice and a spring salad.

If you want to add an exotic touch to the menu, in place of the mixed salad serve la tropicale, which is famous at the Roney Plaza in Miami. Slice in half one avocado pear and place on a lettuce leaf with the rounded side up. Cut strips of pimiento long enough to reach the length and breadth of the pear, making a cross of the two. Serve with French dressing.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

July Fourth Accidents.

It is a regular thing for health writers to view with alarm the Fourth of July, and it is a good thing they do. The number of accidents and deaths from fireworks accidents has gone down steadily due to sensible municipal control and the organization of the medical profession to take care of injuries.

Nowadays, however, accidents, and especially automobile accidents, are far ahead of fireworks as a cause of Fourth of July mortality. Last year 254 people were killed on the Fourth of July from traffic accidents.

Our Fourth of July health advice, therefore, has changed its tone a little bit, and this year I suggest the following, which is entitled "How Not to Grow Old:"

"Demand half the road—the middle half. Insist on your rights. Always lock your brakes when skidding. It makes the job more artistic.

"Always race with locomotives to crossings. It breaks the monotony of their jobs. It is always a good test of your car.

"Always pass the car ahead on curves or turns. Don't use the horn because it might unnerve the other fellow and cause him to turn out too far.

"Always drive fast out of alleys. You might hit something. You can't tell.

"Always drive close to pedestrians in wet weather. Dry cleaners will erect a monument to your memory.

"Always try to pass cars on a hill when it is possible. Never look around when you back up. There is never anything behind your automobile.

"A few shots of booze will enable your car to do real stunts. For permanent results quaff long and deeply of the flowing bowl before taking the wheel.

"Drive as fast as you can on wet pavements. There is always something to stop you if you lose control—often a heavy truck or a plate glass window.

"New drivers should be shown how to drive fast in heavy traffic. It gives them the experience every motorist should have.

"Always speed! It looks as though you were a man of pep even though an amateur driver.

"Never stop or listen at railroad crossings. It consumes valuable time, and besides, nobody believes in signs."

Gay Throng Attends Sueyros' Tea Dance

40 Argentine Midshipmen and Commanding Officers Feted at the Mayflower by Naval Attache and Wife.

Youth and the Navy reigned supreme yesterday afternoon at the tea dance given by the Naval Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Sueyro in honor of the commanding officers and midshipmen of the Argentine training ship, President Sarmiento, now anchored at Philadelphia.

Receiving with the host and hostess in the Presidential Room of the Mayflower were Commander Alberto Gallegos League, the skipper of the ship; Mrs. Harold D. Hansen, wife of Capt. Hansen, of the U. S. Marine Corps, and Commander League's aide, Capt. Street.

Senora de Sueyro wore a gown of black lace, made on long lines, and a corsage bouquet of orchids; Mrs. Hansen also chose black. Her gown was of net, and she wore a large black straw hat.

It was a small party, but very gay, and vivacious girls danced with young midshipmen—some 40 in all—who wore the starched white uniforms of the Argentine navy. The mere fact that few of the lads spoke English and few of the girls spoke Spanish apparently did not detract from the merriment.

Small tables were placed about the room and champagne punch, whisky and soda and other drinks were served, including iced orange juice. A large buffet table, decorated with white gladiodi and baby's breath, was spread with hors d'oeuvres, sandwiches, ices and cakes.

Mrs. Gilbert Rowcliff, Daughters Present

Mrs. Gilbert J. R. Rowcliff and her two daughters were there. Admiral Rowcliff is in Newport. Caroline Rowcliff, who is a subdeb, was one of the belles of the "ball," and was attractive in her frock of brown and white print. Her sister Marian also was a center of attention.

Mrs. William D. Brereton, wife of Capt. Brereton, and her two daughters were among the guests. Nancy Brereton, tall and slender, wore a frock of pink and white print and a white hat. Two of the most popular girls at the party were Betty Rockwell, daughter of Capt. Francis Warren Rockwell, who was attired in pink and white print and a white turned-up straw hat worn on the back of her blonde head, and Louise Popham, daughter of Capt. John N. Popham. Her frock was of black trimmed with a demure white collar.

There were several foreign naval attaches and their wives present. Among them were Capt. F. C. Bradley, of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Bradley; Rear Admiral Robert Witthoeft, of the German Embassy; Capt. don Umberto Cugia, Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy; Capt. don Umberto Cugia, Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy; the Naval Attache of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Puga, she wearing a frock of red and white print, and the Naval Attache of the Japanese Embassy and Mme. Kobayashi.

Admiral, Mrs. Pettengill Are Late Arrivals

Others seen there, all of whom were daughters of naval officers, were Miss Mary Chew, Miss Nancy Hall, Miss Georgina Calver, Miss Eleanor Gatch, Miss Margaret Slarrow, Miss Mazie Howard, who wore a frock of brown and white; Miss Harriett Eldridge and Miss Eunice Willson, whose father, Capt. Russell Willson, is United States Naval Attache in London.

Wedding Unites Two Noted South Carolinian Families.

Two noted South Carolina families were united by marriage in the Capital last evening when Miss Agnes Louise Latimer became the bride of Perry Hazard Taft at the Sixth Presbyterian Church at 8:30 o'clock.

The bride, who is the daughter of the Special Assistant to the Postmaster General and Mrs. John Austin Latimer, is descended on her father's side from the Latimer, Sullivan, Ramsey and Caines families of South Carolina and Virginia, and on her mother's side from the Kennedy, Merrit and Roberts families of South Carolina. The bridegroom numbers among his noted ancertors the Pinckneys of the Palmetto State and Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Williams Teschke, of Hollywood, Calif.

The Rev. J. Herbert Garner, pastor of the bride's family, officiated. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Muriel Day played the processional music from Lohengrin, and John Richards McRae, of Columbia, S. C., and New York, grandson of former Gov. John G. Richards, sang two solos.

Bride Wears Princess Gown of Satin

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of bride's satin, princess style, made with a train. The neckline was high cowl, the sleeves puffed at the shoulders and long and tight from below the elbow. The gown had inserts of heirloom rosepoint lace, and the tulle veil fell from a coronet also of rosepoint. The bride's satin slippers were also decorated wtih fans of rosepoint and lace and pearl buckles. Her bouquet was of lilies of the valley and maiden-hair fern, with a background of Chantilly lace.

The maid of honor, Miss Ruth Marie Latimer, sister of the bride, wore a gown of peach-colored mousseline de soie. A bandeau of flowers, which matched her bouquet of Talisman roses, lilies of the valley, and delphinium, was held in place with periwinkle blue ribbon, streamers of which fell to the waistline in back.

The two bridesmaids, Miss Mary Lee Owens and Miss Julia Riley Kennedy, cousins of the bride, wore frocks of periwinkle mousseline de soie. Their bandeaus were tied with peach-colored ribbons, and their matching bouquets were of pink roses and blue and white flowers.

Little Elizabeth Ramsey, sister of the bride, and Diana Fare Teschke, sister of the bridegroom, were flower girls. They wore ankle-length dresses of peach-colored mousseline de soie with slippers to match. Each carried a nosegay of pink roses and blue delphinium, and wore bandeaus to match.

The church was decorated with palms, ferns, vases and baskets of white cut flowers with a background of white lattice screen entwined with garlands of green, and wall pockets of white flowers. A rope of green formed a frame for the window back of the altar. Large candelabra on each side of the altar were banked with Cathedral candles and fern. The pews were inclosed with white satin ribbons and bouquets of white flowers marked the family pews.

The mother of the bride, daughter of the late Senator Arthur M. Kennedy, of Williston, S. C., wore a flowered chiffon frock with a rolled sash of royal blue and American beauty, and blue slippers to match. Her corsage was of orchids.

Mrs. Teschke, the bridegroom's mother, was attired in a gown of silver and white with a cape to match. Her corsage, like Mrs. Latimer's, was of orchids.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Latimer entertained at a reception at their home, 4830 Sixteenth street. The house was decorated with palms, ferns and flowers. The wedding party received in the living room, in front of the fireplace, which was banked high with flowers.

Among those to attend the wedding and reception were the Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper; the members of the Senate and House of southern California and South Carolina. Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Frederic William Teschke and her son, Taft Sherman Taft, and her daughter, Miss Diana Taft, Hollywood, Calif., Sidney Kingsley and Miss Haila Stoddard, of Hollywood and New York; Mrs. William Douglass McIntosh, Mrs. Jessica Barham, Miss Patricia Barham, Los Angeles, Calif.; Miss Josephine Roberts, Charleston, S. The bridegroom is employed in the Library of Congress and is a graduate of the University of California and a member of the law school of George Washington University. Mrs. Taft is a graduate of Central High School and attended the Washington School for Secretaries and the George Washington University.

After a short wedding trip to New York, Mr. and Mrs. Taft will be at home at the home of the bride's parents, 4830 Sixteenth street. Later in the summer they will visit Mr. Taft's parents in Hollywood and upon their return from the West will take an apartment.

An improvised altar was made of white lilies and woodland ferns under the old trees at Crestleigh. The bride, who was attired in shell pink organza, with which she wore a matching garden hat and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley, came in on the arm of her father.

Mrs. Douglas Whitlock was matron of honor, and Sylvester Blanton, of Long Island, was best man.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 2.

ALICE HUGHES.

THE LIQUIDATION that's going on in Soviet Russia doesn't begin to compare in ire and venom with what's happenening in this town since yesterday, when the newly formed Animal Welfare Society, sponsored by a former city magistrate named Oberwager, suggested a 12-year liquidation plan for ridding New York City of all dogs. The ferocity of response to this proposal indicates that the society has bitten at something harder and tougher than it can chew. The way it is proposed to liquidate the canine population of New York is by means of birth control—illegal, more or less, when it comes to human beings, but countenanced among animals.

There's nothing cruel in this dogless outlook, insists former Magistrate Oberwager. On the contrary, it is a kindness to the animal to lift him from hot city pavements and taxi-scurrying streets, and relegate him to a dog's paradise—on earth—the country. There he can dig, romp, bark, multiply, and have fun. The average city dog, says the magistrate, pityingly, wouldn't even know how to dig to bury a bone. Never gets any practice. A dog can't dig into a concrete pavement. Nor is a hydrant a happy substitute for a tree.

Those dogs now living in New York should be left to live out their span of a dozen or so years. Those newly born, it is suggested, should be shipped to the country, or else destroyed. The reason for all these dog proposals is the growing danger and increase, by 50 per cent over last year, of dog bites; and just plain kindness to animals in sparing them a fate we human beings, alas, cannot escape by flight from the city.

To date no approval of this dogless plan has been expressed. But plenty of disapproval has. Dog owners are passionate about their pets. If they have to move their dogs to the country, they'll go with them. So there! At this moment, Mr. Oberwager is far more in danger of a sock in the noggin from an irate dog lover, than of a bite in the leg by a playful mastiff.

Miss Australia, whose name is Sheilah Martin, came to town the other day, accompanied, in proper British fashion, by her chaperon, Miss Jean Chareton, head of a girl's finishing school in Sydney. Miss Australia—she hates to be called by that name—was selected by acclaim as the prettiest and most all-around girl on the continent. For which she was given a 'round-the-world trip ticket, with instructions to stop in at the coronation in London. There she met the royal family. Everywhere else she has been meeting the press, which is how I came upon her.

What interested me is her looks. She is so far from the conventional beauty. To begin with, she is dark-haired, with brown eyes and lovely, vivid skin coloring. Her hair is free from masses of curls. She walks and moves gracefully, without self-consciousness—despite her height, 6 feet! She differs in still another way from most beauties. She doesn't want to go into the movies. Just wants to get home, find a man and be married. She's just 23 years old, and she's got the right idea, says I.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Frances Blaisdell, 22-year-old flute player in New York's only all-girl orchestra, took her fingers off the stops long enough to traipse down to the City Hall and get married the other day. She married another flute player, Alexander Williams, of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra. Whereupon she was promptly dropped from the 33-piece band, which has an antimarriage clause. But when, as in Iolanthe, her musical sisters demanded her reinstatement or else mutiny, with not a note played—Frances got her job back.

Miss Gretta Gaylord is, as far as I know, the only woman type designer in New York. She works for a large printing concern, journeys abroad every year to track down new type faces, and has high esteem among her fellow typographers.

Friends of Aimee Larkin, distaff editor of Collier's Magazine, are glad she has finally triumphed over a long siege of illness and is due back at her desk. My friend Rose Laird, who pats my face back into recognizable shape now and then, has received an invitation from Mrs. Davies, wife of our Ambassador to Soviet Russia, to visit her in Moscow, and to do her hair there.

Party Given In Honor of Chinese Girls

Julia Chen, Virginia Tsien Guests of Mrs. Joseph M. M. Gray.

Washington Wins Praise of American University Student.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

The Post Club Editor.

Miss Julia Chen, member of a distinguished Christian family of Singapore, China, yesterday afternoon, with Miss Virginia Tsien, was a guest of honor at a garden party given by Mrs. Joseph M. M. Gray, wife of the chancellor of American University, for members of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of Metropolitan Methodist Church. Miss Chen spoke informally to the guests in the shade of the old oak trees on the lawn of the chancellor's residence.

Her great-grandfather, she said, embraced Christianity and expressed the wish that a son or daughter of each succeeding generation of his family should work in the Christian faith. Her father, after serving as mayor of his village and later as a professor in Hwanan College, where she and Miss Tsien both were graduated, entered the ministry and became pastor of a church in Singapore as did her eldest brother.

Taught Seven Years in China

She taught seven years in South China prior to coming to this country two years ago with Miss Tsien, to enter Johns Hopkins University. They remained there a year and, last fall entered American University. The two girls have been together, pursuing their studies and educational work since 1924. Both wore Chinese robes, Miss Chen's of blue, bordered in gold satin, and Miss Tsien's blue and white in a diamond design outlined in black.

Miss Chen spoke with composure and assurance. She told her own background and her appreciation of the privilege of studying in this country. She likes Washington better than New York, which is "a place to play, but not to say," she said. She praised this city as "not only a dignified Capital, but a place which offers first-hand knowledge such as textbooks do not afford." She added that when she returned to China she hoped to do much better teaching than she had done before, so "what I learn in this country will not be wasted, but bear wholesome fruit."

She had been asked to express her opinion of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and said she believed he had proved himself outstanding through his progress in unifying China, promoting a road-building program and urging a single language throughout the country. The new life movement, with improvement of working hours and living conditions was another phase of his program to aid the country, which she mentioned. At first, she said, the people regarded him as just another general, but they feel now, in view of his accomplishments, that he has proved himself a leader.

Miss Chen and Miss Tsien share a small apartment where they sometimes entertain their American friends at Chinese dinners. In China they were not accustomed to household duties nor cooking, but here they have learned to prepare simple Chinese dishes and enjoy "keeping house."

The program yesterday afternoon included songs by Miss Helen Shenton, daughter of Dr. Walter F. Shenton, of the university faculty, who was accompanied at the piano by her mother.

Members of the executive committee of the Missionary Society assisted the hostess in serving punch and cakes. They included Mrs. J. M. Young, Mrs. Park A. Galleher, Mrs. J. S. Montgomery, Mrs. Hugh Irish, Mrs. J. T. Gibbs, Miss Sarah Carr, Mrs. Inez Hopkins, Miss Grace Edwards and Miss Ella Ford.

Among other guests were Mrs. Samuel Polkinhorn and her daughter, Miss Blanche Polkinhorn, Mrs. William A. Keese, wife of the pastor of the church; Mrs. H. A. Haven, district secretary of the Missionary Society; Mrs. Leo H. Paulger, home secretary of the Baltimore Branch; Mrs. William B. Smith, Mrs. R. O. Saunders, Mrs. L. S. Barnhardt and Mrs. Frost.

The skirt is tailored with a slight flare at the hem and is worn with a fitted jacket which fastens on navy blue buttons. Wide, curved revers outline the front opening of the jacket and reveal the blouse of navy blue sheer linen. Insertions of eyelet embroidery trim the neck yoke and form bands below the short, puffed sleeves.

For beach wear, there is a costume of brown linen made with a brassiere top and a full, circular skirt which is gored with inverted V insertions of bright yellow, orange, green and tomato red giving a striped effect.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

The Sunshine and Community Society, which this spring celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary; is one of the few organizations past the quarter-century mark whose founder is still one of its active members. Mrs. Ella S. Knight, who started the society, was made honorary president at the recent breakfast which formally closed this season's activities.

The Sunshine Society had a humble beginning. Mrs. Knight, who came to Washington from Indiana before the Cleveland Administration, brought with her the desire to help the sick and needy and spread good cheer. She began her "sunshine" work in her new home here, giving food and clothing to needy families of whom she knew, taking flowers and a word of encouragement to those who were ill.

Finding a need far greater than she could meet, she enlisted the interest of a small group of women, and at the suggestion of the late Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey the Sunshine and Community Society was organized. Its purpose was to give to the less fortunate, and the members were pledged to kindness, tolerance, gentleness and at least one kind act a day.

"IN THOSE DAYS," said Mrs. Knight, recalling the first years of the society, "we did not give large card parties by which we could raise substantial sums of money to carry on our work. We did things in a small way, raising a little at a time by the sale of theater tickets and through individual contributions. I used to go myself to call for clothing people gave us for distribution. Then we found a young boy in a needy family who did this for us—wherever possible we provided work for those we helped. If a church group were having an entertainment, we often secured women to help in the kitchen; others we employed to mend and repair used clothing which was to be given away. There was no set program for our work—we supplied every need possible with the facilities at hand."

• • • •

AMONG THE WOMEN associates with Mrs. Knight in the early work were Mrs. Mussey, Mrs. Mary I. Wood, then an officer of the General Federation of Women's clubs; Mrs. Mary E. Lockwood and Mrs. Henry N. Couden. They met monthly in the old Wesley Methodist Church at Fifth and F streets.

Mrs. Knight was widely known for her work and people often came to her door asking food or clothing. To supply such requests she kept her attic full of garments of all sizes and descriptions and permitted those who needed them to go up and make their selection.

Mrs. Knight still distributes bundles of clothing on occasion when a need is brought to her attention. The society, now with a membership of 99, has expanded its early program and at present is supplying milk to undernourished children.

Its founder was its president for five years. The first two winters were devoted exclusively to work. The second spring, however, Mrs. Knight suggested to the members they provide a little sunshine for themselves, and instituted the annual breakfast. It was given at an old hotel near the Capitol, which since has been torn down. Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, of the Florence Crittenton Mission, and Mrs. Emma Sanford Shelton, of the W. C. T. U., were among the 75 guests.

THE SOCIETY has the unusual distinction of having not only its founder still an active member, but also all of its past presidents still living and most of them actively interested in the organization. They include Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, who followed Mrs. Knight as president; Mrs. George A. Ross, Mrs. William Beahm, Mrs. James H. Underwood, Mrs. Ernest F. Gude, Mrs. J. Edwin Reid and Mrs. Eugene F. Thompson. The new president is Mrs. Charles H. Bair.

Mrs. Knight is spending her first summer in Washington in 20 years. She has usually spent the summer season with her daughter, Mrs. F. G. Alsbrook, in St. Petersburg, Fla., and her winters in the Capital. This year she reversed the order, and is now with her daughter, Mrs. E. Richard Gasch, on R street, who was the first secretary of the society. In addition to her interest in the Sunshine Society, Mrs. Knight is a member of the Constitution Chapter of the D. A. R., of which she was regent from 1914 to 1916; is now its chaplain, and has held every other office. She is also a charter member of the State Officers' Club of the District.

Coronation Influences Latest Lampshades

The influence of England's coronation on decorative effects in our own country is seen in new lampshades which are appearing in unusually rich colors of a washable shade material. These coronation colors, which include deep-toned yellow, purple, red, green and blue, are enhanced by the natural lustre of the plastic material and its translucent quality which spreads a soft light. As the lampshades can be kept free from dust with a damp cloth, the vivid colors will retain their original brightness. They are also proof against fading and are stain resistant. Shades in the new colors may be had in both stretched and pleated styles of this modern plastic material.

Girl Scout Day Camps Are Opened

Two More Units Added This Year, Making Five in All.

Mrs. Charles Corlett Is Director of the Committee.

GIRL SCOUTS in the District are not forgotten, although the spotlight is at present on the visiting Boy Scouts in their tent city. The Day Camps which have been conducted in previous seasons under the sponshorship of the Day Camp committee, have been opened again and two new ones added to the three held last year.

Mrs. Charles Corlett, of the District of Columbia Girl Scout council, is chairman of the Day Camp committee, with Mrs. Willard Kiplinger as co-chairman. Mrs. Kiplinger is acting as the head of the committee in the absence of Mrs. Corlett, who is away for the summer. Others who are serving as representatives of their individual districts and who assisted with preparations for the camps include Mrs. Fred Walker, Mrs. Ira Clarke, Mrs. Anne Comer, Mrs. Edward Webster, Miss Helen Newman and Mrs. Chauncey Cook.

The camps conducted last season were those at Fort Kemble Park, Jessup Blair Community Park and Langdon Park. This year new ones have been added in Arlington County, Va., at Lee boulevard and in Southwest Washington. There will also be one established for colored scouts near Anacostia, with a trained director.

Miss Katherine Carter who has been on the staff at Girl Scout headquarters for the past year, will supervise the program, which is to be unified through all the camps, and Mrs. Ralph Doherty will be assistant director.

Mrs. Carl Thompson will be in charge of the arts and crafts instructions; Mrs. Joseph Evans of the music appreciation and dramatics and Miss Deane Holmead of marionettes and dramatics. The music instruction will be largely the teaching of appreciation, through the use of records, folk songs and ballads.

Overnight trips will include out-door cookery for which the WPA is furnishing supplies to the new camp in Southwest Washington. Tennis instruction is provided at Langdon Park, where there also will be small gardens in which the girls will plant vegetables. This was done last year and, when the vegetables were ripe the young gardeners had them for their luncheons. Archery will be taught at all the camps as will pioneering and the fundamentals of camping.

Special features of the summer program will be clay modeling and work in design, taught by Mr. Hugh Collins, who is being sent from the Federal Arts Division of the WPA. Two talks at each camp by Mr. Donald E. McHenry, naturalist of the Park Service; and Washington Story League are also planned.

Stewart Bingman, Mrs. Bessie Stevens, Mrs. Weston B. Jones and Mrs. Harry Kopel, board of directors.

The new officers were installed at a meeting held last week at the Continental Hotel, with the manager, Mr. Clifford Cook, and Mrs. Cook as hosts. Mrs. Williamson, delegate to the national convention in Omaha, just closed, reported Mrs. Sybil Noble, of Jonesboro, Ark., had been elected as the new international president and that Atlantic City had been chosen as the 1938 convention city. Mrs. Kopel, local publicity director, received the national award at the convention for her achievement in journalism. The "See America First" director of the local unit, Mrs. Edna Thompson, was given honorable mention for her year's program and a membership card in the National Membership Boosters Club was awarded Mrs. Cook.

Louisa Expects 75,000 at Fair

The Louisa (Va.) Volunteer Fire Company and the Ladies' Auxiliary are preparing for an attendance of 5,000 persons at their 1937 fair on Monday. The fair has become an annual event in Louisa, and the entire county can be expected to take a holiday and help the firemen celebrate the Fourth.

A program is being arranged, with one of the main events of the day a parade at noon. Many floats are being entered. The Shenandoah Municipal Band will lead the parade and play for the fair during the day. Visiting firemen from Culpeper, Warrenton, Orange, Gordonsville and Charlottesville are expected to be present with some of their equipment to participate. Cups will be competed for by the visiting fire companies.

A midway is being arranged for the fair, with merry-go-rounds, swings and contests for the youngsters and with games of skill for the older patrons.

The Post is the only daily morning paper in W ashington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

Action From Chicago Strike Riot Films

1. Introduced as evidence in the Congressional investigation being conducted by Senate Civil Liberties Committee, the hitherto suppressed film made by a Paramount newsreel photographer was released yesterday. A stirring strip showing police action is reproduced here.

2. Sequence depicts the activity of a Chicago policeman when a parader went down. Gun in hand, the officer is using a club held in the other hand and the man is being severely beaten while lying on the ground.

3. Felled by the officer, he was then prodded with the nightstick and rolled over. Two marchers are on the ground and a half dozen clubs held by police appear to be waiting for them to attempt to arise.

4. With two inert forms now lying on the ground, fellow officers have withdrawn while the policeman at the left is pocketing his gun. It was not known whether these men had been shot before the clubbing started.

Bob Burns Says:

It is always better to be a visitor rather than a host because when the company starts to get dull you can get up and go home.

I think my Uncle Sanky had the best system I ever saw for gettin' rid of company. He had a party at his house down home one time and after they'd exhausted all the games like "Heavy, heavy, hangs over thy head" and "Spin the Plate," Uncle Sanky yawned and mentioned somethin' about havin' to get up early in the morning but the company didn't take the hint.

Finally at 9:30 when the guests didn't show any signs of leavin', Uncle Sanky turned to my aunt and he says, "Come on, mama, let's go to bed—these people may want'ta go home."

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Live Wire.

The American Federation of Government Employes, currently rousing itself to a revival pitch of interest in itself, and with all its lines out after new members to fill the chairs of new lodges, has cast about for an executive assistant for President Stengle and seems to have found a live wire.

He is Godfrey V. Wickware, a 37-year-old man with active eyes, a neat mustache and a fine record as an organizer and doer. The A. F. G. E. can use the latter qualification to high advantage in these days, when the bugles of the C. I. O. are trilling up recruits in the Government field.

First consider Wickware: A native of New Jersey and of hard New England stock, he has in a short career found himself in high places in the automobile business. He has been president of the District of Columbia Division, Inc., Young Democrats; was a member of the Democratic Speakers' Bureau. Recently he took the District Bar, and prior to this was awarded an LL.B from Columbus University. He is chancellor, Alpha Mu Chapter, Sigma Delta Kappa, national legal fraternity, and, away from these duties of college fraternities and the thoughts of the law, is an officer in the D. C. Naval Reserve.

WICKWARE.

He has a quick manner of talking and a wide acquaintanceship that includes hundreds of workers in Uncle Sam's field, along with some of the best loungers who ever held down overstuffed chairs in the ancient and exclusive social clubs of the late capitol of the Confederacy, Richmond.

Consider now how he became associated with the A. F. G. E.: His friends say that it's because he has an eating hankering after organizational work. He had no opportunity for this in the P. W. A., his last employment. There he toyed over tiresome papers and bedeviled himself because he was not in the field making somebody join something.

They say, too, that he has long had a hankering to engage in the labor movement because he believes that it's the up-and-coming thing. They say that he was glad to hook up with the A. F. G. E. because he believes it has its sails set on fairer winds than does the United Federal Workers of America, the C. I. O. group.

And so he is now associated with the A. F. G. E., and in an excellent time for his ambitions. The first hymns of the great revival of membership interest are just beating now on the roofs of the national office and Wickware hopes to be among the elders leading the converted to the front. He seems live wire enough to lead many—he has had intensive experience in selling things and ideas—his friends say that he has never failed to sell his wares—it remains now to be seen just how much headway the national office will give one of the livest wires in its organization.

Wickware has, certainly, one fine advantage. He is head of the District of Columbia Young Democrats. The Young Democrats were fairly powerful actors in the last Presidential election show. This certainly shouldn't hurt Wickware any now. And, besides this, he has been employed in the emergency agencies of the Government and has knowledge and a wide acquaintanceship among the emergency personnel.

It is among the emergency personnel that the C. I. O. is making its first show of strength. They consider their first toe-hold to be in that particular field. To date, the A. F. G. E. seems to have ignored that particular field, turning its attention chiefly to the old-line employes, who, the organization seems to think, make for a more stable membership.

But it is tremendously obvious that many very stable employes are in the emergency groups. There are, in these groups, hundreds of men and women who toiled long overtime hours when the various agencies were being established and this without a single beef or squawk. Some of these now, observers say, would like to affiliate with some quietly toned organization like the A. F. G. E. just to show their protest of some of the emergency workers joining the C. I. O.

The older organizations have overlooked them, too, because of the feeling that their tenure of employment is to be brief and once out of a job they might besiege the national offices and try to launch them into employment agencies. Be that as it may, the C. I. O. seems willing enough to get them.

Fair Weather Is Forecast For Holidays

Celebration at Ellipse to Feature District Observance.

Speeches and Fireworks Set for Monday Night at 7:15.

With only a slight reservation, the weather man got out on a limb last night with a cheery prediction that sunny skies would bless the two-and-a-half day holiday that will take thousands of toilers out of the city to the seashore and the mountains today.

"Conditions appear favorable now for fair weather most of the time on Saturday, Sunday and Monday," asserted Meteorologist C. I. Mitchell yesterday. He hedged, however, to the extent of admitting the possibility of "some local thundershowers."

The Fourth of July week-end, which this year takes in Monday, held a feeling of responsibility of a different sort for Dr. George C. Ruhland, the District health officer who issued a warning against careless and unlawful use of fireworks.

Firecracker Warning.

He urged that parents and children confine the day's traditional celebration to formal ceremonies to be held Monday night in the Ellipse. Firecrackers and Roman candles, he pointed out, usually cause the most serious accidents.

Originally, the city-wide observance of the 161st anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence was scheduled to be held at the Watergate, but Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the committee in charge, and other District officials decided at the last minute to shift the scene of festivities to the Ellipse.

Expected trouble in handling traffic at the Watergate, and limited seating facilities there were the main reasons for the change.

Ceremonies will open at 7:15 p. m. with a parade of military units. The Marine Band, under direction of Capt. J. Taylor Branson, will play.

Senator F. Ryan Duffy (Democrat), Wisconsin, will speak. Representative McGranery, of Pennsylvania, will read the Declaration of Independence, and the Rev. H. W. Burgan, of the Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church, will say the invocation.

Flag-Raising Ceremony.

A flag-raising ceremony with pledge to the flag will precede the speeches and a torchlight parade of Boy Scouts is scheduled before fireworks start at 8:35.

The area inclosed by Fifteenth street, Pennsylvania avenue, Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue will be barred to traffic during the ceremonies. Main parking areas will be the Washington Monument grounds and Potomac Park, with parallel parking on Constitution avenue.

Community celebrations and sports events have been scheduled in many parts of the city. Preparations were made at Glen Echo Park to provide extra picnic facilities.

The American Automobile Association yesterday issued warnings to motorists to observe rules of safe driving. It also advised swimmers against going in the water while overheated and against overexposure in sunlight.

Ceremony at Lee Shrine.

Mrs. Cazenove Lee, District of Columbia director of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, announced today plans for the Fourth of July celebration at Stratford of July celebration at Stratford Hall, Westmoreland County, Va.

The ceremonies, at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, will be in honor of the two signers of the Declaration of Independence who were born at Stratford—Richard Henry Lee and Francis Lightfoot Lee.

Gen. B. F. Cheatham, resident superintendent and official host at Stratford, will make the welcoming address. Mrs. Charles D. Lanier, president of the Robert E. Lee Memoral Foundation, under whose auspices the restoration of the shrine is being conducted, will speak on the five years of progress at Stratford.

Old Owl Forgets Wisdom, Stuffs Himself to Death

So now Frankie is dead, and the members of the Takoma Park Police Department, who were most kind to him, are sorry.

Policeman Frank Lane captured Frankie some days ago in a yard in the first block of Sherman avenue. Frankie was frightening puppies and kittens, too young to do anything but mistrust wisdom. He kept him at the police station for a while, and then Special Town Officer Harry Ourand took him home for a pet.

Ourand fed Frankie a pound of beef a day and Frankie ate it all, for Frankie was half-starved when found.

Mr. Lockwood's personality is distinctly opposite from his painting style. He's a gentle, easy-spoken fellow with uncombed hair and dirty hands. His painting is sharp, precise, and perhaps hard. But that's frequently the case with artists. They can sip beer casually, talk casually, dismiss the Supreme Court issue with a shrug but paint with the firmness and cold ferocity of a lathe cutting steel. He's that kind.

As an example of the problems of doing a prize-winning historical fresco. Mr. Lockwood mentioned beavers. In his preliminary research before starting to paint, the artist noticed the importance of beavers in American history. The beaver, you recall, was one of the prime motivations of the pioneers who opened up the country. Trappers and explorers on the trail of beaver pelts led the invasion of the West. So Mr. Lockwood wanted to show a beaver in his panorama.

Beavers Scarce.

That, it seems, is easier wanted than had. In the first place, Lockwood lives in Taos, N. Mex., high in the arid mountains. A poor place to look for beavers. There are no zoos in Taos, either. A photograph wouldn't do, so the artist set out in search of a beaver.

Before he got through, he was a beaver expert. He located a trapper who was a relic of pioneer days who said he knew where there were some beavers in the Rio Grande country. Next thing was to catch one, which the trapper succeeded in doing in a couple of weeks. Mr. Lockwood hopped into his car upon receiving the news and raced 50 miles to the scene of the trapped beaver. There he saw, not an animal the size of a housecat, as he expected but a smaller monster weighing 85 pounds. It was quite a surprise, and the artist was exceedingly happy with himself that he had waited until he saw a beaver before he painted one. Otherwise he might have made a zoological fool of himself.

Well, that wasn't the end of the beaver. He had to cart it back to Taos, where the man who was posing in his sketches as ye olde pioneer trapper was residing. It suddenly dawned on the painter that he had to have an authentic trap. You don't catch beavers with bare hands, even in impressionistic Postoffice murals. So he had to get a trap. Next he had to find out how a beaver gets itself into a trap.

Trapping Technique.

He learned somewhere in some mysterious manner that the ideal way to catch a beaver is by the hind foot. Ye olde pioneer trappers proffered it that way on the theory that the beaver wouldn't gnaw its hind foot off, whereas it would the forefoot. In addition to all this, Mr. Lockwood learned a good many other interesting facts about the habits and characteristics of beavers, which he will be glad to tell you, but which we won't go into here. You can find him on the fifth floor, rear.

It was pretty much the same problem all the way through his painting, from the Hopi Indian dancer who is masticating a rattlesnake, on the left, to the coming of the steam locomotive, on the right. The artist had to get the correct warpaint for the Hopi, the right number of buttons on the pioneer woman's blouse, the proper measurements for an adobe brick, the exact proportions of a steam engine's smokestack to its cab, etc., etc.

Take the horse which the Spanish Conquistador is riding into the scene, away back in antiquity. What kind of a nag should it be—a Percheron, a Shetland pony, a pinto, or a hobby-horse? The artist decided against these possibilities and selected, instead, a white Arabian, an Arabian so aristocratic and strikingly beautiful. When he got the Arabian painted, it was such a luscious thing he decided to omit its bridle reins because the reins would spoil its lovely neckline. It has Byzantine eyes like Salome.

Long, Hard Climb.

Mr. Lockwood has had a long and tough career as an artist, forever confronted with the necessity of eating. He also is confronted with the necessity of his wife's eating regularly, although she is a patient and loving spouse and approves of everything he does. He started out as a newspaperman. He worked on Senator Capper's paper in Atchison, Kans., and, through a process of evolution, became a painter.

Eleven years ago he migrated into the stark and brilliant fastnesses of the Taos country, which since 1890 had been sprinkled with artists. Nowadays Taos is rather marked by its Greenwich Village atmosphere, following the paths of artistic decadence noticed elsewhere in America in such centers as Provincetown and the Village itself. The artistic population of the town of 1,800 is heavily infiltrated with pseudos, dilettantes and hangers-on, whose principal interest in painting is in studio parties. In other words, it has gone arty.

But Mr. Lockwood foreswore all that and worked very hard, and in a few years was accruing unto himself the rewards therefor. He began to win prizes in Chicago, San Francisco and Denver. Better, still, some of the museums began to take notice and bought his pictures, which constitutes not only recognition, but cash. He probably is proudest of crashing the famed Whitney Museum, in New York, selling an oil, four water colors and two lithographs.

Hack Work.

But still, it wasn't exactly a fortune he was acquiring. In fact, he was so hard up he had to journey back into the musty haunts of commercial art in Kansas City every winter to keep his ribs padded.

A year ago Mr. Lockwood entered the Treasury competition for eight frescos for the new office building in Washington. About 300 designs were submitted, and most of the best artists in America were in there trying. Work for Federal buildings constitutes the largest and best paid work available today for a man who earns a livelihood with brush and paint. They all wanted to win.

Lockwood's design was one of eight chosen. He feels that it was somewhat gratifying to win, but what was more essential, it gave him a chance to gain considerable fame, which is bread and butter to the artist. Besides, there was $3,000 in it. That, however, must be considered incidental. He has already worked nine months on the job—hunting beavers—and still has a fortnight's painting ahead. He has to buy all his own materials, such as paint, plaster, scaffolding, and has to hire his assistant out of the $3,000. "I'll be lucky to break even," he said yesterday.

The murals picture the history of the development of the West and Southwest from a time previous to the arrival of the Spanish conquerors to the end of the Indian wars toward the end of the last century.

What He Sees.

"A panorama of the series of events throughout these years is shown against a background of Western landscapes—mountains unchanging, which have looked down through the centuries on a varied and colorful array of exciting times."

The above quotation is from a little sign Mr. Lockwood has pasted on the wall beside his two panels, for the information of his audience, which continuously runs three or four people all day long. The funniest spectators were two little colored boys, he said, who studied the panels for a long time.

"Well, how do you like it?" one lad asked the other.

"Ah likes it O. K.," the second replied solemnly, "and, boy, Ah'm hard to please."

Mr. Lockwood's murals are being painted in true fresco, one of the oldest and most enduring methods of painting, tracing back into the mists of antiquity. Dried pigment is mixed with distilled water and applied on fresh lime plaster. When the plaster sets the color hardens with it and becomes an integral part of the wall.

Modern Murals.

He has to get up very early in the morning to finish a day's work, as every square inch of plaster he applies must be painted—once and for all, with no erasing or changes afterward—by the time it dries. Lockwood starts work at 5 a. m. He did have a plasterer as an assistant, J. M. Phillips, of Takoma Park, but Phillips got sick, so he does his own plastering as well as painting. It's a busy day from 5 a. m. to 5 p. m., with no time off for lunch—he doesn't dare stop.

There are a few more things to mention. The pattern for the painting is put onto the walls with an old-fashioned dressmaker's pattern wheel, a little disc with sharp cogs such as grandma used to keep in her sewing basket. His painting assistant is a young man with bushy hair who admires Lockwood's style immensely—Allen Kauffman, a Corcoran Art School alumnus. Miss Frances Ortiz, a stenographer in Senator Hatch's office and a native of Santa Fe, came down to see his pictures yesterday and thought they were cute. She's of Spanish descent. And the lad carrying a flintlock in one picture is really a Taos Boy Scout, who is here in Washington for the Jamboree. "That's a good local angle for the story," Mr. Lockwood remarked, ever the newspaperman.

Md. Skeleton Identified as Cab Driver's

Believed Holdup Victim; Woods Here Searched Year Ago.

Positive identification last night of a skeleton found in a thicket near Greenbelt, Md., as the remains of Charles Lee Miller, Washington cab driver missing for almost a year, gave police another unsolved murder with involved jurisdictions.

Authorities admitted all doubt as to the man's identity was removed by the report of Miller's dentist, Dr. William E. Lewis, 2062 Rhode Island avenue northeast. The dentist disclosed an examinattion showed the teeth found in the skull of the dead man were those of the missing cab driver.

The discovery of Miller's taxicab at Tenth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast last July 28, the night he disappeared, and the statement of several witnesses that they saw two colored men abandon the automobile there, are regarded as positive proof that the hacker was murdered. Robbery, police say, was the apparent motive.

Question of Jurisdiction.

But was the murder committed in Washington or just across the Maryland line in Prince Georges County?

As in the still disputed death of Charles Keene, on a Norfolk steamer, the question of jurisdiction hampers police investigation.

"We will have to determine," Sergt. Ralph Brown, of the county police, said, "whether the murder was committed in Washington or in Maryland."

Miller, a war veteran who began driving a taxi after his contracting business collapsed in the depression, was reported last seen at 8:30 the night he disappeared in a restaurant at Fourth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast.

According to one theory, it was shortly after this that his cab was hailed by several colored men. They asked him to drive them into Maryland. One of the men drew a pistol and when they got to the lonely spot on the Edmonston road near the Greenbelt project, he shot Miller and dragged his body into a clump of bushes 100 feet from the road, where it lay until discovered by workers clearing the site for building purposes.

Slain in D. C., Body Hidden.

The other theory, however, holds that the driver was slain in Washington and his body carried to the secluded spot where it was found.

Suspecting a crime immediately after his disappearance, Washington police searched for the body. The woods near Catholic University were scoured by police, Boy Scouts and 25 cab drivers on the day following Miller's disappearance, but no trace of the missing man was found. The search centered at this spot when investigators were informed that the last call Miller had taken was to the Sisters College of Catholic University. That, however, was at about 8 o'clock, a half hour prior to the last time the cab driver was reported to have been seen alive.

Still clinging to the hope his father was alive when the search of the woods proved futile, Charles Lee Miller, jr., on his tenth birthday last August appealed through the newspapers for "daddy to come home." That's the birthday gift the youngster wanted.

Teeth, Laundry Marks Check.

Even after the skeleton had been found, together with clothes answering the description of those worn by her husband, Mrs. Miller did not want to believe he had been slain. When she was shown the clothes she could not say for sure they were her husband's.

But when the laundry marks found on the pants tallied with those at the establishment where he had dealt and the dentist's report revealed the teeth were Miller's, the tragedy was unfolded.

29th Division Maps Program For Convention

A. E. F. Unit to Gather Here Aug. 20-22; Will Honor C. B. Borland.

Preliminary arrangements were completed last night for the reunion in Washington of men who 20 years ago stood side by side in trenches in France as soldiers of the Twenty-ninth Division, A. E. F., mustered from the District, New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia.

At a meeting in the Willard Hotel, the convention committee of the division arranged for memorial services at the grave of Gen. Charles G. Morton and at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and a pilgrimage to Mount Vernon.

The convention will be held from August 20 to 22, with headquarters at the Willard Hotel, where a banquet and dance has been scheduled for Saturday, August 21.

Between 1,000 and 1,500 World War members of the division are expected to attend the gathering, originally scheduled to have been held at Sea Girt, N. J.

National Commander Charles B. Borland, director of public safety of Norfolk, Va., will be the guest of honor.

The chairmen of arrangement committees are: Program and printing, Earle McGowan; publicity, Robert Beeton; distinguished guests, Russell P. Freeman; finance, Edward V. Dittoe; transportation, Percy C. Klein; banquet and luncheons, Gerald J. O'Day; memorial, Emmett P. Bateman; registration, H. J. Carow; souvenirs and decorations, Lee J. Perrin; sightseeing, John W. Expert Shows How Esperanto Can Be Learned Without Books

How Esperanto, the universal language, may be learned without the use of books and through the spoken word alone, was demonstrated at the Congress of the Esperanto Association of North America, at an open meeting in the Hamilton Hotel last night.

The teacher was Miss Roan Orloff, a State House employe at Boston, Mass. Her method was first invented during the World War by Father Andre Cseh, a Hungarian priest, who was captured and put in a prison camp in Siberia. Father Cseh could not speak the language of his fellow prisoners of war. Because he was an accomplished Esperantist, however, he succeeded in instructing them, and his days were lonely no longer.

Many of the men and women who attended last night's session got their first ideas of Esperanto from her.

Using a blackboard, she began by teaching them to tell their names and give their occupations. Then came the salutations of everyday life.

"Good morning," Miss Orloff said in Esperanto to her audience, and through the medium of a translator, it wasn't long until they might have been able to walk down a universal street in a universal land where Esperanto was the tongue, and be polite no end.

Before Miss Orloff had finished, neophytes might have rolled off tongue-twisting sentences about the weather, the world's ice boxes, the craters on the moon, the price of eggs in Madagascar.

Speakers at last night's meeting included Rafal Iampkovsky, attache at the Polish Embassy; Joseph R. Scherer, Swiss-born globe-girdler, author and lecturer; James F. Morton, of Patterson, N. J.; E. C. Reed, Washington attorney, and Henry W. Hetzel, Philadelphia educator.

Iampkovsky told the audience he considered L. L. Zamenhof, inventor of Esperanto half a century ago, one of Poland's outstanding citizens. He welcomed Americans who plan to attend the world Esperanto conference in Warsaw this summer.

"All Poland realizes the creator of Esperanto was a great man," said he.

Scherer described his experiences with Esperanto throughout the world, and so did Reed. Tribute to the Esperanto groups, which have an active membership of more than 50,000 the world over, was paid by all the speakers.

Taxi Men Fight Liability Plan

District taxi drivers last night opposed passage of the compulsory liability insurance bill, and projected organization on a city-wide scale as a start toward eventual limitation of drivers, in a gathering of 100 members of the Industrial Brotherhood of Cab Drivers at Coconut Grove, Fifth and K streets northwest.

Present membership of the brotherhood here is between 400 and 500, they said.

Loring Black, former Congressman from New York, and one-time member of the District Committee, and Harry S. Wender, chairman of the committee on safety of the Federation of Citizens Associations, addressed the meeting.

Bob Burns, Martha Raye Are Aided by Big Cast; Ice Carnival Unique.

"MOUNTAIN MUSIC." Paramount picturization of a story by McKinley Kantor, adapted to the screen by John C. Moffitt, Duke Atteberry, Russel Crouse and Charles Lederer, with music by Sam Coslow; costarring Bob Burns and Martha Raye, with John Howard, Terry Walker, Rufe Davis, George Hayes, Spencer Charters, Charles "Slim" Timblin, Olin Howland, Fuzzy Knight, Goodee Montgomery and Rita La Roy. Directed by Robert Florey. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle Theater by Mary Harris.

Besides being the first hillbilly musical of major length, "Mountain Music" marks the debut of a new star team, Martha Raye and Bob Burns. And judging by the spontaneous applause that broke out at the end of the picture, Martha and Bob will continue to be teamed in the celluloids for quite a spell.

A mountain wedding with shotgun attendants, buffet refreshments of corn and more corn (all in jugs), an unwilling bride and a plumb obstinate bridegroom (Bob Burns) starts off "Mountain Music" with a whiz. The bridegroom makes his escape on a mule. Then the shooting starts.

The pivotal idea of "Mountain Music" is that Bob goes out of his mind every time he receives a tap on the head. As himself, he thinks that Martha is homelier than all getout, but the minute a bucket or something falls on his sensitive bean he thinks she is the most beautiful girl in all the world. The happy ending indicates that Martha is going to have to wallop her husband regularly to keep him crazy about her.

Stars at Their Best.

Without letting down in their individual types of funmaking, both Martha and Bob have smoothed off their work considerably, particularly Martha. Those folks who declare that they "just can't bear Martha Raye," will find it hard not to like her in this picture. She is both comic and appealing. Bob Burns, too, is going right along in the development that has rocketed him from a minor vaudeville performer to the headlines in a few months. If hardly a real candidate for the mantle of Will Rogers, he is the best prospect in this line that Hollywood has yet turned out.

A favorite critical pastime is picking "best shots" in pictures. "Mountain Music" reeks with prize moments. There is the scene where the mule sits down on Bob; Martha's tremendous floperoo as an adagio dancer; the scene where the court room is cleared with a fire hose (really funnier than it souhds); the mob of bald-headed men who had used the wrong hair tonic.

While plenty of good assistance is given the stars, especially by the hhillbilly performers, the picture is practically all Raye and Burns. John Howard does well in a small semi-leading role.

Novelty on Ice.

The Dupont-Roosevelt wedding lends glamour to the newsreel. A Charlie Chase comedy rattles along gaily with a dozen matrimonial misdoings and mix-ups to the minute.

Quite a delight to the eye is the St. Moritz Ice Carnival with its dozens of smart gliders. Kit Klein, besides being a champion skater, also turns out to be a handsome, long legged gal with quite a bit of stage talent. Her impressions of Japanese, Russian and Scandinavian skating, also her tap dance on skates, all were smart and graceful novelties.

Charlie Duffy's impression of a drunk literally on a skate was liked by the audience, also the attractive figure skating of Dick and Irene Meister. The carnival was properly topped by the major thrill of Champion Hearn's barrel jumping.

Trans-Lux

The biggest item of interest on the new Trans-Lux program is the Paramount short subject, "What Happened in Chicago on May 30," the news picture that was taken before the La Follette senatorial committee investigating the labor clashes that have high-lighted the steel strikes. This film is an interesting camera study of current Americana and comes to the Trans-Lux unedited, prefaced by a short talk by Senator La Follette, who urged that the picture be released.

Feminine eyes will be diverted, however, to the close-ups of the bridal event of the year, the duPont-Roosevelt wedding, which was enough to sidetrack political rivalry—for the time being, at least.

Sports again dominate the rest of the Trans-Lux bill—everything from bathing beauties to surfboard riding and back through skiing and trout fishing, cycle racing in Australia, glider meet in New York, the Washington Boy Scout Jamboree, logrolling with a woman winner and bobsledding at Palisades Park.

Washington youngsters on a water holiday share honors with the Scouts as the local high lights of the screen menu, and "The Stork Takes a Holiday" in cartoon color is a gentle, amusing satire on recent strike troubles.

News, as the press knows it, is here in a wide diversity.

"THE EMPEROR'S CANDLESTICKS." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by the Baroness Orczy, adapted to the screen by Monckton Hoffe and Harold Goldman, with musical score by Franz Waxman, costarring William Powell and Luise Rainer, with Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan, Henry Stephenson, Donald Kirke, Douglas Dumbrille, Frank Reicher, Bert Roach, Paul Porcasi, E. E. Clive, Emma Dunn and Frank Conroy. Directed by George Fitzmaurice. Previewed Tuesday midnight, at Loew's Capitol Theater.

Dated in the Victorian era of the reign of the czars in Russia, this subject preserves a perfect simulation of the atmosphere, the intrigue and the treachery of the times with which it deals. Not in any sense a historical play, it contains, nevertheless, the suggestion of what the international relationships of the period were like and compounds a mounting measure of suspense in the development of its exciting and romantic plot.

BELL.

The action of "The Emperor's Candlesticks" is initiated at a gay costume ball from which young Grand Duke Peter is abducted by a clever ruse and held by a group of Polish nationalists under penalty of death unless he can bring about the release of another nationalist patriot held in prison by his father, the Czar, and condemned to be hanged as a traitor.

Baron Stephan Wolensky, ace secret agent of the revolutionaries, is commissioned to convey a message to the Czar, advising him that unless their comrade is freed his son will be executed. Dropping in to bid an old friend good-bye before embarking on his perilous errand, Baron Wolensky is commissioned to deliver a pair of old silver candlesticks to the Princess Tania in St. Petersburg. He is shown how a secret compartment in each candlestick may be opened and closed without betraying its existence to a casual observer.

Enter the Countess.

In the meantime, the Russian secret service has learned that Wolensky is the greatly feared Operative No. 14, and their cleverest secret agent, Countess Olga Mironova, is intrusted with papers ordering his exeecution upon the crossing of the Russian frontier. She also is a friend of Prince Johann and persuades him to permit her to deliver the candlesticks. Wolensky already has secreted his official papers in one of them. Countess Olga conceals hers in the other. She and her arch enemy pass on the grand staircase in the palace of the prince, neither aware of the other's identity. Then starts the war of wits. Each is determined to be the first across the border and both watch the candlesticks with eager and anxious eyes.

Then jewel thieves, piloted by the countess' maid, rob her of her gems and take the candlesticks for good measure. There ensues a chase that leads to Budapest and back through Paris and London, finally ending in St. Petersburg, where both are taken into custody and condemned by the imperial secret service to death. What happens after that the curious theatergoer had best find out for himself.

The play is sheer melodramatic romance, embellished with rich settings and an astonishing preservation of the atmosphere of an older order in Europe. It is continuously and unfailingly interesting and moves at a swift pace.

Flawless Cast and Support.

William Powell and Luise Rainer, playing together on the screen for the third time, reveal further evidence of their adaptability to roles of divergent character. The fragilely beautiful countess in her gorgeous gowns and furs is a far cry from the role of O-Lan in "The Good Earth," but Miss Rainer bridges the gap admirably. Powell's impersonation of the Baron Wolensky is suave, polished and keenly acute in its apprehension of the prime duties of his profession.

The supporting cast contains many names of importance on the screen, among them Robert Young, as Grand Duke Peter; Frank Morgan, as his bodyguard, Col. Baron Suroff; Henry Stephenson, as Prince Johann; Bernadene Hayes, as Mitzi, the maid; Douglas Dumbrille, head of the nationalist movement in Poland, and a long list of others whose names will be found in the small-type paragraph preceding these remarks. All perform their allotted tasks ably and well.

One of the Major's Best.

On the stage at Loew's Capitol this week, Maj. Bowes presents his "International Revue." The 'international" aspect of the revue does not appreciably differentiate it from others from the same source that have played Washington on previous occasions. There is, however, a greater degree of proficiency and a more professional air displayed by this group of young performers than by any other that has preceded it.

Yesterday afternoon the greatest hits were scored by Danny Grayson, tap dancer in the Will Mahoney manner; Roy Richards, impersonator; the Mimicking Melodears, four youthful instrumentalists; the mixed quartet that sang the quartet from "Rigoletto" and Victor Herbert's "Italian Street Song;" Huey Kong, Chinese barytone, and an unprogrammed young man who does everything backward on a blackboard and in speech. This is not to say that the others were not competent, but merely that lack of space precludes mention of them all.

Phil Lampkin's "Salute to the Boy Scouts" overture is a pretentious offering, with interpolated stage tableaux and vocal numbers. The Fox Movietone News is the only other auxiliary of a fascinating drama that has been conceived and executed with extraordinary skill.

Soon to Be Seen in New Musical

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, July 2.—Idol Chatter: Madeleine Carroll's girlhood ambition was to take religious orders—and lookie, now she's in the movies! Ginger Rogers does not want a divorce because being Mrs. Ayres protects her from hasty remarriage. Collectors' Item: Hobart Cavanaugh dotes on African war clubs. The Yacht Club Boys won't be buying any yachts this year; they are in drydock because of a bridge game with George Raft. Peas from the same pod: Gary Cooper and Jimmie Stewart in dark glasses.

MAE WEST.

Mae West says the saddest literature is her income tax statement. Wonder how he-man Buster Crabbe likes his real name, Clarence. Bob Burns' bazooka gets that boozy wheeze from its mouthpiece—a tin funnel. Headline I never expect to read; Marion Davies Announces Retirement from Screen. The air carries the Crosby voice but never Bing—the groaner shies at airplanes. Nat Pendleton, former wrestler, has a valet and is Hollywood snickering!

There is probably more coffee consumed in movie studios than anywhere else in the world. One word description of Franchot Tone: Dignitoney. Barbara Stanwyck feels positively naked without nail polish. Simone Simon must be trying to bring Will Roger's gum-chewing championship back to Twentieth Century-Fox. Maybe those British aristocrat roles have given Ronald Coleman that recent bored expression. I have never seen Ben Bernie without a cigar. Director Frank Borzage lost his sense of smell when he suffered a neck fracture years ago.

Just left the proudest "boy" in Hollywood—one Fred MacMurray—who probably is still sprinting from set to set to display an exciting new treasure. And I am a bit befuddled by it all, for the MacMurray whose dour Hieland ancestors "wie Wallacé Bled," is so little given to emotional exhibitions that I have seen him get a $500-a-week raise without cracka smile. But it seems that the gold badge of a detective captain, formally presented to him by Los Angeles' chief of police, is the answer to a life-long prayer. He has it pinned inside his wallet and sort of wriggles with anxiety until he finds an excuse to show it. Guess screen stardom is not a cure for human nature, after all.

Hope I am not being cynical, but I have noted that there are just two occasions when every star is gracious to all comers—when he's on the way up—and when he's on the way down.

Sat in Carole Lombard's dressing room today while she went through a stack of portrait proofs that the publicity department had submitted for her approval. The retoucher obviously had taken out every shadow and every angular defect, even down to the natural shadows under her high cheek bones and the characteristic sharp angles that give Lombard jaw distinction. Carole rejected every pose, and I fairly purred as I realized that here is at least one actress clever enough to realize that those shadows and angles constitute individuality — that without them she would be just one more pretty doll in a town where pretty dolls are a drug.

Standing by on a studio set this afternoon, a prop man made a dive for my feet, and picked up a small garden snake that had escaped from its box. When I saw the thing writhing in his hand, I experienced the same spine-tingling horror I had felt some years ago when watching the shooting of a scene with a cobra. On that occasion, the man from the snake farm pulled 6 feet of squirming serpent from its box, and everyone (especially Fidler) gave him plenty of room. The director finally mustered courage for a good look—and blew sky high. "That's nothing but a damned bullsnake!" he shouted. The snakeman nodded, "Sure," he said, "but wait'll Oscar gets his makeup on." With that he thrust a flat, heartshaped piece of wood down Oscar's elastic gullet, and presto!—that innocent bullsnake became the deadliest looking hooded cobra this side of Asia.

Palace

"Captains Courageous," recognized as one of the great pictures of the year, continues on its triumphant way a third week at Loew's Palace Theater.

This appreciation of the manifold qualities of excellence that characterize this production may be construed as a compliment to the discriminating sense of the Capital's picturegoers as well as a towering tribute to the picture.

"Captains Courageous" possesses an emotional depth and a sweeping grandeur of scene, out on the open sea off the Grand Banks, that combine to make a film to which the word "epic" may judiciously be applied. It deals primarily with the reformation of a small boy who has been allowed to grow up uncurbed by a rich and indulgent father. He is swept off a liner bound for Europe and is rescued by a Gloucester fishing schooner bound for the fishing grounds. It is aboard this craft that Master Harvey comes to know something of the meaning of life and how to live it, thanks to the patient tutelage of Manuel, the Portugese fisherman.

The principal roles are played by Spencer Tracy, as Manuel; Freddie Bartholomew, as Harvey, and Lionel Barrymore, as Capt. Disco, in command of the schooner. They do incomparably fine work, with Tracy perhaps a little in the lead, and are supported by an able cast that includes Charles Grapewin and Mickey Rooney.

The short subjects also are continued.

Britain Cuts Duty On Scrap Metals

London, July 2 (AP).—With rearming Britain facing difficulty in meeting the demand for iron and steel, the government tonight announced reduction of ad valorem duties on a long list of iron and steel products to 12½ per cent.

The existing rate is approximately 20 per cent.

The treasury, in announcing the reduction, said:

"The world shortage of iron and steel still persists and, despite the substantial, growing expansion in home production, difficulties still are being experienced in meeting the demand of this country."

Earlier the National Federation of Scrap Iron and Steel Merchants announced it would launch a campaign next week to gather 8,000,000 tons of junk from householders to be forged into armaments.

Forceful Play Attacks Drunk Motor Drivers

'The Devil Is Driving' Is Interesting and Timely Film at the Met.

Lifted from the front pages of crusading newspapers, this is an intensely interesting movie, once it gets away from its almost amateurishly obvious case-history beginning.

It has to do with the terrific and tragic toll of lives taken by drunken, careless and incompetent drivers who get away with it through ticket-fixing, pull and politics. It hits pretty close to recent Washington headlines, and it will probably make you stay down to 15 per for a while.

Pictures of this sort have a hard time being pictures rather than illustrated lectures. This succeeds most of the way in being a picture of considerable force, with an excellent climax, because it makes its central figure a real person.

Paul Driscoll is a candidate for the office of district attorney when the story opens. He is honest and straightforward and an excellent lawyer, but he has friends—in politics and business—who are doing much to help his campaign. The son of one of these friends is responsible for a woman's death in an accident caused by drunken driving. Driscoll defends him and with perjured testimony secures his acquittal.

Becomes Prosecutor.

Driscoll becomes district attorney and is more or less forced into an active campaign against such driving and such accidents. Once in, he realizes the seriousness and horror of the situation and throws political friends overboard to fight it out. Eventually, he is called upon to prosecute the same youngster, whom he had once defended.

Richard Dix, the perennial, gives a vigorous and likable performance in the leading role. His sincerity has much to do with the merit of the picture. There is a bit of melodrama, some very bad drunken scenes, played by young Elisha Cook, jr., of Broadway's "Ah Wilderness" fame, and a rather colorless stint by Joan Perry as Driscoll's amazingly well-dressed newspaper gal friend. We don't quite know why the one honest man in the first big trial had to be made so thoroughly disagreeable nor why the PTA lady had to simper. The casting director certainly wasn't on the law's side.

Subsidiaries include the newsreels, a short, "Sound Defects," featuring Rufe Davis, the human sound machine, and another short starring those three stooges without whom both Ted Healey and we get along very nicely.

Then out in the lobby there is a fascinating machine which proves just how good a driver you are or are not. We were afraid to try—the ink isn't dry on our permit yet.

Columbia.

"MANHATTAN MELODRAMA." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release of a Cosmopolitan picturization of a story by Arthur Caesar, adapted to the screen by Oliver H. P. Garrett and Joseph L. Mankiewicz, starring Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and William Powell, with Leo Carillo, Nat Pendleton, Isabel Jewell, Muriel Evans, Thomas Jackson, Frank Conroy, Noel Madison, Jimmy Butler and Mickey Rooney. Directed by Woody S. Van Dyke. Revival reviewed Friday evening at the Columbia Theater.

Although originally produced and released a little more than three years ago, this gripping and melodramatic character study of two boys, whose paths crossed more than once through the years, retains an interesting and vigorous appeal. It is a drama of sufficient fiber to justify its revival.

The story begins when two small boys are orphaned by the General Slocum disaster and taste further of life's bitterness and their foster father is killed during a Trotzky riot. Blackie, thrown upon his own resources, follows the wrong road and refuses to deviate from it in his adult years. Blackie, the craps-shooting kid, becomes in time a big shot gambler in New York. Jim, on the other hand, pursues a less antisocial course, applies himself to his books and becomes a lawyer, then district attorney, then Governor of his State.

Blackie, accused of killing a man, escapes the penalty of the law by tricking his boyhood pal, the D. A., with the sherwd connivance of Spud, one of his henchmen. Although in love with his mistress, Blackie surrenders her to Jim when he realizes the benefit such a union will be to her. When Snow, a former Blackie aide, threatens to blast the gubernatorial chances of Jim by exposing Eleanor's previous relationship with Blackie, the lifelong friendship between Blackie and Jim and the inside story of the Arnold killing, Blackie kills again.

True to His Colors.

This time he is convicted and condemned to the electric chair. Eleanor pleads with her husband to save him, but Jim is adamant. In his heart Blackie would have despised him had he done anything less than his duty to the State. In the Sing Sing death house Jim and Blackie relive their lives and Father Joe listens from a nearby vantage point. Jim wants to commute the sentence, but Blackie will have none of it, striding away to the chair with firm step, as true to his own questionable principles and ideals as Jim is to his.

The story, as it is revealed upon the screen, is less grim than it sounds in print. It is played with intelligence and understanding by Clark Gable, as Blackie; Myrna Loy, as Eleanor, and William Powell, as Jim—a trio whose luster has grown brighter with the passing of the years since 1934. Father Joe is in the capable hands of Leo Carrillo and Spud is played effectively by Nat Pendleton, Snow by Thomas Jackson. There are, of course, others of importance in the cast, all under the unimpeachable direction of Woody S. Van Dyke, who achieved one of his earlier successes with this picture.

A Harry Gribbon short-reel comedy, "Pixilated," which gives that veteran buffoon ample opportunity to be as grotesque as he wishes; a Terrytoon cartoon comedy, "Pink Elephant," and the "Events of the Day" are the supplementary attractions with a feature that possesses more depth than the usual underworld melodrama.

HOME AND FARM DEPARTMENT: Charlie MacArthur and his wife, Helen Hayes, had a slight disagreement and Miss Hayes pouted. At noontime, however, three messengers delivered a huge mimosa tree—so large that some of the branches had to be cut before it could be brought into the apartment. From one branch hung a note: "I'm so sorry—Charlie." . . . Miss Hayes was delighted at such a gesture of atonement and forgave her husband . . . MacArthur then made inquiries and discovered how come the tree. God, Max Schling and Charlie Lederer had provided it. The playful Lederer had discovered that MacArthur had a charge account at Max Schling's and for a month had been ordering flowers in MacArthur's name. The tree was sent by Charlie Lederer as an expression of his remorse!

This Morning
WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Down on the farm it has been another lean year for C. C. Griffith and the shrewd old gentleman is in a mood to let the Nats' country cousins at Chattanooga shift for themselves—and good riddance. He will sell without much coaxing.

Joe Engel called him on the telephone the other day and said he thought he could raise the $150,000 it would require to relieve the Washington club of its Chattanooga franchise in the Southern Association. Mr. Griffith said he wouldn't stand in Engel's way of becoming a clubowner.

POVICH.

He could muster $50,000 of the purchase price himself, Engel told Griffith, and there were folks in Chattanooga who would lend a hand toward raising the rest of the dough. Mr. Griffith said that's fine, or words to that effect, and added that Engel could have the Chattanooga club with his blessings if the 150 grand were forthcoming.

* * * *

The fact is, Mr. Griffith is rather eager to pull out of Chattanooga. The place has been a huge headache to him ever since the Nats' owner hit upon the idea of replacing Engel as president of the club last winter and installing his young adopted son, Calvin Griffith, as Lord High Pooh-Bah of the Lookouts.

* * * *

Things haven't been going so well with either young Calvin or the Lookouts. The team has been in a fearful rut ever since the season started and never has been able to get out of the second division. And young Calvin is somthing less than popular down in Chattanooga, it seems.

* * * *

Matters were so bad a month ago that the Old Fox himself journeyed down to Chattanooga to investigate conditions at the Nats' No. 1 farm. It was then that he started spouting about home ownership for minor league clubs. It sounded like treason, perhaps, but canny Griffith was only setting the stage for the unloading of the Chattanooga franchise by Washington.

* * * *

He also discovered, apparently, that young Mr. Calvin Griffith was not the same beloved figure in Chattanooga that the fun-loving Joe Engel had been as president of the Lookouts. With some pain, the Nats' owner read editorials in the Chattanooga press to the effect that young Calvin was botching the works down there.

* * * *

The pay off, it seems, took place when young Calvin blacklisted the pass of a Chattanooga sports editor whose comments he didn't like. It was a stupid act, because it unloosed a deluge of unflattering pieces against not only young Mr. Griffith, but his "pappy" in Washington and Washington ownership in general.

* * * *

So Griffith is very much fed up, as we say in our set, with the entire situation in Chattanooga which has not been drawing at the gate and which for two years has not produced a single ballplayer who has been worth his keep.

* * * *

Time was when Chattanooga was a very valuable farm, indeed, for the Nats. Under the enterprising management of Joe Engel, it drew huge crowds at the gate, set a league attendance record, in fact, and won the 1932 pennant. But, more than that, it developed ballplayers for the Nats whose value at the current market price totaled nearly a half-million dollars.

* * * *

When he needed a third baseman to replace the ailing Ossie Bluege, he merely dipped down into Chattanooga and plucked Cecil Travis for whom he had turned down one offer of $50,000. And when he needed a catcher he brought up Cliff Bolton, who served the Nats as a regular for four years.

* * * *

And when Travis fitted into the Nats' lineup better at shortstop than at third base, leaving that position open, Griffith came up with the prize of them all—young Buddy Lewis. Other clubs were dishing out fabulous sums for those kind of rookies, but Griffith simply went down on the farm and harvested his crops.

* * * *

He made two mistakes, though. One was strikingly illustrated last night when a press dispatch from Chattanooga revealed that Pitcher Dick Lanahan had been sent to the Charlotte Club, in the Class B Piedmont League. Three years ago, when Lanahan had a record of nine wins and one defeat with Chattanooga, Griffith sniffed at a $35,000 offer the Chicago Cubs made for Lanahan.

* * * *

And he seems to have erred, too, in the case of Freddie Sington, to whom he had title in 1934 when the New York Giants offered him $50,000 for Sington's contract. Griffith turned down that offer and sent Sington to Chattanooga for development. Sington has since fitted into the Washington outfield, but there is serious doubt that he is a $50,000 outfielder.

Giants Score 6-2 Decision Over Boston

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 2.—King Carl Hubbell was back with all his stuff today and pitched the Giants to a 6-to-2 victory over the Boston Bees for the New Yorkers' sixth straight victory.

Allowing but seven hits and fanning seven, Hubbell chalked up the third straight win in his comeback campaign and his eleventh of the season against four setbacks. Only one extra-base blow was struck off him—Rabbit Warstler's homer with the sacks empty in the fifth.

He was given a 13-hit attack by his mates to work on and breezed in with the decision before a crowd of 11,524 at the Polo Grounds to enable the Giants to remain a slim half-game back of first place.

Gus Mancuso connected for three straight hits, including a homer with a mate aboard that sewed up the game in the sixth. Lou Chiozza also had three hits, driving in two runs.

Dodgers Take 3-0 Win From Philadelphia

Hamlin Winning Pitcher as Mates End Losing Streak at Four.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 2.—The Brooklyn Dodgers, after being shut out in three of their last four starts, applied the whitewash brush themselves today by blanking the Phillies 3 to 0 behind the tight hurling of their 30-year-old rookie, Luke Hamlin.

The victory ended the Dodgers' losing streak at four straight, and stretched the Phils' losing run to five.

Big Hugh Mulcahy gave up eight of the Dodgers' 11 hits and all of the runs in the seven innings he worked for the Phils. Singles by Babe Phelps, Johnny Cooney and Woody English in the second accounted for the first run, and in the fourth, Buddy Hassett's double and singles by Cookie Lavagetto and English added the other two.

The win was Hamlin's third in a row and fifth of the season. He gave up but seven hits, fanned five and did not walk a single batter. His batting support came chiefly from English who had three singles and drove in two runs.

Browns Beat Chicago, 4-2; Aid Walkup

Jim Allows Six Hits as Seventh Place Nine Pulls 'Miracle.'

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 2.—Jim Walkup turned in a six-hit pitching job for the seventh-place St. Louis Browns today and played a major part in his team's 4-to-2 victory over the up-and-coming Chicago White Sox.

Walkup didn't fan a batter, but after the sixth allowed only one hit, which did no damage. Mike Kreevich's fifth-inning triple, which drove in John Whitehead from first with what appeared to be the winning run for the Sox until the Browns' big eighth, was a legitimate single which bounced over Sammy West's head.

In the fourth with men on second and third and only one out, Walkup forced Hayes to tap to him and then deflected Jimmy Dykes' blow to Knickerbocker, who threw the Chicago manager out.

Dykes futilely protested in the third that Benny Huffman, Browns' catcher, had tipped his bat. In the seventh, Luke Sewell was sent to first when home plate umpire, Emmett "Ted" Ormsby ruled the rookie receiver had tipped the bat with his glove.

Lanahan to Charlotte.

Chattanooga, July 2 (AP).—Calvin Griffith, president of the Chattanooga Lookouts, said today Dick Lanahan, southpaw pitcher recently sent here by the Washington Senators, had been turned over to the Charlotte (N. C.) Club of the Piedmont League. Both Chattanooga and Charlotte are Washington farms.

Nats End Yanks' Winning Streak With 8-3 Decision; Mel Almada Leads Attack

Red Sox Win 8-4 Decision Over Macks

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 2.—The Red Sox celebrated their return to their Fenway stamping grounds today, thanks to homers by Ben Chapman and Buster Mills, with an 8-4 victory over the Athletics.

Although the visitors took all sorts of liberties with John (Footsie) Marcum, that righthander found himself the leading Boston pitcher, with seven wins and four defeats, after Archie McKain saved the slam-bang game for Boston.

Marcum gave the A's eight hits in his six frames, including a homer by Russ Peters with two on in the first.

Footsie was yanked with none out in the seventh after Newsome doubled and scored the last Philadelphia run on Ambler's single. McKain then stepped in and held the opposition to three hits in the last three frames.

RollieHemsley Suspended by Browns' Pilot

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 2.—For "violation of training rules," rollicking Rollie Hemsley, St. Louis Browns' catcher, was suspended for ten days by Manager Rogers Hornsby today, explaining, in part, at least, why the team recalled Catcher Tommy Heath from Toronto yesterday.

Hornsby would not enlarge on a written statement announcing the suspension, but the Browns' office intimated an incident on the road trip, which the team just ended, prompted the action.

Once the team's first-string catcher, Hemsley has been playing "second fiddle" this season to Recruit Benny Huffman. He caught the entire all-star game for the American Leaguers last year.

Mexican Gets Four Hits Including Double; Scores 3 Runs, Drives in Another; Fischer, Linke Check Leaders; Hadley, Malone Pounded.

By Shirley Povich.

With a fine disregard for the reputation and four-game winning streak of the league-leading Yankees, the Nats hauled off and smote 'em down yesterday at Griffith Stadium to the unbridled satisfaction of 8,000 Ladies Day fans and as many cash customers.

The Nats didn't tarry. They waded right into the Yanks, collected a run in the first inning, staged a four-run crusher in the third and with some desultory scoring in the later innings contrived to win the ball game by the highly decisive score of 8 to 3.

New York's Murderer's Row was a gentle crew yesterday.

Carl Fischer shut 'em out for five innings, weathered a three-run splurge in the sixth, and then fat Eddie Linke nursed the Nats' lead through the last three innings by the simple expedient of allowing no hits whatsoever.

Yanks Get Six Hits.

The Yanks, in fact, had only six hits to show for the afternoon's efforts—three of 'em by Red Rolfe, who was batting on the progressive system, hitting a single his first time at bat, a double in his second and a triple in his third appearance.

But when the Yankees came up with those three runs in the sixth to cut the Nats' lead to 5-3, Manager Bucky Harris correctly deduced that the left-handed Fischer would be of more service to the Nats under a shower. He permitted him to last the inning out, and then threw Linke at the Yankees with the aforestated salubrious effects.

The guy who put the Nats in the ball game and kept 'em in was the little Mexican, Mel Almada, who smacked a two-bagger into leftfield in his first appearance and then sprayed three singles into the same sector to collect four of the Nats' nine hits off Bump Hadley and big Perce Malone. He stole a base, too, scored three runs and drove in another.

Use Pinch Hitter.

Irving Hadley, a former Washington employe, was suffered to pitch four innings by Manager McCarthy before the need of a pinch hitter called him out of the box. Hadley did not do so well. He gave up five of the Nats' nine hits and five of their runs.

Mel Almada and Buddy Lewis produced that first-inning run with a pair of two-baggers into leftfield and Hadley inspired a four-run uprising in the third when he walked the weak-hitting Fischer.

Almada breathed some life into the rally with a slashing single off Crosetti's upstretched glove and Hadley then filled the bases by walking Lewis. With none as yet out, Joe Kuhel pumped a single to center and the Nats had their first two runs of the inning.

Hadley's muff of Fred Sington's smash into the box, which made the pitcher's throw to second for a force play the late, prolonged the uprising and Cecil Travis pushed across the third and fourth runs of the session with a cheap single that looped into left.

Three Double Plays.

Three double plays, two of which were started by Buddy Lewis, helped Fischer over the hump in the first five innings, but he was no help to himself in the sixth. He walked Crosetti, pitched a triple to Rolfe that ended up in the farthest corner of centerfield and then pitched Joe DiMaggio his seventeenth home run of the season. That made it 5-3, of course.

Fischer somehow got the side out after that, but when the Yanks returned to their bats in the seventh Linke was out there pitching. He did a fair job of it. The only guy who got on base against him was Bill Dickey, who walked with one out in the ninth.

Big Pat Malone relieved Hadley after the fourth, and he was doing very well until the seventh. Then this same Almada, who had been starting things all day, singled to left, was sacrificed to second and stole third when Malone dozed with his wind-up. Malone walked Kuhel and Stone scored 'em both with a double to left center that Jake Powell handled none too well.

The Nats scored an entirely superfluous run in the ninth. Almada's fourth hit of the afternoon drove it in.

Don Budge Defeats German for Crown

Von Cramm Bows in Straight Sets, 6–3, 6–4, 6–2, as American Displays Greatest Form of Career; 15,500 See Match.

Wimbledon, England, July 2.—Red-headed, power-hitting Donald Budge, 22-year-old American Davis Cup ace from Oakland, Calif., today achieved when the height that every kid with a tennis racquet dreams of when he defeated Baron Gottfried von Cramm, of Germany, 6—3, 6—4, 6—2, in the finals of the all-England Singles Championship.

Budge simply whaled the pants off the world's second-best amateur player before a packed gallery that included Queen Mary. In doing so, he looked like perhaps as great a tennis star as ever stepped on Wimbledon's famed center court.

Most people had entertained a suspicion that the California redhead was going to succeed Britain's Fred Perry, winner last year but now a professional, as much as a fortnight ago when he slapped down Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin at the Queens Club. But few could have foreseen what happened today.

Perry beat Von Cramm in straight sets, 6—1, 6—1, 6—0, a year ago when the blond baron was sorely crippled after the first game. Budge accomplished the same feat against a man with a sound pair of legs and a stout heart.

The outcome simplifies the entire Davis Cup outlook. Budge appears able to win two matches against any team America meets, whether it's Germany or Czechoslovakia in the inter-zone final, or England in the challenge round. All the United States will need then is one more point. Budge and Gene Mako probably will supply that in the doubles.

Budge admitted after his victory over Von Cramm that never had he played such rip-roaring tennis.

"Imagine being able to play that kind of tennis on an occasion like that," he said, almost in amazement. "I must be lucky."

As an added reward for his short but brilliant exhibition he had given the gallery of 15,500, Budge was presented to the Queen Mother, but he stoutly refused to reveal what she said.

"Did she say you looked great out there?" one of his teammates asked. The red-

Charles Town Feature Is Taken by Bunty Ann

4,000 See Chestnut Mare, Pete Martineze Up, Win Crusader Purse Over Flamingo Stable's Mahogany; Race Start Delayed 10 Minutes.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN RACE TRACK, July 2.—Mrs. E. B. Shipp's Bunty Ann drove to a half-length victory over Flamingo Stables' Mahogany in the Crusader Purse, best offering on the Charles Town Jockey Club program here this afternoon.

The victory was a popular one with the crowd of 4,000 as the chestnut mare was made the choice in the field of seven starters. Capably ridden by Pete Martinez, the Cuban jockey, Bunty Ann returned $6.60 and stepped off the sprint over the Charles Town course, which is 120 feet more than six furlongs, in 1:17 3-5.

A. H. Utterback's Secret Vote finished third, a length and a half off Mahogany.

Starter Willie Daly and his assistants had their hands full before a start was affected. Henryman, Postponement, Ladys Favor and Bunty Ann were the chief offenders in the ten-minute delay. Finally Henryman was placed outside the gate.

Henryman broke in front and set the pace for a half-mile and then Bunty Ann took charge, but down the lane Martinez had to rouse the mare to stall off the rush of Mahogany. Secret Vote also closed fast and might have been closer save for some interference turning for home.

Highland Song, owned by C. E. George, of Washington, breezed over the 4½-furlong course in 0:49 3-5, only a fifth of a second off the track mark, to win the day's opener by three lengths. Justa Canter finished second, six lengths in front of Dun Lucky. The winner, ridden by Andy Gainer, paid but $3.40.

Homers Give Cubs 8-7 Win Over Pirates

Galan's Clout in Ninth With One on Erases Bucs' 7-6 Lead.

Chicago, July 2 (AP).—A ninth-inning home run with one on by Augie Galan, the Cubs' fourth round-tripper of the game, enabled the Chicagoans to edge out Pittsburgh, 8 to 7, and cling to their slender half game National League lead today.

Despite earlier homers by Frank Demaree, Billy Jurges and Gabby Hartnett, the Cubs trailed by a run going into their ninth, chiefly because of some persistent hitting by the Waner boys and a homer by Gus Suhr, all off Larry French. Paul Waner got a double and three singles and Lloyd Waner a double and single.

With one out in the ninth, Ken O'Dea batted for Relief Pitcher Curt Davis and drew a pass. A moment later Galan cleared the rightfield bleachers with his season's thirteenth homer, scoring Tucker Stainback, who ran for O'Dea, ahead of him.

Galan's smash saved the Cubs from losing the league lead they have enjoyed since June 15, as the second-place New York Giants defeated Boston. A ladies' day crowd of 23,998, of which 9,498 were cash patrons, saw the Cubs pull victory out of the fire.

Red Lucas went the distance for Pittsburgh and yielded 11 hits. French was touched for 12 in seven innings. Davis, in getting credit for his first win of the year, pitched one-hit shutout ball during his two relief innings.

Army Four Bows To Fauquier Riders

A three-goal handicap failed to insure victory for the War Department Blues yesterday and the soldiers bowed to the Fauquier-Loudoun Polo Club's four on the Potomac Park Field, 10-6.

Two goals in the first half gave the Department a 5-4 lead, but this was short-lived, however, as Denny Skinker, the Virginians' leading scorer, went on a rampage, ringing up four goals. Fauquier-Loudoun, the Old Dominion's best team, will be played again Sunday by the War Department, beginning at 2 p. m.

The entire Blues' first team will be available for Sunday's return match. Capt. Reed led the scoring for the losers, with two goals.

F. H. A. Drops 1st Game To Treasury Nine by 7-0

Arnold Heft, crack southpaw pitcher for the Treasury A. & D. recorded his third straight shutout victory, 7-0, yesterday at Roosevelt and at the same time inflicted the season's first defeat on the leading Federal Alcohol nine in a Sport Center Government League game.

Lefty gave a sparkling performance doling out two hits, fanning 11 and walking only two. He received batting support from Al Spivok and Backus who drove out homers.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Four Records Fall as A.A.U. Event Opens

Broad Jump, 400 Meters, 10,000 Meters and Javelin Topple.

By the United Press.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 2.—Four junior records fell today as American track and field athletes opened their two-day struggle for National A. A. U. championships in Marquette Stadium.

Marks in the 10,000 meters, broad jump, javelin and 400 meters were shattered, three of them before the events reached the finals.

Bil Feiler, stubby blond distance runner from Drake University, bettered the first record in the 10,000 meters, winning the junior event handily and placing second to the senior champion, Eino Pentti, of the Millrose Athletic Association, New York. Feiler's time was 33:8.4.

Both junior and senior events were run simultaneously.

Charley Walker, brother of Ohio State's high jumper, Mel Walker, accounted for the second record in the broad-jump trials with a leap of 24 feet 10 inches, 1¼ inches better than the old record of John Brooks, Chicago.

William Graham, University of Texas star, clipped almost 4 feet off the existing javelin record with a throw of 217.5 feet, and Paul Sanders, Rice Institute, set the fourth new mark with a 400-meter heat of 0:48.4. His time was two-tenths faster than the old record.

Pentti's victory in the senior 10,000 meters was expected since Don Lash, of Indiana, last year's champion, was forced out of the meet by appendicitis.

Feiler was second, Johnny Kelley, of Arlington, Mass., was third, and J. Errol Vaughn, of the New York Athletic Club, was fourth.

Final of Grand National Scheduled for 3 P. M.; Garnett Slight Choice.

Dooley Mitchell and Yelverton Garnett will try for the third time to settle their differences in the final of the men's singles of the Grand National Tennis Tournament when they meet at Edgemoor today.

Play will be resumed from where it was halted last Sunday by rain. At that time Garnett, seeded No. 2, had taken the first set from Mitchell, No. 1, 8—6, but trailed 2—3 in the uncompleted second set.

Garnett, just turned 21, will rule a slight choice to defeat Mitchell, who is seven years older, despite the postponements that have accorded Dooley a lengthy rest.

Rain checks retained from Sunday will be honored today, otherwise the general admission will be 25 cents.

Tribe Game Off—July's Too Cold!

Cleveland, July 2 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers - Cleveland Indians baseball game was postponed today because of cold weather.

The temperature was 62 when club officials decided that it was too chilly to play even though the calendar said it was July 2. Earlier in the day the thermometer hovered in the low 50s.

The clubs will play a double-header Sunday, with today's game going over to make one of the two games. July postponements because of cold are not especially usual in Cleveland.

Haas, Leslie To Meet in College Golf

Louisiana Golfers Battle for Intercollegiate Crown Today.

By Dillon Graham.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Oakmont, Pa., July 2.—Louisiana's Paul Leslie and Freddie Haas meet tomorrow for the National Intercollegiate Golf Championship.

Leslie got the jump on Bill Barclay, of Michigan, nursed his lead carefully and finally won 3 and 2. Haas, on the other hand, started like a duffer, was 5 down after ten holes, and then, when it appeared he was certainly doomed, began to hit his shots like a champion. His rally overtook Vincent D'Antoni, of Tulane, and he won, 5 and 4.

The 21-year-old youngsters, Haas, a New Orleans boy, who was graduated last month, and Leslie, a Jefferson City, Mo., junior, have been serious Intercollegiate contenders in each of their college years.

Haas was runner-up in the 1935 tournament and medalist in 1936. Leslie was runner-up to Chuck Kocis, of Michigan, last year. On his way to the finals of 1936, Leslie eliminated Haas. A fortnight ago Haas, who holds the Canadian amateur title, won the Southern championship. Leslie is Western amateur wing.

Breaks D'Antoni Jinx.

This morning it looked as if the D'Antoni jinx that has hounded Haas all year would hook him again. Three times this spring they've been opponents and each time D'Antoni has been the victor.

All square after the fourth, D'Antoni turned on the pressure. He played the next five holes under par and won four of them. Then Freddie three-putted the tenth and was 5 down. He had to gain the aid of a stymie to halve the eleventh.

Then D'Antoni's iron sailed into a trap on the fifteenth. Freddie won that hole, banged in a short putt for a birdie 3 to take the seventeenth and then grabbed the eighteenth where Vincent was in sand.

Holding on tightly through the twenty-fifth, Haas pulled level on the next hole, where D'Antoni plopped into a bunker, and then went up for the first time on the twenty-seventh with a birdie 4. Fred marched along in step with par, winning the following three holes, and finally ending the duel with a birdie 3 at the thirty-second.

Barclay Is Troublesome.

Leslie found a worthy foeman in Barclay, but the Louisianan took a small early lead and held to it. He won three holes, as the Westerner steered his irons smack toward traps, and passed the quarter-pole 2 up.

Barclay rang up a pair of birdies to reduce his deficit to one hole at the halfway mark. But the sand beaches got him again on the third nine and, even though he drilled in a 30-footer for a birdie 3 at the twenty-second, he was 3 down as they moved into the stretch.

A par 4 on the twenty-ninth and a birdie 4 on the thirtieth sent Leslie 5 up, and even the courageous Barclay could do no more than prolong the finish to the thirty-fourth green.

German Driver Favored to Win Long Vanderbilt Event Today

By the Associated Press.

Westbury, N. Y., July 2.—Sent away from a standing start as President Roosevelt presses a telegraph key at Hyde Park, N. Y., at 1:15 p. m. (Eastern standard time), 30 of the world's fastest auto pilots will go careening around the near-pretzel-shaped Roosevelt raceway tomorrow afternoon in the first renewal of the 300-mile George Vanderbilt Cup race.

The race is being run for prizes totaling 70,000 sound American dollars, but among the top six favorites named tonight only one is an American. He is Rex Mays, the Californian, who will be at the wheel of a crimson, domestic-make job with which he hit an average speed of 84.054 miles per hour in his 30-mile qualifying test.

European champion last year, Rosemeyer has, in his time trials and workouts over the Long Island layout, put on a show that has set all the 60,000 or more fans who are expected to pack the three grand stands and the infield tomorrow talking about him, virtually to the exclusion of everyone else. He repeatedly has broken the American track records, with 161.411 miles per hour as his fastest clocking on the straightaway, and 159.424 in a final whirl over the course today.

Rosemeyer, who, in his snub-nosed, 16-cylinder rear-drive Auto-Union, is on 8-to-1 shot, is followed in the list of favorites by a countryman but bitter rival, Rudolf Caracciola, ace of the Mercedes-Benz team. Carracciola won a $600 prize by setting a track record for a full lap of 86.362 m. p. h. while pacing the 30 qualifiers with an average rate of 85.850.

Behind Caracciola, at 2 to 1, comes Mays, at 4 to 1. Tazio Nuvolari, the little Italian who drove his red Alfa Romeo to a three-lap victory in last year's inaugural at an average speed of slightly better than 65 miles an hour, is fourth choice at 5 to 1, with Richard Seaman, English ace, driving for the German Mercedes-Benz team, and Ernst von Delius, Rosemeyer's teammate, who tooled his Auto-Union down the straightaway at 154.1 today, bracketed as joint fifth choices at 6 to 1.

Three of the next four places are held by American veterans. A "dark horse" 8-to-1 shot is Wilbur Shaw, this year's winner at Indianapolis, who didn't have to qualify because he stepped into the Italian Maserati which originally was to have been driven by Enzo Fiermonte. The former light-heavyweight boxer, however, took the advice of friends and race officials who felt he didn't have sufficient experience to go against such an experienced field.

Billy Winn, of Detroit, driving a chunky, white Miller Special with red trimmings, shares the 10-to-1 bracket with Giuseppe Farina, of Italy, Nuvolari's Alfa Romeo teammate. Babe Stapp, of Dallas, Tex., who, like Shaw, will be handling one of the powerful Maseratis, is a 12-to-1 shot, with the "field" at 50 to 1.

On the Air Today

The sponsor of Capt. Henry's "Show Boat," the new edition, which will be heard next Thursday in its inaugural program, has filed an application with the National Broadcasting Co. for an option to sponsor radio's first commercial television broadcast. The plans stated that it would use the "Show Boat" as the vehicle for television. Also, the application revealed that the members of the cast of the new "Show Boat" have a clause inserted that the contracts shall be in "full force and effect" with the coming of television.

Not stopping there, the sponsor has ordered for the entire cast of 73, consisting of principals, orchestra, chorus and dramatic players, costumes that are reminiscent of the nineteenth century Mississippi River show boat era.

Tighter Rein Is Needed Now, Pierson Says

Irving Trust Chairman Advises Caution in Credit Expansion.

New Brunswick, N. J., July 2.—Business recovery has reached a point where it is time "to drive with a tighter rein" in connection with further credit expansion, Lewis E. Pierson, chairman of the Irving Trust Co., New York, and chairman of the board of regents of the Graduate School of Banking, said in an address here tonight at the first commencement exercises of the school, which is conducted under the joint auspices of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University. The graduating class numbered 191. Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University, also addressed the graduates.

"We have reached a point in business recovery where selectivity in further credit expansion is becoming increasingly important—where we need, so to speak, 'to drive with a tighter rein'," said Mr. Pierson, who awarded the diplomas to the graduates. "An over-expansion in the volume or a deterioration in the quality of credit will do much to transform prosperity into an inflationary boom and therefore to increase the severity of the depression which inevitably would follow. Abnormally abundant credit involves a wholly unnecessary risk of credit inflation.

Federal Reserve Aid.

"I hope that what I have said will not be interpreted as indicating that I am not fully cognizant of the fact that the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury have already made considerable progress in tightening up some of the slack in bank reserves. I am sure that you will agree with me that it is both appropriate and commendable that steps have been taken to reduce excess reserves to more nearly manageable proportions, and to prevent further increases in monetary gold stocks from expanding member bank reserves.

"The point I wish to emphasize is that these steps in the direction of monetary restraint should be followed by the application of other available and appropriate measures to hold further unnecessary credit expansion in check, and that these steps should be taken, whether or not they result in bringing a moderately higher level of interest rates. This means that in the future much less emphasis would be given to the maintenance of abnormally easy money and that more emphasis would be given to the prevention of unsound credit expansion."

Wheat Gyrates In Swirl of Fluctuations

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 2.—In a series of bewildering fluctuations Chicago wheat prices today reached peaks unequaled heretofore this season. Reports were current that because of unabated drouth and of excessive high temperatures 50 per cent of Canada's 1937 planted acreage of spring wheat will only yield the seed back.

Waves of selling to realize profits, however, made the Chicago wheat market recede at the last, with July contracts decidedly lower, and the more distant deliveries, September and December, showing but fractional gains. At one stage Chicago wheat quotations ran up in a few minutes 5 cents a bushel from an early low point.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were 2⅛ cents lower to ¾ of a cent higher compared with yesterdays finish, July $1.24⅜@1.24½, September $1.25¼@1.25½, December $1.27½@1.27⅝; corn ⅝@1⅞ down. July $1.26½@1.26¾, September $1.12⅛@1.12¼, December 81@81¼; oats ⅜@¾ off, September 38⅞@39, and Rye showing 2 cents to 2¼ drop, September 89½@89¾. Provisions results varied from 2 cents setback to 25 cents advance.

Most Markets Closed Today and Monday

New York, July 2 (AP).—All important securities and commodity markets in the United States will be closed Monday, July 5, in observance of Independence Day and most of them will not be open for business Saturday.

Because of the regular Saturday closings of securities markets in London, Paris and Amsterdam and of the New York Stock Exchange, important world securities will be closed Saturday, July 3.

Some of the American marts to be open for business tomorrow include the New York Cotton Exchange, Chicago Board of Trade, New York spot grain and most of the livestock markets. The Savannah and Jacksonville naval stores markets also will be open.

The Market

Stocks Advance in Moderate Trading With Steels and Oils Strong; Francs Find Support.

New York, July 2.—Stocks closed with higher prices in all groups and with a distinct improvement in sentiment. Turnover was around three-quarters of a million shares. Government bonds were draggy and profit taking kept grains unsettled. September wheat closed at Chicago at 125¼ cents a bushel, a rise of a quarter of a cent.

For the first time in several weeks a week-end and holiday found the markets without apprehension over adverse developments which might catch them overextended. The tendency consequently was for the shorts to cover and for newly encouraged bulls to establish positions. A moderately higher opening in stocks was followed by gradual improvement in the forenoon and to considerable strength in the late trading. At the best Steel common rose about 2 points and became firmly established above par.

Other active stocks to rise 1 to 2 points were Can, Chrysler, Bethlehem and Montgomery Ward. Allied Chemical jumped half a dozen points. Aviation shares were fairly well liked. Douglas and Boeing were favorites. New York Steam preferreds climbed 10 to 12 points on approval of the exchange plan.

Alleghany Preferred.

Two stocks to catch up with the recent decline were Alleghany preferred, without warrants, and Pressed Steel Car second preferred. They lost 5 and 7 points respectively on the first sales in several weeks. Universal Pictures preferred snapped back a dozen points from its year's worst price.

The Government bond market was not especially impresed by the prediction of the Budget Director that the Government will "come very close to a balanced budget in the fiscal year which began yesterday. It is high time that the Government not only come close to that but that it begin to pay off debt. Barring a business depression of considerable magnitude, a balanced budget in this fiscal year easily could be brought about. The hitch lies partly in whether the Administration really wishes it and partly in whether it will be permitted to put on such brakes as will be necessary to hold down expenditures.

A hint to the Government bond market was given by Secretary Morgenthau that the Treasury was ready to use sinking fund money to buy in $1,200,000,000 of bonds, but that means nothing as a support for the market so long as the Treasury continues to issue bonds and notes in large quantities to finance the deficit. Another offset is the sterilization of gold, which already has lifted the Federal debt by nearly $1,100,000,000.

Banking Position.

The banking position at the month end was marked by a rise of $60,000,000 in excess reserves, a gain of $48,000,000 in monetary gold and a currency expansion of $54,000,000. A considerable further increase in currency circulation likely will take place over this combined holiday and week-end, always a period of large demands for cash.

Among the foreign exchanges the French franc acted as though advantage now was being taken by those who need francs to obtain them on favorable terms. Undoubtedly many bills owing in francs have been carried along on the chance of a devaluation of the currency. Now that the fall has come and the change has passed off without much disturbance to the world's money markets, at least a temporary demand for francs for commercial purposes is to be expected.

Aside from the political factor, the franc probably has changed from an overvalued to an undervalued currency, and it is possible that the new French government is not averse to seeing the currency sink to bargaining levels in the hope of attracting capital. That as the strategy of the Poincare government as a preparation to stabilization on gold. The difference this time is the lack of confidence in France's socialistic and high spending tendencies. Once reassurance is had on that score, the position probably would strengthen much more rapidly than is commonly supposed; but reassurance is badly needed.

Francs.

Francs flattened out around yesterday's closing rate of 3.84 cents, and, according to exchange traders, the French official control had to sell them in moderate volume to keep the franc from rising. There is an almost universal expectancy of some reparation of French money, which would bring France needed capital, but it is as yet too early to determine whether such a reparation will reach important proportions. Much depends upon the attitude of the Government on important economic and financial questions. Franc futures also were more normally quoted, the discount on 30-day options being about 3¾ points and the discount on 90-day futures about 10 points. Sterling was fractionally lower early in the day, but subsequently recovered.

New York Steam.

Whether inquiry revealed the valuation figures in the minds of the Public Service Commission or whether the Consolidated Edison management merely made a good guess, the new exchange terms of Edison preferred for the two classes of New York Steam preferred were approved last night by the commission. A formal offer of exchange will follow, on the basis of one share of Edison preferred for one share of Steam $7 preferred and nine-tenths of a share of Edison for one share of $6 Steam preferred. Edison preferred closed last night at 103, but the best Steam $7 preferred could do this morning was 100, an overnight jump of more than 12 points. For the sake of equilibrium and orderly trading all around, it is to be hoped that the end of the gyrations in Steam preferred and common shares has been seen.

Dividends.

Few important dividend meetings are scheduled for next week. Homestake Mining will have one Tuesday, which will be watched because action will be taken on the new split shares. Monthly payments of $3 a share had been made for a long time on the old stock, $2 of it being called extra. Frequently the first payments on split shares total more than the payments on the old. Homestake is now selling to yield more than 9 per cent. Cerro de Pasco, Pacific Lighting, American Chicle and Kroger also will hold meetings next week.

Bank Stocks.

Bank stockholders evidently found enough cause for satisfaction in June 30 condition statements to do some real buying of their long neglected stocks and the whole bank stock market was buoyant. The outstanding feature was First National, which ran up 100 points on the revelation that, despite the rather difficult earnings conditions which prevailed in the second quarter, the bank was able to cover its $25 a share quarterly dividend with a margin of a little more than $6 to spare.

N. Y. Steam Stock Jumps 10 Points

New York, July 22 (AP).—New York Steam Corporation issues on the New York Stock Exchange shot upward today following approval by the State Public Service Commission of the exchange of Consolidated Edison Co. preferred stock for preferred issues of its subsidiary, New York Steam. The $6 and $7 preferred shares opened up around 10 points from the last offering, while the 5 per cent bonds were up around 4½ points and the 6s scored a substantial gain.

The approved plan authorizes Consolidated Edison to offer one share of its $5 preferred stock for each share of New York Steam $7 preferred and 9-10 of a share of $5 Edison preferred for each share of New York Steam $6 preferred.

New York, July 2.—A decline of 4.6 per cent in the average price of 250 real estate bond issues for the first six months of 1937 is reported by the real estate bond index maintained by Eli T. Group Insurance Is 25 Years Old

New York, July 2.—Measured by the number of group insurance applications received from employers throughout the country, the Equitable Life Asssurance Society of the United States has registered its best record in group insurance production in the first six months of any year, President Thomas I. Parkinson of the Equitable said today.

"It was on July 1, 1912," he added, "that the large mail order house of Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., insured the lives of its 3,000 employes through the Equitable. Although a small number of employes had been group-insured by the Equitable in the year before that date, it was the Montgomery Ward contract that proved the practicability of group insurance and gave impetus to the movement for employe protection that has grown so tremendously."

In a message sent today to Sewell L. Avery, president of Montgomery Ward & Co. in Chicago, Mr. Parkinson wrote, "It has been a great privilege to go along with you in the development of what is now a nation-wide movement, covering 7,700,000 employes for over $12,000,000,000 of insurance protection."

N. Y. Banks Report Expansion in Loans

New York, July 2 (AP).—Expansion in loans and discounts, reflecting increased business demand for credit, was emphasized today in additional mid-year statements of leading New York City banks as an outstanding banking trend of the year.

With expansion in loans went a further decline in bank holdings of United States Government securities. Deposits of most banks were not greatly changed compared with March 31 figures.

Aluminum Expansion To Cost $26,000,000

Pittsburgh, July 2 (AP).—The Aluminum Co. of America concluded arrangements today for $30,000,000 of new financing, a large part of which will pay for a $26,000,000 expansion program announced early this year. Raising of the money has been arranged with the Mellon Securities Corporation of Pittsburgh.

The financing consists of $6,000,000 of bank loans maturing in one, two and three years, and $24,000,000 of 3¾ per cent 15-year debentures. The debentures, the company stated, will be sold privately to insurance companies. Approximately $19,000,000 of outstanding 5 per cent debentures maturing in 1952 will be retired out of the proceeds.

Forbush Halts Robbery Trial To Admit Guilt

Convict, Who Fled Lorton, to Face Court Today for Sentence.

The last of the "Black Face" gang remaining outside prison walls will be sentenced in District Court today, when Walter H. Forbush, 24-year-old member of the group, comes before Justice Jesse C. Adkins to receive sentences on three robbery charges. Forbush already is under a six-year sentence for a similar offense.

The gangster was being tried on a robbery charge yesterday when he suddenly interrupted the proceedings and announced he would plead guilty to three robbery charges if a fourth charge was dismissed. Justice Adkins thereupon directed the jury to return a guilty verdict in the pending case, and had the other pleas inserted on the official records.

Forbush and Martin Walsh escaped from the Lorton Reformatory April 22, when they seized a guard's car and broke through an iron chain that blocked the roadway at the prison. They then launched on a series of holdups that ended when Walsh was shot to death by Baltimore police and Forbush was captured. The robberies that Forbush admitted yesterday were all committed after he and Walsh escaped from Lorton.

With a six-year sentence already to be served and with additional sentences due today, Forbush, a slightly built youth with deep blue eyes, may be sent to Alcatraz for his brushes with the law. He was heavily guarded in court yesterday and was handcuffed to deputy marshals in court.

124 Indicted In D.C. Drive On Racketeers

5 Policemen Included in Blow at Gambling and Crime.

purge. They started last February and continued through June 22 with a series of carefully-planned raids.

The raiders first smashed their way into the elaborate headquarters of Abe Plisco, better known as William Dietz, in the Albee Building. Like a huge web, telephone wires from this place spread to small-time "bookie" establishments throughout the city, the police said.

In rapid succession and with little fanfare, 65 raids were made during subsequent months.

The main conspiracy indictments name Dietz, William H. Cahill, of Baltimore, said to be his partner; Charles Schweitzer, another alleged henchman, and nine employes—Benjamin Cohen, Percy May, Samuel W. Lawder, Cecil C. Hays, Raymond T. Reeve, Claude Irving (said to be a wire expert) Samuel B. Brown, Ray Lawson, Baltimore broadcaster, and Charles J. Bird.

Also included in the principal conspiracy bills was the name of Perry Bonner, well known Washington private detective. His connection with the gamblers was not specified, although investigators indicated he aided in the installation of telephone lines to and from the syndicate headquarters.

Warning by Brown.

High in his praise of the "fearless attitude" of the grand jury, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, warned Washington's gamblers that "this is an example of what can be expected in the future."

"Let this be a warning to racketeers and criminals who attempt to operate within the District limits," said Maj. Brown. "The grand jury's action will be followed up with the same kind of enforcement it took to secure evidence against those indicted."

Capt. Arthur Miller, of the Third Precinct, last night reported a statement made to him by Satterthwaite which may be the basis for exoneration of several of the policemen.

Miller said he met Satterthwaite on his beat yesterday morning a few hours before he reported, as instructed, to headquarters. Satterthwaite told him, the captain said, that he didn't know Dietz, alleged gambler named in the conspiracy indictment, and that the first time he saw him was when he rode in an automobile with Officers Embry and White from the Second Precinct, where he was then stationed, to Ninth street and New York avenue.

Officers Meet Dietz.

Embry and White had offered to drive Satterthwaite from the precinct to Police Court, and when he got in the car one of them said, according to Satterthwaite's story to Miller, "Dietz had called" and wanted to see them.

At the Ninth street intersection the officers met Dietz, who asked the officers to "lay off" an establishment at Thirteenth and L streets northwest, Capt. Miller said Satterthwaite told him.

Satterthwaite, Capt. Miller said, told him one of the officers ordered Dietz to "get out" of the precinct and later reported the incident to his superior, Lieut. Clarence H. Lutz. Lutz made a report to the vice squad and several days later the place was raided, according to the story told Capt. Miller.

A similar story was told by White to fellow policemen.

Racket Czars Named.

Next in importance among known racket czars to be named in the indictments was Carroll Peyton "Nubby" Nuckols and Nicholas Floratos, alias "Nick the Greek," both local bookmakers. Nuckols, police said, operated establishments in the 1000 block of Ninth street northwest and 1000 block of Fourteenth street northwest.

"Nubby's" places, police records show, were raided on numerous occasions. In many instances, those cited in the indictments were named either by their aliases or by certain numbers they used over the telephone.

The conspiracy bills also included the following:

Louis Waldron, Harry Schmidt, Harry A. Young, Moe Morganstein, Frederick J. Schofield, George Mason, Henry Peliconis, George W. Shettel, jr., Isaac Michelson, Walter W. Davis, Walter H. Dickhout and Wilbur Dorsey.

To Lieut. Truscott and Detective Sergt. Earl Hartman went credit for yesterday's wholesale return of indictments. Through their efforts, and with the help of Assistant United States Attorneys Beach and Roger Robb, evidence for presentation to the grand jury was collected.

Nesit Sounds Praise.

Praise for current efforts to rid the city of racketeering and crime came from members of the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

Said John Nesbit, chairman of the group's court and prosecution committee:

"I think a fine piece of work has been done. The Police Department and district attorney's office are to be congratulated. The citizens of Washington should feel encouraged at the protection they are receiving."

Vincent Saccardi, another member of the association, declared:

"I have no doubt that this will have a great influence on crime conditions in the city. Maj. Brown, District Attorney Garnett and members of their staffs are to be complimented. I also wish to add a word of praise for the fearless attitude of the grand jury."

During the series of recent gambling raids—planned in advance with maps, blueprints and floor plans of suspected establishments—investigators were frustrated by several mysterious "tip offs," it was pointed out yesterday.

On March 10 the raiders secretly prepared for several forays. More than 100 policemen were sent to Camp Simms, presumably for target practice. Even commanding officers were not aware of the plans.

Each officer was given sealed orders, to be opened at a signal. They were then to follow instructions by raiding designated places throughout the city.

But something went wrong. The gamblers were warned and only 11 of the 18 raids were successful.

Among those indicted yesterday and their charges were:

Senate Committee Rejects Business Privilege Tax.

to prepare the realty and personal property tax bills by September because of the land value levy.

Sponsors of the 2 per cent sales tax, which House members warned the committee will not pass the House, attempted to make it more palatable by referring to it as "a luxury tax."

The term arose from the fact that all food, clothing and medicines are to be exempt.

Sales Revenue Reduced.

District officials now estimate that it will raise $2,500,000 instead of the $5,000,000 forecast before the exemption was made to include all clothing.

The sales tax was adopted by the committee on a 6-to-3 vote coupled with the land-value tax sponsored by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Navada.

Those voting against it were Senators King, Capper (Republican), of Kansas, and Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana.

The motion was to substitute the two taxes for the business-privilege levy and the 20-cent increase on all real estate.

Senator Overton predicted that the bill, when it emerges from conference, will incorporate most of the House provisions. He said it was too late in the year for the Senate to try to revise the whole tax structure and it was for that reason he opposed any major changes in the House bill.

The $1 land-value tax, which has its origin in the single-tax theories of Henry George, was flatly rejected both by the House District Committee and the House when it was offered by Representative Bigelow (Democrat).

The Kennedy sub-committee insisted that it was too revolutionary a change to be adopted without considerable research and public discussion.

It was proposed to the Senate committee by Benjamin Marsh, of the People's Lobby, and immediately seized by McCarran as a solution to the business privilege tax problem. Until it was coupled with the sales tax, however, members of the committee did not take it seriously.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan estimated it will raise $4,800,000 during the next fiscal year.

Thus, the sale tax and land value levy together would raise enough money to meet the $7,000,000 deficit in the 1938 supply act.

$8,500,000 Eventually.

The net effect of the land value tax is to raise realty rates 30 per cent, according to Maj. Donovan, and to jump the rate on land from $1.50 to $2.50 on $100 valuation. The rate of tax on improvements would remain at $1.50.

Maj. Donovan explained, however, that the inheritance tax and the strengthening of the intangible tax law, both of which the Senate committee approved, would not begin to produce revenue for possibly a year.

They are expected, however, to raise between $1,300,000 and $1,550,000 a year eventually, thus raising the general revenue fund potentiality of the bill to more than $8,500,000.

The other House tax approved by the committee was the levy on motor vehicles according to weight. While expected to reach $1,500,000, this revenue will go into a special highway fund and will not cut down the general fund deficit.

The committee also approved provisions of the House bill transferring the Department of Vehicles and Traffic and the Police Traffic Bureau to the highway fund, along with all permits and fees from motor vehicles, and providing for the bonding of gasoline importers.

Restored to the bill was a title which authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to make advances to the District government during the next fiscal year.

Upon request of the Commissioners the committee attached another amendment authorizing a survey of the whole municipal tax problem by experts before Congress reconvenes in January. The committee reduced the authorization, however, from $50,000 to $20,000.

The title increasing rates on insurance from 1½ to 2 per cent was stricken from the bill because of the complaint of life insurance companies that it constituted a tax on thrift and the savings of the poor.

Oddly enough, this was the only provision of the House bill that was accepted by one group it affected—the fire underwriters.

The committee did not take a separate vote on the income tax althongh Senator King and Clapper were outspokenly in favor of it. Members of the Kennedy sub-committee apparently convinced the committee that the House could not be made to swallow it this session, at least.

Land Levy Raised; Home Tax Unaltered

Here's how the land-value tax voted by the Senate District Committee would affect a home-owner's tax payments:

He would continue to pay at the rate of $1.50 on $100 valuation on his home and other improvements.

He would pay $2.50, however, for each $100 in assessed value of his land.

Thus on home with combined value of $7,000, on which the tax is now $105 a year, the tax would be $75 on the home, if valued at $5,000, and $50 on the land, if assessed at $2,000. The net increase would be $20.

Performed on 'Dare,' Marriage Is Annulled

The marriage of Jack H. Farmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Farmer, of North Clarendon, Va., and Dorothy Mehlfelt, of northeast Washington, was ordered annulled in circuit court at Frederick, Md., yesterday on order of Associate Judge Arthur D. Willard.

In her petition for annulment, the wife declared that she and Farmer came to Frederick on May 14, 1936, and were married on a dare. They gave their ages as 21 and 18, she said, when in reality he was 19 and she was 16.

'I'm Tickled to Death It's Over,' Says Foreman Of Grand Jury That Returned 35 Indictments

Hearings Continued Nine Hours Daily During Session.

Albert W. Tucker, foreman of the grand jury which reported 35 indictments yesterday, before departing for a short vacation after the three-month inquisition into the gambling situation, last night remarked, "I am tickled to death its over. It's been one of the longest and hardest three months I ever put in."

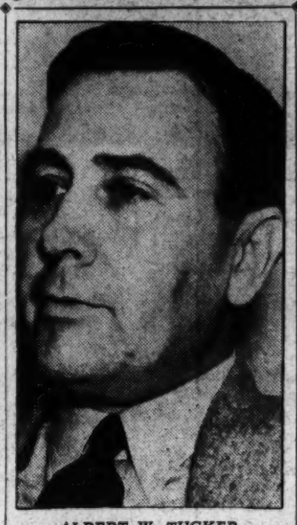
Stating that the indictments were the culmination of three months' labor on the part of the 19 men and 4 women on the grand jury, Tucker said "It was not with any degree of delight that we made the presentation of these indictments. This conspiracy touches too many people to be treated lightly by a member of the grand jury. The presentations were made only after the fullest and most careful consideration of the mass of evidence presented to us."

The caliber of the members of this particular grand jury, Tucker pointed out, was particularly high. Besides being above the average in intelligence the grand jurors exhibited a real interest in the investigation "and made a definite effort to understand the provisions of the judicial code."

Hampered by the physical setting in which the grand jury meets, and about which Tucker complained to the court, the members listened to testimony on the average of nine hours a day. "The little room in which the grand jury sits," Tucker said, "became so unbearably hot that several of the women members fainted during the course of our investigations. At my earnest protest to the court, proper accommodations will be provided for the sittings of the Grand Jury in the future."

The grand jury assumed office last April and was sworn in by Justice Peyton Gordon. It was dismissed by Justice Jesse C. Adkins late yesterday when its foreman reported that all the cases submitted to it had been disposed of. Another grand jury for the summer term of court will be sworn in next week.

Outside of the gaming indictments, which are expected to blast the local gambling fraternity into oblivion, the grand jury reported only minor presentations. The grand jury members have been listening for the last six weeks to accounts of gaming incidents, recounted by policemen and special agents.



ALBERT W. TUCKER.

Tucker stated that during the sitting of the grand jury the three white and one colored woman members had not shirked their part of the work. "They were most helpful," Mr. Tucker said, "and carried their full share of the burden."

This session of the grand jury, Mr. Tucker pointer out, has had the unusual distinction of being the first to investigate both gambling and a conspiracy to obstruct justice on the part of members of the police department. "The work has been very arduous," Mr. Tucker continued, "because the routine labors of any grand jury had to be performed by us, while the gambling and conspiracy investigations were being carried on."

Other grand jury members who participated in the three-month session are: Henry C. Althoff, 234 Madison street northwest; Francis A. Baker, 3018 Porter street northwest; Richard D. Barrett, 1721 Euclid street northwest; Chester F. Bernard, 5000 New Hampshire avenue northwest; Herman W. Bowen, East Clifton Terrace; Dwight E. Carleton, 30 Channing street northwest; Mrs. Paula Chase, 1713 Hobart street northwest; Mrs. Mary M. Edwards, 5333 Georgia avenue northwest; Harry Ehrlich, 448 Newton place northwest.

James P. Geagan, 915 Vernum street northwest; Frank Goodman, 2132 Thirty-second street southeast; Alexander F. Hagedorn, 1932 Biltmore street northwest; Mrs. Mary M. Harry, 4517 River road northwest; Robert T. Highfield, 5335 Forty-second street northwest; Benjamin S. Jackson, 1374 C street northeast; Mrs. Rosa P. Lewis, 1924 Fifteenth street northwest; George T. Longcope, 2141 Wyoming avenue northwest; Jennings H. Racey, 1438 E street southeast.

Inquest in Girls' Slaying Is Halted to Aid Capture

Inglewood, Calif., July 2 (AP).—District Attorney Buron Fitts cut short an inquest today into the criminal assault and strangulation of three small girls last Saturday because "too much testimony at this time might reveal facts that would enable the murderer to elude officers."

Haskell Wright and Ferdinand North, described as "key witnesses" who could identify the slayer, mingled with the crowd at the funeral of Madeline, 7, and Malba Everett, 9, sisters, today. They were sent on the possibility the killer might be drawn there. The third victim, Jeanette Stephens, 8, was buried yesterday.

Relief Projects Asked For N. D. Drought Area

Bismarck, N. Dak., July 2 (AP).—Gov. William Langer today telegraphed President Roosevelt a recommendation that farmers in nine drought - stricken northwestern North Dakota counties be made eligible for Federal work relief projects, and that the Federal Government designate the stricken counties as a drought area for special relief treatment.
